1930 OUTLOOK PROMISING FOR AMERICAN PROSPERITY

Secretary of the Treasury Mellon Has Confidence That There Will Be a Revival of Activity in the Spring—Predicts That, Following Some Seasonal Slackness in the Winter Months, Business Will Make a Steady Progress During the Coming Year—Secretary Lamont Says Economic Developments Indicate, For the Long Run, a Continuance of Prosperity and Progress.

WASHINGTON Dec. 31.—(AP)—Economic records of 1929 completed tonight revealed a year in which the national government through manifold agencies was drawn to more intimate association with and participation in the nation's industrial, commercial, and agricultural life activity than has ever been effected in any peace-time era.

Higher officials, who responded to the customary call for new year's statements on outlook for American prosperity in 1930, spoke in the light of 12 months of unusually close and persistent experience with developments of the business world, and found reason for basic optimism.

Secretary Mellon, prefacing his statement with a mention of the inevitable hazards of economic prophesy, declared that he could "see nothing in the present situation that is either menacing or warrants pessimism. "Some seasonal slackness in winter months might be possible in trade and commerce, he said, but hardly more than ordinary.

"I have every confidence that there will be a revival of activity in the spring and that during the coming year the country will make steady progress," he continued. "In the credit situation the trend of money rates is downward. There is plenty of credit available and we have reason to expect that the rates for new capital in building construction and expansion will be such as to facilitate the promotion and accomplishment of new undertakings. The government's finances are in sound condition which warrants the cut in taxes and the government, itself, is in a position to do its part in helping the country to meet and solve the problems which are ahead."

Secretary Lamont said the "nature of the economic development of the United States is such that one may confidently predict, for the long run, a continuance of prosperity and progress."

"American business in 1929 reached higher levels than ever before, notwithstanding recessions in some lines in later months," he added. "Measured by quantities, the output of our manufacturing industries broke all previous records. A new high level was established in mineral production. Employment in manufacturing industry and wage payments were both considerably greater in 1929 than in the preceding year. Exports of American manufactured goods reached the huge total of approximately $2,250,000,000 Broadly speaking, the business history of 1929 recorded the continuation of a movement which has been substantially unbroken for an exceptionally long period."

As to the farm future the agriculture department said the new year was beginning "with no depressing surpluses of food products to be worked off," although 1929 crops had been worth $85,000,000 more than those of 1928, and livestock sales in the same period $90,000,000 better than those of 1928.

The advance of the government toward association with vital economic national processes was most marked in 1929 in the agricultural field, for the year end finds a federal board, armed with $500,000,000 of federal funds, over-seeing the whole of national farm product marketing.

Aside from the direct grappling with farm problems, the government's contact with business undertaken in 1929 included also the partial shaping of a new tariff policy, still uncomplete and in bitter controversy as 1930 begins. Secretary Mellon's mention of tax reduction and credit matters referred indirectly, also, to the long and action-filled period of the old year when the federal reserve system faced the increasing credit strain arising from over mounting security speculation that culminated in October and November with stock exchange depression.

After the bursting of the speculative bubble came the significant step of the government into what was historically an unprecedented role. President Hoover, in the last months of 1929 summoned the leaders of finance, transportation, commerce, agriculture and labor from all parts of the country to Washington, and with their cooperation, laid down a program of expanding capital expenditure, of instituting construction acitivity, and of taking a series of considered steps with the announced purpose of averting economic depression. The year closed with this demonstration of governmental participation in national economic life still in progress.

PICTURE IDENTIFIED AS THAT OF BANK ROBBER

DAYTON, Ohio, Dec. 31—(AP)—Ralph Davenport, cashier of the Phillipsburg State Bank in that village, 10 miles north of here, who was held prisoner by five robbers last night while they unsuccessfully sought to have him open the vault of the depository late today was reported to have identified a picture of Robert Zwick, Cincinnati robber, as one of the quintet that held him captive.

Shortly after 10 o'clock last night two men accosted Davenport at his home and sought to have him open the safe vault. When he demurred, saying there was a time lock on the safe which would not work before 6 a. m., the robbers kept him prisoner at home all night. Three other members of the robber gang are believed to have stood guard in the village streets during the holdup attempt.

When Floyd Davenport, 14 year old son of the cashier, returned home early this morning, he saw a man standing guard with a machine gun in his hand. Frightened, the boy fled from the house before the man could fire at him. The boy advised a neighbor who sounded the village fire siren.

When the siren sounded the three robbers outside the Davenport home leaped into a car and fled, firing at the siren as they passed it. The two within the house, deserted by their companions, ran out and headed for the fields and wood at the edge of the village. Both groups were pursued and shots exchanged but all five escaped.

No one in the posse or in the robber gang was injured in the gun battle.

MONK NEUMAN IDENTIFIED AS SLAYER OF REINSTEIN

PHILADELPHIA, Dec. 31—(AP)—Moe (Monk) Neumna, Philadelphia underworld character, was identified today by George Billings, Boston hotel clerk, as the slayer of Samuel Reinstein, alleged leader of a white slave ring. Reinstein was shot in the Huntington hotel, Boston, September 8.

Neuman was identified in a hospital where he was taken Saturday night with three bullet wounds in his shoulder. He was shot from a speeding automobile as he stood on a street corner. His injuries are not serious. Boston police had sought him after Reinstein's death and when they learned he had been wounded here Inspector Timothy Donovan and Billings came to Philadelphia to attempt identification.

Neuman denied knowledge of Reinstein's death. According to the police version Reinstein was killed in retaliation for the slaying of Neuman's brother Eddie, several months ago in New York.

CHILD SAYS MOTHER SHOT PENN. STATE PATROLMAN

NEW CASTLE, Pa., Dec. 31.—(AP)—The statement attributed by police to a four-year old child that his mother shot Corporal Brady Paul, of the Pennsylvania state highway patrol, tonight spurred anew the search for the woman and two men who killed Corporal Paul and wounded Private Ernest Moore near here last Friday.

Police at Bellaire, Ohio, where the child was located, said he described accurately the attack on the officers. The child is Donnie Schroeder, son of Mrs. Irene Schroeder who was sought as a suspect in the killing hours before the boy was found at the home of relatives.

"My mamma shot one cop and he laid back in the car groaning," Francis Moran, chief of the Bellaire police, said the child stated. "Uncle Tom shot another one in the head. He shot right through the windshield," the boy said, according to Moran.

CLEVELAND GARMENT WORKEPS ARE TO STRIKE

CLEVELAND, Dec. 31.—(AP)—Strike of 8,000 Cleveland members of the International Ladies Garment Workers union, effective next Tuesday or Wednesday, was decided upon by members of the local unions here this afternoon at a special meeting.

An eleventh hour attempt of representatives of 12 manufacturers and leaders of the union to reach an agreement failed. Six of the large manufacturers of Cleveland refused to treat with the unions.

The unions had demanded a 40-hour week instead of the prevailing 44-hour week which would be the same as a 10 per cent wage increase. They also asked that the garment industry be centralized in Cleveland and that the manufacturers use their influence to prevent new concerns from starting in nearby towns. The third request was that manufacturers who let garment work out by contract be responsible for the pay of the workers employed by the contractor. Sweat shop conditions are not particularly noticeable in Cleveland and little mention was made of them in the strike demands.

72 Children Killed In Theatre Panic

PAISLEY, Scotland, Dec. 31. —(AP)—Seventy-two small boys and girls of this Scottish mill town were killed and four score others were injured in a panic which followed a cry of "fire" in a motion picture theatre here this afternoon.

The children came from working class families. They crowded into the 750 seat theatre singing and dancing and excited over the prospect of thus spending their "hog ma-nay," the traditional Scottish New Year's treat which outshines Christmas north of the Tweed.

But in a few minutes their gay laughter had given way to shrieks of terror and agony. A wisp of smoke had come out of the projection box of the theatre. Someone cried "Fire" and in an instant the hundreds of youngsters were scratching and scrambling over each other in an effort to get out of what proved to be a death trap.

The youngsters sprang from their seats and dashed toward one of the exits in blind terror. They scrambled over the chairs, fell in the aisles. They shrieked "mamma," or "daddy," or "sister." They fought and the younger and weaker went down under the older ones.

Up in the projection box the assistant operator had noticed smoke coming from the case containing the film which had just been rewound. He grabbed this case and tried to carry it out of the building without alarming the audience. But it was so hot that he could not get beyond the vestibule

There he called for the manager and between the two of them the box was thrown out a side door. Both suffered severe burns on their hands.

The theatre itself was not damaged and the only fire loss was the destruction of the box of film.

Throughout the night the infirmary was the setting for scenes of infinite pathos as grief-stricken parents tried to identify their children or waited through the dragging hours for word from the wards where the injured were being watched and treated.

Late this evening, however, only 37 injured children were still at the hospital. "They are mostly suffering from shock and all probably will be discharged tomorrow," explained one of the officials of the institution.

BOY SKATER DROWNED NEAR MIDDLETOWN

MIDDLETOWN Dec. 31.—(AP) — A boy was drowned and two others narrowly escaped a similar fate here this afternoon, when they broke through the ice, while skating on the Little river, a tributary of the Connecticut river.

Tonight, efforts were being made by rivermen to recover the body of Earl Scanlon, 11-year old son of Mr. and Mrs. William J. Scanlon, the victim of the drowning. He was skating with William Robert Edson, of West Haven and William Sneedy and Ernest Benoit, both of this city, in the rear of the Remington-Rand Typewriter company's plant when the ice broke.

Scanlon, Sheedy and Benoit, were thrown into the water. Sheedy and Benoit succeeded in pulling themselves out, but their companion was carried underneath the ice.

The drowning occurred about ten feet from shore. At this point the water is about 15 feet deep.

Besides his parents, the Scanlon boy is survived by a brother.

NEW YEAR'S WHOOPEE IN N. Y. STOCK EXCHANGE

Between 2 and 3 o'clock this afternoon a Negro military band played jazz tunes on a platform erected over two of the trading posts on the floor. Business proceeded as usual, but crowds in the gallery dumped miles of ticker tape and bushels of confetti on the heads of the traders, who now and then stopped work to yell and pin colored paper streamers on each others coat-tails.

The curb market also made merry with music and mummery, cheering the passage of the old trading year as the closing gong sounded.

Rift In The Ranks Of "Dry" Advocates

WASHINGTON, Dec. 31—(AP)—The mystery attending an exchange of correspondence between President Hoover and Senator Borah over prohibition enforcement challenged Washington curiosity tonight in the lack of any more outbreaks anent rigid prosecution of Volstead violations.

Both the president and the Idaho senator refrained from discussing their letters. The first public announcement concerning them was had at the white house yesterday, with word that Borah had written to Hoover.

Reports that the president answered today could not be confirmed. The white house personnel declined to say whether "the chief" had written or not, and the Idaho senator took the same position.

Mr. Hoover started the letter writing. To date the views exchanged have been carefully guarded, with reports as to the contents widely varied. Borah has maintained that the dry laws never would be enforced by the present personnel "from top to bottom," and it has been assumed that his written expressions to Hoover dealt with that topic. In view of the persistent silence today, rumor had it that the Idaho senator was recipient of another answer from the white house.

Meanwhile Senator Brookhart, of Iowa, another republican dry, reiterated his demand for the resignation of Secretary Mellon and announced he was going to have much to say when the senate met.

Members of the Hoover law enforcement commission began returning to the capital and the word went out that there still was work to be done on the preliminary report which has been promised. Word also was heard at the capitol that conflict exists within the commission over enforcement of prohibition. Another report said the commission had some complaints that politics had intervened in the enforcement machinery.

Senator Jones, of Washington, republican dry chieftain, made known that he would have another statement shortly. He has been conferring with the commission and has urged the drys to stand united behind the president.

There was a general belief at the capital that Senator Borah, in response to a written inquiry from the president, had submitted to the white house his proposals to remedy some of the evils of which be has complained.

With it becoming more and more apparent that prohibition is going to be a subject of discussion, if not of legislation, after congress reconvenes, Senator Jones suggested that the department of justice press for a decision by the supreme court of the question of the culpability of purchasers of liquor.

Without expressing his opinion of the bill of Senator Sheppard, democrat, Texas, to make buyers of liquor equally guilty with sellers, Senator Jones asked that the court pass on a section of the Volstead act which mentions purchaser of intoxicants.

Chairman Norris of the senate judiciary committee has announced he will appoint a sub-committee to consider the Sheppard bill, but none of the senate leaders believe there will be any opportunity for constitution of prohibition legislation until the tariff bill is out of the way.

SATISFIED WITH THE OUTLOOK FOR PROHIBITION

WASHINGTON, Dec. 31—(AP)—Avoiding participation in the current controversy over prohibition enforcement, the two leading organizations for and against the dry amendment through their representatives today took stock of their respective causes in the light of past experience and both found reason for optimism with the advent of 1930.

F. Scott McBride, general superintendent of the Anti-Saloon league, and Henry H. Curran, president of the Association Against the Prohibition Amendment, set forth conflicting viewpoints on the effects o fthe eighteenth amendment. Neither displayed any inclination to become parties to the present discusson of the liquor situation.

PAINTING VALUED AT ABOUT $150,000 STOLEN

LONDON, Dec. 31—(AP)—A Van Dyck painting, "Concert Des Anges," of a value estimated at £30,000 (about $150,000) was stolen during transit from Brussels to London. The loss was discovered on opening the packing case here tonight.

The painting had been sent by the Belgian owner, M. Bechbache to Godfrey Phillips, a West End art dealer. On opening the packing case at the latter's gallery it was found that the frame was intact but that the canvas, which measured 5 feet 6 inches by 4 feet 2 inches, had been completely cut out.

The outside of the case appeared completely normal. Police had no clue tonight of how the painting had been extracted.

A New Year's Prayer

O God, I ask for just enough of life
That I may smile, have wholesome joy all day
In everything I do, see by the way
As I go on my pathway; and though rife
May be the search for gold, and strife
Confront the world; O give me power to say
These are not mine.

I do not want too much of life, my share
Will be enough if I shall find
My body and my soul in harmony
With all the world, with love, mankind;
That I may be inspired in things I see

Henry T. Praed, Presbyterian Advance.

WHITE HOUSE RECEPTION TODAY OPEN TO ALL COMERS

This Morning President and Mrs. Hoover Will Receive Members of the Cabinet and the Diplomatic Corps—Later Will Come Officials of the Judiciary Branch, Members of Congress and Army and Navy Officers—Thousands of Private Citizens Will Call Upon the President and Mrs. Hoover in the Afternoon.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 31—(AP)—While hailing the advent of 1930 with revelry, Washington looked forward tonight to a quiet but ceremonious New Year's day with its high point the traditional white house reception to all comers—the first by Mr. and Mrs. Herbert Hoover.

The scene in the capital will shift overnight from one of merry-making like that in every other city its size to one of official observances. Foreign government's representatives will participate in the court uniforms worn only in the presence of rulers, and thousands will gather for at-homes which the highest officials will receive.

With the dawn of the new year, social activities for the younger officialdom, including debutante parties, give way for the rest of the winter before a number of state functions.

At the white house, still brightened by 16 lighted Christmas trees, the President and Mrs. Hoover spent this evening quietly. Tomorrow morning they will receive members of the cabinet and the diplomatic corps, greeting them in the Blue Room of the mansion as they pass in crimson and gold braid and decorations.

This will begin at 11 a. m. after which the chief justice and other officials of the judiciary branch of the government will be received. Later in the morning will come senators and representatives, to be followed by officials of the army and navy, officers down through the grade of lieutenant-colonel and commander being expected to attend. Just before luncheon the President and Mrs. Hoover will receive representatives of patriotic societies.

In accordance with custom, thousands of private citizens will enter the white house through the north portico to call upon the president and his wife during the afternoon.

President Hoover having decided not to follow a practice inaugurated by Calvin Coolidge in having a welcome to the year sounded by a bugler, Washington tonight awaited the reception to see what other changes he would make. This will be the first large reception of his administration on the regular program, those scheduled previously having been postponed because of the death of James W. Good, a member of his cabinet.

When the weather was good, from 4,000 to 7,000 persons have accepted the general invitation for the afternoon in the past. As many are expected tomorrow because the weather outlook has been forecast as favorable.

From the white house, the diplomats attending the reception will hasten home to change into formal morning clothes, for a breakfast at which Secretary Stimson will be host in the Pan-American Union building with its shrub-filled patio. The ladies will add to the color of this event, wearing brilliant afternoon gowns.

Official Washington will spend most of the day attending at-homes. Here also the gowns will be of the formal afternoon fashion, and men will wear cutaways.

President Hoover received personal greetings today from King Albert of Belgium, and King Victor Emmanuel of Italy. He sent cables to wish happiness to them and their people.

ONLY EIGHT LIQUOR RAIDS IN THE STATE YESTERDAY

HARTFORD, Dec. 31—(AP)—Eight liquor raids, only two of them successful, were staged in the state today by federal prohibition agents, according to reports which Stanton L Briggs, of Willimantic, acting prohibition administrator, had received from his agents up to a late hour tonight.

A raid on the Italian-American restaurant, 103 Bank street, New London, resulted in the seizure of a small quantity of wine and whiskey, and the arrest of the proprietor, Carlo Esposito, on the charge of illegal possession of liquor. This raid was conducted at about 10 p. m., with local police aiding federal agents.

In Bethany, an evening raid at the Airdrome inn, resulted in the discovery and confiscation of a quantity of gin, wine and whiskey. The proprietor here was also arrested. Raids during the day, two each in Guilford and New Britain, and one in Naugatuck and Branford, all aimed against roadhouses and places suspected of selling liquor, produced no evidence.

Federal agents were not engaged tonight in indiscriminately stopping cars to see if they contained liquor, Mr. Briggs said, but they were actively checking up on cars parked near roadhouses and other scenes of celebration. No confiscations of automobiles for carrying liquor had been reported to him up to midnight.

Downer delivered the toast to departed members. Several visiting brothers and their lady guests were greeted by Exalted Ruler and Mrs. Downer. The committee in charge was composed of: Everett E. Beckwith, chairman; Roland B. Jordan, William J. Grady, Lester M. Shea and Ralph B. Gates.

ANDOVER

Friday evening a large number of townspeople gathered in the town hall at a special town meeting to discuss the matter of closing the crossing west of the railroad station. Nearly all present voted to keep it open as it is, with the exception of two or three, and then the meeting was adjourned and voted so for as many as could to go and attend a hearing in Hartford, last Monday, at the state capitol, before the public utilities commission. Quite a large number from the town went and expressed their opinion in the same manner to keep the crossing as it is, open to the public. Decision was reserved in the matter.

Wisdom and love have never been able to form an effective alliance.

A HAPPY NEW YEAR TO ONE AND ALL

—MAYOR KING

The spirit of the season now abides with us—Good Will Toward Men prevails. Messages of cheer and tokens of esteem are exchanged, and upon this opportunity and occasion may I extend to all our peoples and friends this brief message of good will and sincere expression for a happy and prosperous year to come.

Whatever the past year brought into our lives is now written in the book of record and it is closed. Now we are upon the threshold of a new year ready to write another chapter. It behooves us, therefore, each and all of us to take stock and inventory of ourselves, to plan for the future.

In this situation let me urge you to make no little plans, to avoid any self-centered policy but rather to adopt a plan of fair dealing that will at once conserve your own interests and protect those of our city.

The policy of our city has been to help others at all times, to rejoice with them in periods of prosperity, to sympathize and aid in the hours of adverse circumstances. That policy will continue to guide us believing as we do, that as a city of individuals and dealing with others like us, we are interdependent upon each other and that only by a spirit of cooperation can we attain that share of prosperity, which is our rightful heritage.

I pray the year 1930 will be a year of happiness to all and that it will bring health and prosperity to you and our city and I sincerely wish you one and all a happy New Year.

JEWETT CITY

A CHURCH QUILT OF 1895 ON DISPLAY AT BAPT. MEETING

The New Year's eve celebration at the Baptist church, was something different from the program of other years, in that the roll call was omitted and other features introduced. The supper at 6:30 was in charge of Mrs. A. M. Brown, Mrs. E. M. Gray and Mrs. Edward Rainey. Tables were set for 152, the menu including roast fresh ham and apple sauce, mashed turnip, mashed potato, rolls, apple pie and cheese, county style and coffee.

Mrs. B. R. Gardner was in charge of the dining room, the hostesses being Mrs. Leonard McBroome, Miss Alice A. Brown, Mrs. B. R. Gardner, Mrs. John Davis, Mrs. E. A. Wilbur, Mrs. Elmer Tarbox, Mrs. E. B. Scates, Mrs. G. H. Prior, Mrs. A. M. Brown, Mrs. C. F. Gardner.

During the evening, Rev. Harold Camp, pastor of Calvary Baptist church, New Haven, addressed the assemblage, along the line of loyalty to the church and loyalty in daily life. Aims and ideals in which the men and women of today should be interested, were pointed out by the speaker as being matters for thought and prayer. Mrs. Emma Gilbert was at the piano with John MacLean as song leader, in the community singing. Interesting reports were given from the various activities and societies connected with the church.

As had been planned, the wonderful church quilt was on exhibition. There is nothing like it to be seen anywhere. Made by the late Mrs. Keziah Barber, it is regulation size, with 56 blocks, upon which are stitched by hand with red yarn, 560 names. The quilt was presented by the King's Daughters of the church, to Rev. and Mrs. John W. Payne as a Christmas gift in 1895. Mr. Payne being pastor of the church at that time. In the center, after a draft by G. H. Prior, a stitched picture of the church is to be seen. The names, include the list of pastors from 1840 to 1895, the current church officers, a long line of officiating deacons, also the names and officers of the several church functions. Besides these names, a large percent of whom have passed on, the milkmen of the town bought a block for themselves, where their names are wrought. During those times, the Montgomery girls, Mary and Margaret, of Philadelphia, were frequent visitors at Mrs. Barber's home. They became interested in the quilt, and brought names from the Quaker City, where one of the John Wannamaker churches contributed liberally to the manufacture of the gift. Besides all these, more than 400 local names appear. The quilt was loaned by W. H. Payne, the son of the former pastor.

BEAR, U. OF M. MASCOT, MAY BE WEATHER PROPHET

Miss Clara Richardson, a student at the University of Maine, at Orono, home for the holiday recess, is much interested in the newspaper articles appearing this week, which tell about Bananas, a big brown bear, the college mascot. The following Boston Post editorial tells about Mr. Bananas, whom Miss Richardson has seen many times since becoming a student at the university: Another Weather Prophet. Bananas, the bear mascot at the University of Maine, is the latest weather prophet to report and he is very optimistic about the approaching winter. Usually at this time of year, Bananas is curled up in that sleep that lasts until spring. But this year he has not started to hibernate and the students say that he sees a mild winter ahead. Most of us would like to believe this but there is always the possibility that Bananas may behave differently in captivity than he would if he were in the woods. Civilization does queer things to animals as well as to human beings. Until we know more about the effect of captivity upon hibernation, we are not going to figure that the coal in the cellar will last until April.

DANIELSON WELCOMES NEW YEAR WITH JOYOUS SPIRIT

(Special to The Bulletin)

DANIELSON, Dec. 31.—Danielson did its bit tonight to arrange for a glad welcome to the New Year for those who wished to make a merry evening of it. Two midnight dances and a midnight show were among the offerings. At the state armory there was a joyous gathering of young people, assembled to dance from 11 p. m. to 4 a. m. All of the special features that go to make such holiday occasions so interesting to those who like to dance were provided. Music was by Benny Leonard and his Broadway Clowns, this unusual attraction making a hit with the merry throng. There was another midnight dance at Bonneau's dance hall near Killingly Center. Polly and Her Pals played for the dancers gathered there from far and near.

Crowds flocked to the midnight show at the Orpheum theatre. Pictures and vaudeville featured this entertainment, which was accompanied by the usual New Year's eve diversions, all serving to give the audience a very happy time.

With all the merry-making, the crowds were well behaved, though not necessarily so sedate as they are normally. The attractions here brought attendance from various places in eastern Connecticut.

As to New Year's day itself, the forecast was tonight that it would be a very quiet holiday in Danielson, much after the manner of a winter Sunday. Many dinner parties and family reunions are planned and the theatre will offer a special holiday bill.

Orpheum theatre, special New Year's vaudeville show. Actors in person. Three shows—at 2:30, 6:00 and 8:00 p. m.—adv.

On New Year's day, Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Caouette of Maple street are to observe the 30th anniversary of their wedding. It will be a very happy occasion for them for, as a feature of the day, they will entertain their son, Chester, and his bride, Miss Eleanor M. Egan, of Wauregan, and members of the wedding party. Mr. and Mrs. Caouette were married here and ever since have been residents here and on the West Side.

Another chapter was written today in the case that developed at Attawaugan the past week end and which involved the alleged abuse of a female child of the age of 12 years by a trio of persons, two of them married men, one of them her father. Today John Parker, a man upwards of 60 years of age, was brought into the town court to face a similar charge. Probable cause was found for holding him for trial at the next term of the Windham county superior court having criminal jurisdiction and his bonds were fixed at $1,000. In default of this amount he was committed to the county jail at Brooklyn. The little girl involved in the affair was this after-

PUTNAM

TELEPHONE CO. SHOWS MARKED INCREASE IN 1929

(Special to The Bulletin)

PUTNAM, Dec. 31.—In reviewing the progress made in a business way in the city of Putnam for the year 1929, an observer cannot possibly overlook the strides of the Putnam, Danielson and Moosup divisions of the Southern New England Telephone offices, which have played a stellar role in the commercial activities of all three communities and have contributed highly to their accomplishments of the past year.

E. Leslie Beebe, manager of the three telephone exchanges in the northern part of the county, in an interview today said, "The telephone development during 1929 has been well above the average for the past ten years in the towns of Putnam, Danielson and Moosup, and the estimates for 1930 show a still better trend."

Putnam

In this city during the year 1929 over 80 telephones were added in the exchange. To accomplish this it was necessary to install approximately 510 telephones and remove about 430. New cables have been added in the business and residential centers of the city and the plan for 1930 includes further cable installation to care for the increasing demand for service.

Danielson Growth Phenomenal

Borough telephone communication in Danielson has shown a phenomenal growth in 1929, with an estimated gain of 55 stations expressed on Jan. 1, 1929, and an actual gain of 130 stations recorded at the close of the year. Plans for Danielson during 1930 include extensive cable changes in the center.

Moosup Shows Gain

"In Moosup," Mr. Beebe said, "records indicate that growth of the district during the year has exceeded expectations. A substantial gain in stations has been noted and many cable improvements have taken place there."

In concluding, Mr. Beebe said, "The revision of new methods introduced in toll operating practices has resulted in an increased use of this branch of the service."

BANKING IN PUTNAM SHOWS PROFITABLE YEAR

PUTNAM, Dec. 31.—This city, financially, is on the upward trend. Its banks have passed through another excellent year and the statements of three cashiers and treasurers that Putnam is financially sound is corroborated by statements of conditions of three banking houses at the close of business tonight which appear elsewhere in the columns of this paper.

J. Dyer Potter, treasurer of the Cargill Trust Co., said today that from his observations Putnam is resting on a sound base in a financial sense. Statements of the various banking institutions issued periodically indicate that business here is stable and constantly growing. The thrift faculties of the townspeople are outlined in the huge balances reported from time to time by the savings departments of the banks. Mr. Potter asserted yesterday that savings deposits in the Cargill Trust Co. have reached the highest point during 1929.

Arthur F. Hughes, treasurer of the Putnam Savings bank, said today that business conditions in this city from a banker's point of view are good and for the coming year Mr. Hughes said that records of the Putnam Savings bank enable one to express optimism concerning the city's financial welfare for 1930. The fact that only in a few instances was the bank forced to act in mortgage foreclosures is but another factor poin dition of the city. Smith of the Ci

STILL PUSHING AHEAD

Every year must be judged as a whole and not as a part. While uncertainty has prevailed for a number of weeks, 1929 throughout the 12 months has been a year of prosperity and growth. According to the business, building and banking survey which has been made by The Bulletin in New London and Windham counties, the year nearly equals 1928 in the aggregate and, while there has been a temporary let-up, the outlook is by no means discouraging. On the other hand, the new year is anticipated with a feeling of confidence that new and better business, important developments and certain assured industrial growth are ahead. There is an attitude of optimism displayed by the civic organizations and a belief that full-time operations in manufacturing plants and the construction projects which are planned will bring about a quick change from the present dullness.

Steady and persistent growth has been the record of eastern Connecticut for many years. In a recent address before the New England council, W. J. Barrett, director of service on manufactures, of the Metropolitan Insurance company, stated that "our survey of research in New England shows that management skill of the highest type exists. New England has skilled and steady labor for industry. Its markets are sought by outsiders. Its transportation is good. Its power supply is almost unlimited. It has the available factory buildings. As for recreational resources it has the seashore, a coast and mountain regions that rival anything in the country."

What he says of New England applies particularly to eastern Connecticut. We have the skilled management, the skilled labor, the transportation facilities and the power supply, and we are advantageously situated between two large eastern cities. There is need of fostering new local enterprises and developing existing ones. The importance of building from within is vital for stability and sustained growth.

Eastern Connecticut, as a whole, is pushing ahead. It has overcome some hard blows industrially but its advantages have gained recognition and replacements have been most encouraging. Banking activity shows an appreciation of the facilities, the annual turnover in the commercial banks, the substantial gains in the savings banks and the increase in the postoffice business being important barometers of the year's conditions.

THE COURTS AND CRIME

Chicago has a crime commission which has been engaged in running down and bringing to light conditions which contribute to the criminal activity in that community. As might be expected it has not only found what it believes to be reasons for criticizing the courts in connection therewith but it has deemed it wise to make public certain opinions in connection therewith, including the criticism of the short hours devoted to trial work by the judges and to the hearing of motions.

The commission is of the opinion that if the courts devoted more time to speeding up cases there would be better results, better respect for the courts and a greater regard for the laws. It is, of course, an old story that crime is greatly encouraged by the delays that occur in bringing cases to trial and the repeated postponements that permit witnesses to die or disappear. Judges of the criminal court in Chicago have, however, taken the view that the commission is trying to incite public prejudice against the courts and injure respect for them.

No doubt the commission will express itself in quite the opposite direction when it accepts the invitation of the judges to meet with them for a discussion of the commission's criticisms. That will give the officers and directors thereof a chance to indicate to the judges that if there is any prejudice against the courts it is created by the manner in which the courts are conducted rather than by the criticisms of court conditions. The commission doesn't want to injure the courts in the mind of the public; its object is to make the courts more effective, and it believes that it lies within the power of the courts to do much for their own good.

It is fully understood that much of the work of judges is done off the bench but when it is shown by the crime commission that during the month of November the average work-day on the bench was only three and a half hours there appears to be good reason for criticism and something which the judges will have difficulty in explaining to the satisfaction of the commission, which must have given more than snap judgment to the judicial duties which are performed by the judges.

THE NEW YEAR'S RECEPTION

For many years it has been the custom of the president to hold receptions at the white house on New Year's day, when thousands of people file past and shake hands with the chief executive.

It is an occasion to which visitors in Washington look forward, it is a time when people stand in line for a long period in order to gain the distinction of extending personal greetings to the president and in turn receiving the same from him. There's no mistaking the fact that there's a thrill involved, an elation which one really never gets over and a privilege which furnishes the basis for many an interesting story.

Those who meet the president under such circumstances have little idea what a strain is involved in shaking so many hands. However anxious a president may be to gratify the desires of the multitude to shake hands with him, there comes a time when his physical condition shows the effect of it and forces him to desist. It is because of this and the advice of his physician that President Hoover has been forced to give up his daily and weekly reception to visitors. It not only saps his strength but it is a serious handicap to his work, as anyone who knows what a president has to do can readily appreciate.

But even though he has found it necessary to stop his daily and, later, his weekly periods of handshaking, President Hoover is not willing to give up the New Year reception. He is unwilling to lose that touch with the general public and those who find it possible to get into the white house today during the reception hours will have a chance to grasp the hand of the president and extend the season's greetings. Though it is a fine American custom, it carries with it a real arm ache.

FRANCE'S VIEWS

In setting forth its views on the coming conference in London, France has given the other countries that will participate therein something to think about. It cannot be said, however, that it has simplified the work of the conference. Rather does it appear to have taken a stand which will increase the difficulties.

There have been indications that France would not be disposed to join readily with the others in the carrying out of certain of the limitations which have been under discussion. It has indicated its opposition to the idea of abolishing submarines and it has somehow gotten the impression, as the result of the discussions which have taken place between the United States and Great Britain, that it was to be confronted with a proposition which had been agreed upon by these two countries and it was to be asked to sign on the dotted line.

In setting forth its views on the naval problem it calls for disarmament under the plans of the league of nations. It urges this because it does not think that the Kellogg pact is sufficient to prevent war. Perhaps it will be asked at the conference why there is need for basing any limitation at the London conference upon either the league of nations or the Kellogg pact. This is not the first step that has been taken in behalf of naval limitation.

At the time of the Washington conference the naval agreement wasn't based upon the league of nations or any other treaty. It was made to stand by itself. It has accomplished all that was expected of it, and now there is no good reason why further limitation cannot be made to stand on its own feet.

France must realize that the idea of having the proposed limitation connected up with the league of nations isn't going to be pleasing to the United States. It is the one thing in which the United States is not interested. We are not urging that the league of nations should take the place of the warships. We are desirous that there should be a departure from past practices of huge expenditures in naval construction and from such experience as has been had in that direction there is reason for belief that certain of the other nations take a similar view.

EDITORIAL NOTES

It is one thing to make good resolutions and it is another thing to keep them.

Do the 1930 markers for your car match the furnishings, or do they conflict with your new sport suit?

Do you recall those days when they used to do such a thing as make New Year calls?

Someone is sure to point out that the total of the figures in 1930 is 13.

The man on the corner says: Remember that the New Year depends a lot on you.

Explorers come and go but most of them are able to find new land somewhere around the south pole.

Have you furnished the state commission your plan for the celebration of Connecticut's tercentenary?

It is never possible to overlook the fact that along with the bells which ring in the new year there also come the bills.

From the amount of money France is to spend on border defenses, it isn't ready to agree on the elimination of fortifications.

When France votes $50,000,000 for new warships it doesn't intend to be caught napping by the limitation conference at London.

Even if a professor claims there are 396,000,000 ways of spelling "circumference" there is none of them better than the correct way.

When the claim is made that a city is free of saloons, it cannot by any stretch of the imagination be taken to mean that it harbors no blind tigers.

The distressing loss of life at Paisley, Scotland, demonstrates once more the frightful effects of panic when theatre fires break out. Fire in such cases invariably is responsible for far less deaths than the mad ungovernable rush.

THE NEW GIRL

The advent of a new girl in the office always stirred a ripple, but Minnie Pansy Martin created an actual wave.

Minnie Pansy was anything but the modern girl type. She was little. She was baby-faced. Her fair hair was long. Demurely she had hung her coat and hat in the locker room, and shyly she had taken her seat, armed with a very clean notebook and very sharply pointed pencils.

The buzzer sounded. Minnie Pansy sat still.

"That will be for you, Miss Martin," said Miss Polk. "You are to take Mr. Barton's letters. His regular secretary is on a vacation." The crisp tones of Miss Polk's everyday voice fell into soft rhythms as she spoke to Minnie Pansy, and she smiled at the girl reassuringly.

Mr. Barton almost rose to his feet as Minnie Pansy glided into his office. Why, the shy, flowerlike creature might be his own baby daughter; what a pity for a little feminine morsel like this to be tossed out in the hurly-burly of business! However—

"Now, don't be uneasy," said Mr. Barton. "I shall speak slowly so that you may have no trouble. Ready?" Mr. Barton began dictating:

"An eminent physicist thinks that he has discovered the emission of a special form of radiation by the human body, but this is an unproved hypothesis. We shall here examine some more precise phenomena—the effects determined in the human body from the continuous current to the very high frequency currents of wireless. The needle of the milli—curie—"

Mr. Barton went on and on. As Minnie Pansy's pencil flew her sweet expression never changed.

"Gosh," said Mr. Barton to himself," "this girl is a wonder. These technical words haven't fazed her."

"Why, thank you so much," replied Minnie Pansy in her delicate little voice, "I think I shall be able to manage it. It would be all right if I go out for lunch now, and finish when I come back?" The sweet appealing little thing!

Fat Lilly Morse, returning from her lunch a few minutes later, entertained the office with her impression of Minnie Pansy's boy friend. She sighed gustily as, with an exaggerated heave, she subsided into her chair and shoved a sheet of paper into her machine.

And then—Minnie Pansy never came back. She never transcribed Mr. Barton's radio address.

"I bet she's married," said Myrtle Jones enviously.

"And to that fellow Lilly saw her with," added May Dearing. Miss Polk looked up the notebook which had been left by the girl. And over her features spread a shocked and startled expression. She began to turn red. Suddenly she shot into the little cubicle over which reigned Mrs. Giles.

"Read this to yourself," gasped Miss Polk. In perfectly clear shorthand Minnie Pansy had taken dictation; and, obviously, had filled in with her own untrammeled efforts when her training in stenographic symbols failed her:

"An eminent—who does this bozo think I am, Dan Webster's little girl—thinks that he has discovered—wonder whether Roddy will be waiting for me at 12.30 He better be. —We shall here examine—his tie wouldn't be so bad if—will this gink never stop—the needle of the—I think he's making up these words as he goes along—"

And the last four pages of Minnie Pansy's notes were an indecipherable scrawl.

"I can see why you wanted me to read it silently," said Mrs. Giles, "but is it quite fair to keep it from the girls?"

"No," admitted Miss Polk. "Not fair, and we'll tell 'em. But—Minnie Pansy!"—Chicago News.

A Washington Bystander

By KIRKE L. SIMPSON

Associated Press Staff Writer

WASHINGTON, Dec. 31—When Mrs. Mable Walker Willebrandt stepped out of government service, she by no means forgot that little group of government lady lawyers with which she once foregathered.

On the contrary, Mrs. Willebrandt used her political wits effectively to aid her friends. And among them is Miss Annabel Matthews, of Gainsville, Ga., who was a member of the board of tax appeals, a $10,000 job for at least a day.

Miss Matthews was nominated by the president and confirmed by the senate with a rush. But the next day, on demand of Couzens, of Michigan, the nomination went back to committee for consideration.

An Expert

Not that Couzens had anything against Miss Mathews. She has been in the internal revenue bureau since the first income tax measure passed 15 years ago. She even studied law o' nights and is a member of the bar in Washington and Georgia. She is a recognized expert, perhaps the government's leading expert, on the intricate questions with which the tax appeal board deals.

But four years ago, about the time Couzens himself was doing successful battle with the treasury over his Ford stock tax matters, the senate decreed against naming revenue bureau employes to the appeal board as a matter of policy.

The resolution said such employes ought to be at least two years out of the bureau before being eligible for appointment to the appeal board.

Otherwise, said Senator Glass, of Virginia, former treasury head and author of the policy resolution, they would be merely passing on their own work in the bureau.

Miss Matthews had not been out of the bureau at all. She's still very much there, one of the most important cogs of the machine. She was confirmed for promotion to the board with no word of this senate policy resolution cropping up. Why?

Friend To The Rescue

Now one person saw that danger to Miss Matthews' hopes when the idea of appointing her to the board first popped up. That person was Mrs. Willebrandt. She went to Senator Norris, chairman of the judiciary committee, about it.

He got in touch with Glass, as later did the white house direct. Possibly Mrs. Willebrandt also suggested that course. At any rate, it was established in advance that both Glass and Norris were willing to waive the policy expression in Miss Matthews' favor because of her admitted special qualifications.

That was good political strategy; but it overlooked one vital matter. Senator Couzens keeps an eye on revenue bureau matters all the time. He has been at it for years.

And Jim Couzens is slow to change his mind. He has fixed ideas about the need for protecting taxpayers from dangers of government bureaucracy.

So Miss Matthews missed out on a seemingly well deserved Christmas present. Yet if what was said of her in the senate is any criterion, she'll get the job eventually.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

1929's Lynching Record

Mr. Editor: I send you the following information concerning lynchings for the year 1929. I find, according to the records compiled in the department of records and research of the Tuskegee institute, there were ten persons lynched in 1929. This is one less than the number 11 for 1928, six less than the number 16 for 1927, nine less than the number 19 for 1926 and seven less than the number 17 for 1925. Six of the persons lynched were taken from the hands of the law, five from jail and one from officers of the law outside of jails.

There were 27 instances in which officers ofthe law prevented lynchings. Three of these were in northern states and 24 in southern states. In 24 of the cases the prisoners were removed or the guards augmented or other precautions taken. In three other instances, armed force was used to repel the would be lynchers. Twelve white men, twenty Negro men and two Negro women were thus saved from death at the hands of mobs.

Of the 10 persons lynched, seven were Negroes and three were whites. The offenses charged were: Rape, three; writing insulting notes, two; murder, one; wounding man in altercation, one; wounding officers of the law, two; charge not reported, one.

The states in which lynchings occurred and the number in each state are as follows: Florida, four; Kentucky, one; Mississippi, one; Tennessee, one; Texas, three.

YOUR HEALTH

Medical Costs and Keeping Well

By F. L. Rector, M. D., Chicago.
(From Gorgas Memorial Institute)

Much is heard these days about the high cost of medical care, and the onus for this situation is frequently laid at the physician's door. But is he to blame?

It is a matter of statistical record that more people are being hospitalized when sick. Many of these people formerly remained at home when ill, and thus saved the hospital, laboratory and nursing bills that now face them when sickness falls. The physician's charges amount to approximately one-fourth or twenty-five per cent. of the cost of being ill, and have not increased in anything like the proportion to other costs of sickness.

To offset this growing tendency to increased costs of being sick, physicians and public health workers are teaching people how to keep well. Every individual has it largely within his own power to determine the state of his health. Unfortunately the average person never thinks of his health until he is disabled in some respect. Then he is very anxious to recover that which he has lost.

Your physician can render you far more valuable service in keeping you well than he can in restoring you to health after you become disabled. If given the opportunity, he will make a health examination and tell you about your true condition. He can determine, often long before you are aware of it, the onset of some disability that may in time incapacitate you. The cost of such an examination will be but a small part of the cost of an illness requiring prolonged treatment, or even surgical operation, and the time saved to your regular prolonged treatment, or even surgical operation, and the time saved to your regular occupation is also of importance. The best part for you is the fact that no time need be lost from your daily work beyond an hour or so required to have the doctor look you over. Think also of the saving in worry and inconvenience to your friends and relatives by the avoidance of illness and the increased happiness that comes from a knowledge that there is no known illness in your family.

By following out this suggestion at least annually, you need not worry about the cost of being sick, for your chances of less sickness and a longer life will be greatly improved. You can laugh at medical costs and continue at your normal mental and physical capacity.

During the year of 1929, 140 miles of construction and reconstruction work was completed upon 65 different sections of the Connecticut highway system, according to an informal report upon the year's progress of the state highway department issued Tuesday by Highway Commissioner John A. Macdonald. With the exception of five grading and gravel projects, all of the work completed during the year consisted of new paving of various types laid both on trunk-line and state aid highways.

About 65 miles of highway work, in addition to the above, is now under contract and will be carried over into the year of 1930.

Besides its highway construction and reconstruction projects, the highway department completed the erection of 18 new bridges and now has under contract 14 other spans, including the huge 726-foot bridge over the Housatonic at Cornwall and the Southport cut-off bridge which will carry the Boston Post road over the New Haven railroad tracks instead of under them as at present.

Of the major projects finished by the department during the year, the largest and unquestionably the greatest highway achievement of 1929 was the laying of slightly more than 6 1-2 miles of reinforced concrete over Avon mountain. A similar job was the five mile concrete paving over Plymouth hill between Thomaston and Bristol.

The program of state aid construction, ending its first biennial period under the million dollar annual appropriation act of 1927 in October, was the largest in the history of the state. Approximately 150 miles of town road were built in 82 towns, in 75 of which agreements were made to construct only those sections of road which would complete or connect existing highways and thus become valued parts of the general state network.

During the year, the highway beautification plans of the Landscaping division were expanded and the work conducted with greater activity than ever before. Thousands of new trees, plants and shrubs were planted along the highway rights of way, and all divisions of the department were required to conserve all trees, shrubs, vines, bulbs, ferns and wild flowers and grasses except where they might interfere with motorists' vision and road drainage. Many of the new trees were cultivated in the department's storage yard and large numbers of others which for safety's sake had to be removed were transplanted to other sections of the state.

Forest and wild life conservation was added by the customary clean-up of road shoulders, eliminating dry brush, dead leaves, etc., to prevent fires; destroying tent caterpillar nests to the practical elimination of this pest; and leaving untouched such shrubs and plants as are used for food by game, plumage and song birds.

Snow removal was completed on both ends of the year with greater dispatch than was previously possible. On the occasion of each snowfall, all highways were cleared for traffic in both directions by the following morning.

STATE FARM INCOME INCREASED NEARLY $4,000,000

Hail and drought caused heavy crop losses to individual farmers but the Connecticut farm income increased nearly $4,000,000 over the 1928 total, according to a statement prepared by Commissioner of Agriculture S. McLean Buckingham. Commissioner Buckingham's summary clearly shows that Connecticut farmers have had their ups and downs during the past year, but on the whole the gross returns have been practically equal to the average for the past five years.

Commissioner Buckingham says in part: "Connecticut agriculture as a whole has witnessed an average year. The farm income during 1929, according to the best available estimate, was on a par with the average of the past five years, totaling approximately $65,000,000. This amount is reached after deducting $10,000,000 worth of hay, corn and oats which is fed to farm animals and credited to the income from milk and poultry."

DEFECTIVE PILOT LIGHT CAUSED HEATER EXPLOSION

A defective pilot light that became clogged, causing gases to collect, is said to have been responsible for an explosion in an oil heater at the home of Abraham Curland, No. 50 Broad street, about 9:15 o'clock Tuesday morning. The explosion was so severe that it blew off the dome, over two feet in diameter, and lodged it between two steampipes; also forcing off the firepot and ashpot doors, throwing them some distance away. The cellar floor was also strewn with asbestos ripped off from the front and one side of the boiler.

Alarmed over the smoke and gas that was collecting in the cellar, the family called the fire department, but the services of the firemen were not needed as there was no fire. Chief Henry R. Taft, Engine No. 3 and Squad A responded.

According to the police Wadrowitz, who was arrested here by Officer Clifford Crary last Friday, drove his car without having secured an operator's license for practically the entire year.

1930 PROFFERS HAPPINESS AND PROSPERITY FOR ALL —MAYOR ROBBINS

Mankind is ever peering into the future with hopeful anticipation. Like true pioneers we are anxious to prospect the morrow for the riches which lie beyond the horizon. The adventure and expectancy to be experienced by exploring that vast realm which we cannot compass, is fascinating beyond measure. The dawn of a New Year appeals to everyone as the beginning of a new era of promise. It signifies a period of time—the essential medium for all ventures. It implies multiple opportunities and provides ample occasion for constructive action whereby dreams materialize.

Endless opportunities for municipal improvement are concealed in the coming year. They are hidden treasure to be found and made to produce for our welfare. The condition that a majority of citizens must be successful in finding this treasure trove in order that the city may benefit therefrom, is significant only in its relation to the prevailing optimism. Faith does not falter in a community which has survived so many winters. The past leaves much for which to be thankful. The future attracts us forward with bright assurance. The new year tenders that which we strive to accomplish.

Not even the natural resources in and about Norwich are yet fully exploited. There is opportunity for the daring and the ambitious. Recent inventions are creating fresh possibilities for extending businesses of all kinds.

The dredging of the Thames river channel will inevitably prove of great commercial benefit locally and further deepening of this splendid waterway is well worth attaining. Results which may follow from this beginning are unlimited. The city of Albany, New York, has built up a tremendous tonnage of shipping during the past few years and is actively engaged expanding docking facilities as a bid for Canada's huge exports in grain. If the Canadian Grand Trunk Railway Co. decides to rebuild and double track the Central Vermont line, as contemplated, the likelihood of northern products being shipped from here by water is no more improbable than the same subject seemed at Albany a short time ago. Our relative nearness to an excellent harbor and coming seaport is more advantageous than that of several cities already leading in the handling of the world's commerce.

The aeroplane is fast becoming an important means of conveyance. We occupy a favorable half-way position in the air line between New York and Boston. If we are to reap the profit following the development of flying we must make it feasible for this business to land at Norwich.

We are merely well started upon the improvement of our city streets. Our chief thoroughfares, and busiest tributaries, are generally well paved but in course of consistent progress for the coming year, we should take account of the points of congestion thereon and adopt measures for relief.

The new Inn approaches completion. This enterprise will bring pleasing results and has many potentialities for the good of the community.

So we may probe the New Year with that great confidence born of a sturdy, successful past. Nineteen hundred thirty proffers good business, prosperity, and happiness for all.

BURGESS BEDTIME STORY

Happy Jack Is Taken Care of

Persistence seldom knows defeat;
You'll find it very hard to beat.
—Farmer Brown's Boy.

Farmer Brown's Boy was wondering how Happy Jack the Gray Squirrel had come out in his fight with Spooky the Screech Owl for the possession of a house which Farmer Brown's Boy had made and put up especially for Happy Jack. Late the afternoon before Happy Jack had had possession of the house, while Spooky sat disconsolately outside. Farmer Brown's Boy wondered what had happened in the night. He knew that Happy Jack had had the advantage during daylight, but that Spooky would have had the advantage in the dark.

Farmer Brown's Boy went out to the foot of the maple tree and looked up. He could see the doorway to the house, but there was no one in that door. He picked up some pebbles and threw so as to hit the house. He knew that if Happy Jack were in there, he would promptly come out. Happy Jack didn't come out. Instead, a very sleepy looking face appeared in the doorway. It was Spooky. Farmer Brown's Boy chuckled.

"So you win after all. Well, if you want that house so much, I guess we shall have to let you have it. I'll build another for Happy Jack and then both will be satisfied," said he.

So that very day Farmer Brown's Boy built another house exactly like the one that Spooky had taken possession of. This he put up in another tree over nearer the Old Orchard and waited to see if Happy Jack would find it. Happy Jack did find it. He knew that that house was meant for him, just as he knew that the other was meant for him. He inspected it thoroughly, inside and out. Then he barked happily and forthwith began to carry in dry leaves as fast as he could. He meant to have possession of that house before any one could get ahead of him. My, how Happy Jack did work! You know there isn't a lazy bone in Happy Jack's whole body. By the time jolly, round, red Mr. Sun began to get ready to go to bed behind the Purple Hills, Happy Jack had a snug, comfortable bed all made inside that house. He had quite forgotten his disappointment in losing the other house—the one that Spooky had driven him out of. Little people of the Green Forest and the quickly forgot their disappointments Green Meadows are that way. They and their troubles.

Just after the Black Shadows took possession of the land, Spooky the Screech Owl came out of the house. It was hunting time and he was hungry. He flew straight over the Old Orchard and there he hunted for mice. He visited the edge of the Green Forest. He even went over to the barnyard. He quite forgot everything but his appetite and the need of catching enough mice to satisfy it.

It was just at the break of day, as Spooky was preparing to go home, that he discovered the new house that Farmer Brown's Boy had put up for Happy Jack. Spooky blinked those big eyes of his two or three times. That house was so exactly like the one that he had that he almost suspected a trick. He almost suspected that that house had been moved. But when he flew over to this new house and discovered that inside was a bed of dry leaves, and heard the angry scolding of Happy Jack Squirrel, who had just awakened, he knew that this must be another house.

"What are you scolding about? I don't want your house," snapped Spooky. "I can't use but one house, and that I've got."

"Then go away and stay away!" growled Happy Jack. "If you won't bother me, I won't bother you."

"Fair enough," replied Spooky. And, spreading his wings, flew over to his own house and prepared to sleep away the long day.

"Fair enough," replied Spooky.

A well-dressed youth who described himself as Thomas Scott, 21, son of Sir Thomas Scott, wealthy Canadian coal dealer, walked into a police station in New York and said he wanted to give himself up for a burglary committed in Woodstock, Ontario, on April 11.

THE NEW YEAR WILL STRIVE MIGHTILY TO CORRECT FAULTS OF OLD MAN 1929

By BRIAN BELL

(Associated Press Sports Writer)

NEW YORK, Dec. 31.—(AP)—As the New Year slips quietly into the sports picture, he throws before him one of the longest shadows any year has issued on the sport screen. The 1930 edition has much to do in untangling some of the chaos left by 1929 and writing a ticket on his account.

Fortunately for 1930, he will be [illegible] before the hardier tasks con-weight boxing champion, decide major front him. No infant or juvenile could be expected to dig up a heavy-league pennant races in baseball, separate the golf goats from the sheep and award the Walker and Ryder cups, do the same for tennis and the Davis cup, see what can be done about Sir Thomas Lipton's perennial quest of yachting highest honors, repel a foreign polo invasion and give all the football teams of the country another chance.

SHARKEY LEADING HEAVY

The heavyweight boxing tracas may continue to be a free for all for some time with Jack Sharkey, the modest violet from Boston way, ready to defend the "American First" doctrine with his fists and voice, man mountains from other shores are flocking to the United States until standing room may be at a premium. Some time next summer the issue should be decided with Sharkey and some unidentified opponent fighting it out.

New Year gold sun will shine brightly on Robert Tyre Jones, Jr., among the amateurs and professionals, in spite of the fact that the Atlanta lawyer is not the amateur champion. Among the professionals, Horton Smith, a promising youngster a year ago, is no worse now and he will be hard to stop on any fairway or green. The veterans, too, Hagen, Farrell, Sarazen and the others will not go down without a struggle. "Jimmy" Johnston, the St. Paul sportsman perhaps faces the hardest year of all golfers. He will have to defend his amateur champion against the best equipped challenger in the world.

BASEBALL BIGGER AND BETTER

Baseball will be bigger and better. The 1930 schedule will take the national game out of the class of autumn sports, confining it to spring and summer with a start in April and close in September. The Athletics and Cubs are in and the burden of proof in getting them out will be on 14 other clubs. At a great distance and decidedly a bird's eye view of the prospects, the A's seem to have a right to expect the most vigorous opposition from the Yankees, a power team, and Cleveland, a slick outfit in the making, lacking only coordination to make it dangerous.

In the National league, the Pittsburgh Pirates are apt to harass the Cubs and the Phillies must not be taken lightly. This is not a typographical error. The Phillies may be a thorn in the side of the National league clubs accustomed to sit in the seats of the mighty. they can hit and are not the worst fielders in the league. If they get good pitching, a big "if", they should be contenders. Baseball is a queer game. The Boston Braves did it. The Phillies might repeat 16 years later.

TENNIS YOUTHS STRONG

Mrs. Frederick S. Moody probably will dominate women's tennis for she is just as good a player as was Helen Wills. The contest among men promises to be more interesting. The up and coming youngsters may make it hard for Bill Tilden and his colleagues. Big Bill has definitely removed himself from international team competition but will take his racquet in hand in other quests, the gain to tennis marking a loss to the stage.

Sir Thomas Lipton will not have to battle the law of averages as well as an American yacht when he bids for the America's cup. The Irish peer is overdue, after a ten year interval.

Tommy Hitchcock may be safely entrusted with the task of assembling a group of hard riding fellows to repel the British polo invasion.

GRIDDERS AFTER THREE GIANTS

Notre Dame, Purdue and Pittsburgh will be among the chief targets for the football opposition after showing the way in 1929. Rockne's outfit will have a flock of experienced backfield men to carry on while Pittsburgh must seek some replacements. Purdue has lost its coach as well as a number of stars. Army has a flock of promising plebes coming up to the varsity and no team ever needed them more.

SENIORS MEET HELLERS AT Y TODAY

Probable line-ups:

Norwich	Heller Bros.
Demarest, lf	lf, Sam
Pingree, rf	rf, Max
Harris, c	c, Abe
Eccleston, lg	lg, Hy
Grebe, rg	rg, Harry

When the local "Y" team meets the Heller Bros. five this (New Year's) afternoon on the local court, fans in eastern Connecticut will be treated to one of the finest basketball attractions in New England.

Norwich, after losing their first league game to Bridgeport last Saturday night, are now in second place in the league standing. Coach Demarest's men have shown wonderful improvement in their teamwork since the other game with the Heller Bros., and they are confident of turning the tables this afternoon, after losing by the slim margin of one point on Thanksgiving day.

The Heller Bros. are not unknown in New England, having demonstrated their athletic ability in more than one line of sport. Sam, the oldest member of the team, starred with Windham in three sports, also with Cushing academy, and continued his athletic career at Brown university.

Abe also played with Brown but he left that university and is now coach at one of the largest high schools in Providence.

Hy, perhaps, is the best known and most versatile of the team. He spent one year with the Connecticut Aggies and three years at Brown, where he was regarded as the mainstay of the basketball team.

Harry, the fourth member, goes to Columbia university and plays a guard position on that basketball team.

Sam, the youngest member, was picked on the All-State High School team in 1927, and last year was high scorer for Williston academy. This year he is attending Boston university and is the backbone of the freshman basketball team.

The "Y" team is still somewhat handicapped by the absence of Brown, flashy forward, but Coach Demarest is expected to don the old togs again and will cavort in one of the forward berths. Pingree will probably team up with Demarest, while Harris will be at center, with either Eccleston, Grebe or Barber in the back courts. Others to see action will be young Tommy Lynch, who is looked upon as a comer, and Manager Leffingwell, who is just recovering from an attack of the grip.

Two teams of all-Collegians will be seen in the preliminary game and the fans can expect much action in this game.

The "Y" management has made preparations to take care of a full house and the fans should not miss the great opportunity of seeing one of the classiest attractions now touring New England. This is the same team that the Plainfield Pros refuse to play and for what reason nobody can imagine.

The preliminary game will start at 2 p. m., with the main attraction at 3 o'clock. Randy Whaples will referee.

Huggins, and Rickard Died During 1929

By ALAN GOULD

(Associated Press Sports Editor)

NEW YORK, Jan. 1—(AP)—Two of the most famous makers of world's champions died during 1929, a year that marked the passing of many notable figures of sport.

Tex Rickard, the most picturesque and successful of all boxing promoters, died during the first week of January at Miami Beach as he was in the midst of plans for developing the Florida resort as a winter boxing capital.

Miller Huggins, mighty little manager of the New York Yankees, died late in September, his health undermined by the strain of the pennant race in which his club was beaten for the first time in four years in the American league.

New York was hit hard by the loss of these two dominating forces in its sports activities. Each, along separate routes, had contributed many of the most dramatic features of the competition in which they figured. Each was forced to overcome extraordinary obstacles to success after coming to New York at about the same time to undertake their biggest jobs.

Rickard, promoter of the greatest boxing spectacles of all time in Chicago, Philadelphia and Jersey City, the man who made millions for Jack Dempsey and Gene Tunney, lived to see his dream of the New Madison Square Garden fulfilled and his front row seats filled with bankers, men and women of wealth and society.

Huggins, for a dozen years, managed one of the most remarkable athletes, Babe Ruth, and one of the greatest clubs of all time. The little pilot claimed six pennants and three world's championships in eight years. His team won two world's series without the loss of a game.

All told, death took a heavy toll in professional sports ranks. The turf was hard-hit by the loss of such noted figures as John E. Madden, the master of Hamburg Place; Sam Hildreth and James Rowe, Sr., for years among the most conspicuous trainers; and Mars Cassidy, veteran starter.

The dare-devil sport of auto racing claimed among its victims Lee Bible, killed in a crash on the sands of Daytona Beach in an attempt to break the world's straightaway record, and Ray Keech one-time holder of this speed-record. Keech was killed at Altoona shortly after he had won the blue-ribbon of American long-distance racing in the 500-mile Indianapolis Sweepstakes.

Baseball, in addition to Huggins, lost John Conway Toole, president of the International league; George Stallings, one-time "miracle man" of the Boston Braves when they won the world's series of 1914; Harry Frazee, famous as the man who sold Babe Ruth to the Yankees; Sherwood Magee, former National league batting king and later an umpire; and Joe O'Brien, former president of the American Association.

The Philadelphia Nationals, before the season started lost Frank (Dutch) Ulrich, their leading pitcher in 1928, who died after a brief illness at Baltimore. After the season the star young Philly catcher, Walter Lerian, died following an auto accident, also in Baltimore.

Among old-time ring figures to pass on were Frank Slavin, a heavyweight in the days of John L. Sullivan, and Eddie McGoorty, a clever middleweight in his day. The British flyweight champion, Johnny Hill, died from a ruptured blood vessel while training for a title fight with Frankie Genaro of New York in England. Eight fatal accidents were recorded in the ring among obscure boxers.

T. A. (Tad) Dorgan, famous cartoonist, and Otto Floto of Denver, long noted as a sports writer and editor, also died.

Eastern Connecticut Shows Business Decrease In 1929

BUSTLING COMMUNITIES SHOW BUSY YEAR IN NEW LONDON AND WINDHAM COUNTIES IN BANKING, BUILDING, MANUFACTURING

Total in These Lines for 1929 Was $1,236,116,887—Decrease of $32,009,865 Over Figure of the Preceding Year—New London County Showed $936,578,937 and Windham County $299,537,950—Manufacturing Industries of Norwich, Putnam, Danielson, Willimantic, New London and Surrounding Communities Had Varied Year—Banking Business Was at Decreasing Volume—Building Work Expenditures Below Previous Year.

The past twelve months in New London and Windham counties in banking, building and manufacturing made a year in which the general volume fell below that of a year ago, although there were lines in which there were larger figures than in 1928.

The total for the year, according to statistics assembled by The Bulletin, is $1,236,116,887, which is a loss of $32,009,865 over 1928 when the total was $1,268,126,752.

New London county gave $936,578,937 as compared with $945,724,126 and Windham county's total was $299,537,950 as compared with $322,402,626.

Through the manufacturing industries there was a total wage disbursement of $27,481,073 which was a gain from the $26,352,032 of the preceding year, while the total volume of manufacturing was $179,337,850 as compared with the total of $179,987,695 in 1928. In New London county the wages from manufacturing industries were $18,231,484 and in Windham county $9,249,589. In the preceding year these were $17,543,346 in New London county and $8,808,686 in Windham county.

Banking business went to a lower total in the year that added to decreases in other lines. It showed a total of $1,016,747,037 in which New London county had $790,794,776 and Windham county $225,952,261. In the year before the total had been $1,048,030,057 with New London county giving $800,209,421 and Windham county $247,820,636.

In building lines there was a decrease on the showing of a total of $4,529,553 in which $3,517,743 was in New London county and $1,011,810 in Windham county. In the year before the total had been $5,952,245, in which $5,196,285 was in New London county and $755,960 in Windham county.

Manufacturing Gain In Year In Norwich

Although there was slackness in some manufacturing lines in Norwich in 1929 increases in other lines overcame this and enabled the year to show larger figures than in 1928, which was a low period. There were 6,953 employed in the manufacturing and industrial plants, receiving total wages of $8,050,026 with product value of $29,665,491 This compared with $7,412,517 in wages and $26,705,971 in product in the preceding year.

There was varied business experience in the textile lines. Cotton mills showed about the same as the year before, having 1,830 employes, $1,705,000 in wages and $6,125,000 in product. Woolen mills were adversely affected by conditions and had smaller business generally than the year before. They had 951 employes, $970,468 in wages and $2,931,127 in product, which was about $200,000 less in wages and about $1,000,000 less in product than the year before. Silk was one textile line which recorded big business for the year. Combined with the velvet industry, these lines gave employment to 1,682 with wages of $1,974,005 and $9,894,615 in product.

Paper and leather lines were two lines that showed something of an increase. These industries employed 260, disbursed $405,885 in wages and showed product value of $2,140,613. Foundry and iron work, on the other hand, had a slackened season, with 185 employes, $209,649 in wages and $416,032 in product, all slightly smaller figures than a year ago. Manufacturers of metal goods experienced little change from the year before, having 167 employes, $181,616 in wages and $711,605 in value of product.

Manufacturers in firearms and cutlery lines had a substantially better year than in 1928, their employes numbering 343, wages being $514,500 and product $1,045,000. Due principally to increased business of two concerns in the miscellaneous classification, this group of industries shows considerably larger figures than in 1928, having 1,593 employes, $2,088,903 in wages and $6,401,429 in product.

While there was depressing news in the last month of the year, when two woolen mills were closed down and it was announced that a silk mill property was for sale this was alleviated in a measure by the announcement that one of the woolen mills was to be taken over and operated by a new company and there seemed to be good prospects of a customer for the silk mill property.

Danielson More Fortunate Than Most Textile Points

On the whole, Danielson and the town of Killingly rates as having been more fortunate, as to its textile plants keeping running, than most textile centers in New England in 1929. It not only was fortunate in this respect, but it also had the encouraging experience of witnessing the resumption of operations at the Connecticut mills, not as a tire fabric plant, as it had been ever since construction, but as a curtain manufacturing plant.

The mill had been idle for practically a year, the Connecticut mills having removed its business to Alabama. When Powdrell & Alexander purchased it and undertook the work of making it ready for their uses As 1929 drew to a close 750 people were employed there and the plant was turning out 20,000 pairs of curtains every day. As the year closed the prospect was for increasing the production to 25,000 pairs a day during 1930.

Quinebaug Co. Kept Busy

The Quinebaug company's big plant on the West Side has run steadily through the year, with little lost time for the operatives. This concern, long noted for the excellence of its products, manufactures a great amount of fancy cottons, a display of them being included in the textile show held at the state armory here last June under the auspices of the Eastern Connecticut Mills association.

At Goodyear all through the year the Goodyear mills have operated on a day and night schedule, as they have for about a decade. This plant manufactures fabric for Goodyear tires and its product is taken by the Goodyear Tire & Rubber company of Akron.

At Dayville, the Assawaga Woolen company has operated irregularly, a source of regret to Killingly, but the same has been true of a great many woolen mills throughout the country

Powdrell & Alexander Grow

The business of Powdrell & Alexander, operating three mills in Danielson and the three mills formerly owned by the Attawaugan company, at Attawaugan, Ballouville and Pineville, has gone booming along during 1929, and the company has increased the number of its employes to in excess of 1,600. The concern's payroll to its workers here is in excess of $35,000 weekly. All through 1929, up to within the past fortnight, this company has maintained a day and night schedule of production at its No. 1 plant on Furnace street and has also operated some of the departments of its No. 2 plant on Main street, day and night throughout the year. Its No. 3 plant, on Connecticut Mills avenue, is a beehive of activity, with a production of 20,000 pairs of curtains a day and a constant outpouring of its product through its shipping department in this plant. The shipments go to about every city and town in the country and to many places throughout Canada The great department and famous chain stores in all the larger cities of the country handle the products of this curtain factory, the business being obtained through the mill company's own sales force covering the country from coast to coast. Today, Powdrell & Alexander are the largest manufacturers of curtains in the world, and they have grown to that estate in a little more than a decade. When they started doing business here they had but one small plant, on Furnace street, and a mere handful of employes as compared to the number working with them today.

Other textile concerns that have helped make things better in Killingly the past year are the Killingly Worsted company at Elmville and the Davis & Brown and Acme Products company at East Killingly. The American Woolen company plant at Elmville remained closed throughout the year, as it did throughout 1928. As this company recently disposed of the houses it owned at Elmville, it is regarded as unlikely that the concern ever again will operate the plant; in fact, it is now considering selling the mill.

The Jacobs Manufacturing company manufacturers of mill supplies that have a wide distribution, while feeling effects of the depression in the cotton mill field, have run with general regularity.

Work For Building Trades

Several of the smaller industries of Danielson had a comparatively good year in 1929. In the building trades, workers were kept busy until cold weather set in, so can lay claim to having had a worth-while year.

"Spotty" in Merchandising

In the merchandising field in Danielson the year was described as "spotty." It was good at times and at other times not so good Few houses doing business here can claim to have established new high records, though numbers of them had good business and a profit-making year. There was a further development of the chain store business in Danielson during 1929, as well as some consolidation, one large chain absorbing another with a store here, so three stores are now combined in one large one.

As 1920 opens, Danielson is in an average favorable position. If various building and other projects planned for the year are realized, 1930 should be a good year here, likely considerably better than 1929.

Putnam Acquired New Industries in the Year

A concensus of opinions of Putnam business leaders taken recently is that the city will experience a good business year in 1930. Nearly every important figure in the municipality's commercial circles reflected optimism when asked what the new year holds in store relative to business. Those in authority have confidence that the coming year will be a prosperous one for the community, although they do not expect to witness the extensive building activities that have boomed during the year closed.

The milestone 1929 for Putnam has been one of the greatest time spans the city has passed through in over ten years. As the new year dawned Putnam had prepared a huge programme of undertakings, which will be a part of the normal life of the community, in finance, industry and sports, which will be launched at once

The settlement of the disputed city water topic has provided for a gigantic municipal construction project that will furnish employment for many. According to plans the city is to erect a water standpipe for storage use, the capacity of which is to reach 1,000,000 gallons. Pipe lines will be relaid that will require the services of much un-skilled labor thereby relieving the employment problem for a time, which is beginning to become a serious topic confronting the city's business leaders.

During the past year two new industries have taken their places among Putnam's array of manufacturers, devoting the latter part of the year to the work of preparing for their start in the business world slated for January 1 The largest of the two concerns is the new plant of the M. Salzberg Sons & Company, silk manufacturers of Patterson, N J., who have taken over a substantial part of the old Manahansett Manufacturing company on Canal street. When machinery installation operations will have been completed employment will be given to over 250 hands.

A felt manufacturing concern owned and operated by Alexander Makepeace of Thompson is housed in the wooden building on Truesdell street, once known as the Eureka plant of the Hammond Knowlton Silk Co., which later merged with the Beldings and became the Belding-Hemingway Co. The felt manufacturers are experimenting with new processes, expected to bring great results for the patent holders and for the community.

Thomas J Aylward, of Pleasant street will known throughout New England's textile circles is soon to establish a plant in this city for the manufacture of dye stuffs. Mr. Aylward's enterprise will create employment for a number of workers.

Textile concerns located in this city experienced a profitable year in 1929 and the genral outlook for 1930 by all plant oicials is for continued prosperity. The National Rhea company went into bankruptcy proceedings last summer when stockholders decided this as a channel to effect re-organization. The mill, employing about 150 hands, has continued to operate on full time schedule and in the event of a favorable disposal of property at an auction to take place this week a volume of orders unprecedented in the concern's history will be placed with the new owners at once, it has been learned

The Bloom Silk company on Providence street manufacturers of rayon silk fabrics, experienced an excellent year. The plant expanded early in the year upon receipt of a larger market for its products Francis H. Metcalf is superintendent of the organization.

The Putnam woolen company passed through a fair period during 1929. The concern maintained a good operating schedule and officials are optimistic as to conditions for the coming year.

Putnam company's foundry and iron working shops have credited 1929 with being their best year of the past decade. The manufacture of gratings and heaters constitutes the concern's chief products. Skilled workers are employed there, the result being a high wage earning scale.

The towns of Woodstock, Eastford, Pomfret, Thompson and the villages of East Putnam and Putnam Heights are entirely devoted to agriculture. Growers who reported excellent crop months in 1928 experienced dire marketing upsets during the summer of 1929 when their garden produce suffered heavily from the effects of a five months' drought. In the Pomfrets and Woodstocks, fruit centers of the

EASTERN CONNECTICUT BANKING EXPERIENCED LESSENED BUSINESS

Banks of New London and Windham County Found 1929 a Busy Period Nevertheless—Savings Deposits Made Gains But Mercantile Transactions Were Less.

In common with slackened business conditions in some lines during 1929 in New London and Windham counties, the banking business of this section showed decreasing figures. Savings bank deposits gained but the smaller transactions in commercial banking indicated less active business life for the period.

Total transactions of New London and Windham county banks in 1929 were $1,016,747,037, which was less than the figure of $1,048,030,057 for 1928.

Savings deposits gained from $97,628,596 to $101,437,185 in the banks of the two counties. When the year closed the savings banks of New London county had total deposits of $82,443,725 as compared with the previous year's mark of $80,123,989. In Windham county, where one the best banking years is reported, the savings banks have total deposits of $18,993,460. A year ago this was $17,504,607.

Thames-Bankers Trust Consolidation in Norwich

FRANCIS E. STORER
President, Thames Bank & Trust Co.

Changes in the banking alignment in Norwich have taken place in 1929 which have brought together by consolidation as a trust company, one of the oldest and one of the youngest of the city's financial institutions. This was the consolidation to form the Thames Bank and Trust company, by the merger of the Thames bank, which had been in business for 104 years and the Bankers Trust company which was organized and started business eight years ago and had been forging ahead with the vigor of youth ever since.

By the union of the two, the Thames Bank and Trust company began business on the first business day of December with total resources of $6,300,000, capital of $1,100,000 and surplus and undivided profits of $750,000 It occupies the Thames bank building on Shetucket street.

Besides the formation of a banking house of such magnificent strength, the change was significant in the fact that it brought a new personality into the banking and business life of Norwich by the election of Francis E. Storer as president of the trust company, a Danielson banker, with a background of outstanding successful experience since 1915 as cashier of the Windham County National bank in Danielson.

Arthur M. Brown, who had been president of the Thames bank, was made chairman of the board of directors of the merger trust company and the four vice presidents elected included Timothy C. Murphy, who had been president of the Bankers Trust company, William G. Park, also of the Bankers Trust directorate, William T Crandall and George R. Fellows, who had been vice presidents of the Thames, where the last named had been trust officer, in which position he continues in the consolidation.

John R. Tarrant, under whom as secretary and treasurer the Bankers Trust had enjoyed its remarkably successful growth for the past five years, becomes secretary and treasurer of the Thames Bank and Trust, where his previous banking experience promises admirable qualification for this important position.

The board of directors includes eighteen of the best known and most substantial business men of the community.

Commercial Banking Figures Large

Commercial requirements in financial lines have been handled in a satisfactory way during the year by the Uncas-Merchants National bank, the Thames National bank and the Bankers Trust company with a volume of transactions that dropped below the

The Magnitude of Their Business Interests Clearly Shown

In securing the figures herewith The Bulletin is indebted to the custodians of the accounts, and thanks them for their prompt and obliging responses. Except in a few instances there was a ready response from those approached for information, but where estimates had to be made, they were carefully figured.

The greater part of the figures were based upon amounts actually taken from the books of the business houses. The promise to disclose no business secrets will explain why in a number of instances it has been necessary to assemble several lines into one sum. The immense figures reached must be a surprise to all as it is to The Bulletin, and the residents of the cities and towns of the two counties can well feel a pardonable pride in the magnitude of their business interests as here shown.

[illegible]TIONAL SERVICE GIVEN BY FARM BUREAU IN NEW LONDON COUNTY

With Men In Agriculture, Women In the Homes and Club Work With Boys and Girls—Dairying Holds First Place In Agriculture In the County—Farmers Bringing in Lime and Super-phosphate for Soil Improvement—48 Pure-bred Bulls Placed—Poultrymen Inoculate 85,000 Birds Against Chicken Pox.

Functioning with the outdoor work of the farmers, the home work of the women and the club activities of the boys and girls, the New London County Farm and Home Bureau has pushed forward its three-sided programme in the past year in many communities of the county where the advice and help of its expert department heads has been efficiently given. Evidence of the value of its work is given in the continued interest and participation in its activities, whether on the farm, in the home or among the juniors in the farm families.

In the year that is opening, the farm bureau work will be carried on under the direction of the same executives who guided it during the past year, these being Walter T. Clark, county agent; Miss Ruth T. Russell, home demonstration agent; Randolph W. Whaples, county club agent, and Miss E. Elisabeth Grover, assistant county club agent. At the annual meeting in December, the officers were re-elected as follows: President, William W. Service, Preston; first vice president, F. M. Abell, Lebanon; second vice president, Mrs. H. R. Whitman, Waterford; secretary, Arthur H. Davis, Waterford; treasurer, Miss Margery Brewster, Griswold.

Give Valued Service In Agriculture Programme

Reporting for the year, County [illegible] Agent Clark describes the several special lines in which the extension programme in agriculture has been carried on.

The four project committees which were used were the following:

Dairy—Chairman, F. M. Abell, Lebanon; William Babbitt, Baltic; Albert Beckwith, Franklin; Thomas Wood, Waterford; William B. Lathrop, Norwich; C. E. York, Stonington; Charles Armstrong, Griswold; John D. Avery, North Stonington; George G. Grant, Montville; Elmer Foote, Colchester.

WALTER T. CLARK
County Agent

Fruit—Chairman, E. W. Graham, Lebanon; Clifford Chipman, Waterford; E. W. Jones, Lebanon; A. W. Lillibridge, Norwich; Milton Beckwith, Franklin; George Wheeler, Stonington; F. W. Burton, Ledyard; Walter Scott, East Lyme; Charles Elias, North Stonington; Simon Brewster, Griswold.

Poultry—Chairman, F. L. Kanahan, Lisbon; E. A. Hoxie, Lebanon; Arthur Fellows, Norwich; H. J. Larkham, Norwich; Christopher Chrissos, Groton; Alfred Crofts, North Stonington.

Analysis of County Agriculture

The county agent prefaces his report with the following brief analysis of the agriculture of New London county:

In studying various surveys and census figures we find that New London county has a land area of 421,760 acres with 267,299 acres or 63.4 per cent in farms. There are 2,834 farms under cultivation with an average acreage per farm of 94.4. The farm land is divided as follows:

37 per cent is in woodland (two-thirds of which is in pasture).

32 per cent is tillable land (five-sixths of which is in hay each year).

The above figures show that the big industry of the farmers of New London county is the production of hay and pastures, 45 per cent (not including woodland pasture) of the total farm area being utilized for same.

There is only 11 per cent of the total tillable land used for other crops. It would seem from the above figures that the farmers of New London county are principally interested in dairying and that the soil fertility problem is one closely related to the dairy farms.

Value of Products

It might be interesting to compare the value of agricultural products in New London county as taken from the 1925 census. The dairy products sold and consumed by the county in 1925 were $2,190,000; poultry $397,000; vegetables $450,000 and fruit $209,000. In other words the dairy products were valued at more than all other products combined which shows their relative importance. The value of hay and forage consumed on the farms was $1,635,000.

It is questionable whether the dairy business will be replaced by any of these other agricultural industries shown above. The poultry products can be increased some and probably will be to the extent of supply and demand. However, the poultry industry cannot consume all of the hay, forage and pasturage available.

Dairying Holds First Place

Only in a few spots is the soil of the county adapted to potatoes. Neither is its topography, so it seems as though dairying would not be replaced in the near future, at least.

There is an opportunity on many of the New London county dairy farms to add an enterprise such as poultry, potatoes or fruit to provide a larger total income, but it is not probable that these enterprises will take the place of dairying. According to farm management studies made from the farm account books in the county in 1926 thirty-six diversified dairy farms showed an average farm income of $2,622.58 while twenty specialized dairy farms showed an average of $1,827.63. (The diversity of these farms consisted mainly of fruit, poultry or potatoes.)

There is considerable marginal land in the county which has been in production on pasture but due to the fact that it never was profitbale it is being put to other uses or is not being used for any economic purpose recently. These are some unprofitable pastures which would never respond to top dressing treatments, neither are they suited for sweet clover or temporary pasture. These are fast going to brush or else they are being planted to pine. There are several very good examples of sub-marginal land being put to use.

There are some inferior hay fields which are being put into use as pasture. They are too hilly or stony for good hay fields and are very well adapted for pasture add will respond to treatment. There are some complete farms which are marginal. These, in many cases are becoming successful poultry farms and it is about the only way they can become profitable.

Few Tenant Farmers

Of the 2,834 farmers in the county only 9.2 per cent are tenants. From this it would seem that a soil program would be received and put into practice. Owners are as a rule more interested in improving their soil conditions than tenants.

Soils and Crops

In considering the soil program in New London county it might be interesting to analyze it in order to see just what the problem is and how it is tied up with our crops program and also just why we in New London county are interested in lime, phosphorus, legumes and pastures improvement.

Practically 95 per cent of the tillable land of the county is used to produce hay and silage for dairy cattle. The remaining land in farms is divided about equally between woods and pasture. In other words, practically all of the farm land in the county is used to produce feed for dairy cattle. Over $2,000,000 worth of dairy products are produced annually in the county. Due to favorable marketing conditions and the increasing demand of near-by cities for milk, this business is increasing rapidly.

About one-half of the money received from the sale of milk goes to pay for grain fed the dairy cattle. This is necessary because of the low yields and the poor quality of the roughage produced combined with the low production of pastures. Hence the problem is to build up the fertility of the soil to a point where roughage and pasture will produce a much greater part of the ration. This will leave a larger percentage of the milk check on the farm to cover overhead and production costs as well as to give the producer more profit for his efforts.

Small Acreage in Cash Crops.

Owing to its contour and stony nature no great part of the tillable land of the county is adapted to cash crops which need machine operations for economic production. Hay occupies the land for long periods as it seems to be able to withstand poor fertility and still give some kind of a crop. Hence, cash crops such as potatoes are grown only in relatively small acreages to supplement the income on dairy farms.

Like most other counties in New England, New London county has passed through a series of changes in the type of livestock kept on farms. Beef cattle, sheep and finally dairy cattle have predominated. With the dairy cows the successful changes in the sale of products have been from butter to cream and finally to whole milk. During the early stages of dairying there was little or no profit in the business. This caused much of the rougher and poorer land either to be turned into pasture or entirely abandoned. This process is still going on.

The soils of the county never contained much lime. This meager supply has been depleted by removal through crops and by livestock as well as by leaching. Tests have shown that unlimed soils are extremely acid. This lack of lime not only limits yields but also adversely affects the quality of the roughage produced. This lack of lime has become one of the serious limitations to the productivity of the soil.

New London county soils are also lacking in phosphorus. Studies at the Connecticut experiment station have shown that the soil type and past soil treatment produce deficiencies in the quantity of phosphorus storied in the soil.

The deficiencies of both lime and phosphorus in these soils have resulted in poor yields of hay as well as a product which is of little feeding value because of its low mineral content.

Must Make Pastures Better

For years lime and phosphorus have been removed from the pasture and sold from the farms in milk and livestock. The better pasture grasses cannot withstand this lower plane of fertility and have first been replaced by poorer inferior grasses and they by weeds and brush of no feeding value. Poor pastures have increased the need for barn feeding to maintain production and this in turn has increased production costs. If cattle are not barn fed they become too thin to produce well and have to be fed more liberally than production warrants in the fall to get them back in shape. If productive pastures are to be obtained the lime and plant food of which they have stripped must be returned.

As a result of the soil improvement project 250 tons of lime were bought by the New London county farmers last year for the first time. This brings the total lime consumption of the county up to 2300 tons. There is a total of 225 tons of super-phosphate used in the county as compared to 175 tons last year.

Over 400 acres of alfalfa and clover were grown in the country during the past year. This is an increase of 150 acres over last.

Summary for the Year

During the past year regular programs have been carried on in crops, fruit, vegetables, drairy, poultry and farm management. Other projects have been worked upon but with no definite program of work to follow.

In the crops and soils project a total of 247 improved practices were made in these projects combined by the farmers of New London county. Twenty-three hundred tons of lime have been bought by New London county farmers as well as 225 tons of super-phosphate.

Fifty-eight dairymen have treated pastures with lime and super-phosphate; 400 acres of clover and alfalfa are now being grown.

Seven pruning and grafting demonstrations have been held; 180 trees grafted, 12 co-operators obtained for Oriental peach moth control. Thirty-six men were provided with telephone spray service.

Two forestry thinning demonstrations were conducted.

Ninety-seven dairy surveys have been taken on as many farms in the county. Forty-eight purebred bulls have been placed, also one herd improvement association with 475 cows and 21 members has been fostered. Eighty-four farmers have adopted some new practice in dairying.

Seventy-three farmers inoculated 85,000 birds for chicken pox during the past year after eight demonstrations had shown them how it was done. Ninety farmers adopted one or more new practices.

Twenty-two farmers were aided in constructing farm buildings by availing themselves of blue prints. Eighteen were aided in securing some improved machinery.

Thirty-five account books were distributed last year. Twenty-two summarized and twelve farmers changed their business organization because of what the summary showed. Twenty-five farmers adopted some new practice.

A field day at which 600 New London county people were present was held at Gardner lake.

Agricultural Programme Outlined For 1930

The outlook for the agricultural program in extension work is better than it has been for some time, according to County Agent W. T. Clark. Farmers are learning more about the work and what it is doing for their neighbor who does take advantage of it. People are accepting recommended practices more readily than they did a year ago. Our program of crops and soils is in a position now to gain more momentum than it ever has had before. Some farmers are developing a county consciousness or pride which has only existed very mildly before this year. The following suggested program will be continued:

Soils: Increase use of lime and acid phosphate, 1, more soil tests, 2, better care of farm manures.

Crops—A, Legumes; 1, clover; 2, alfalfa; 3, sweet corn; 4, better silage varieties; B, 1, permanent; 2, temporary.

Fruit—1, better varieties; 2, better grading; 3, better spraying.

Vegetables—1, control of diseases and insects; 2, better cultivation; 3, better grading; 4, better marketing; 5, conduct campaign for better potato yields.

Dairy—1, pure bred bulls; 2, dairy replacements; 3, tuberculin test; 4, good feeding practices; 5, herd improvement association.

Agricultural Economics — 1, place more farm account books; 2, two more young farmers' clubs; 3, get in more summaries.

NEW LONDON COUNTY WOMEN GIVEN HELP BY HOME DEMONSTRATION WORK

28 Groups Have Met for Instruction in the Different Communities—Food and Nutrition Work Have Leading Place—Making Moccasins Was New Project Taken Up With Enthusiasm.

Under the direction of Miss Ruth T. Russell, home demonstration agent with the New London county farm bureau, the Square Meal for Health program was decided upon for a winter project to be followed in the summer with meetings to suit the needs of varying communities. For a fall project the communities interested were to take up kitchen planning and equipment.

The term square meals for health means that food from all sides of the square should be included in a properly balance day's menu. The four sides of the square represent protein foods, energy foods, minerals and vitamins.

Food work has taken quite a prominent part in the program for New London county during the past year. Being given in the form of demonstrations and lectures has made the work have more appeal than just lectures ever could.

MISS RUTH T. RUSSELL
Home Demonstration Agent

Fifty-nine voluntary local leaders have been helping home demonstration work during the past year. The following have served as local leaders for their group:

Mrs. J. A. Thomas, Goshen; Mrs. A. H. Beebe, Leffingwell; Mrs. David Pitcher, Lebanon; Mrs. Austin Rathbun, Franklin; Mrs. Jabez Lathrop, Bozrah; Mrs. William Weaver, Norwich Town; Mrs. J. E. Kennedy, Preston; Miss Margery Brewster, Griswold; Mrs. Appleton Maine, Poquetanuck, Mrs. Avery Maine, Ledyard; Mrs. Joseph Clark, Geer Hill; Mrs. Walter Buckingham, Gales Ferry; Mrs. C. L. Gray, North Stonington; Miss Sarah T. Palmer, Pendleton Hill; Mrs. Donald Bullard, Montville; Mrs. E. M. Woods, Wequetequock; Mrs. M. Esther Ide, Stonington; Mrs. Will Main, Poquonnock Bridge; Mrs. Sadie Phinney, Groton; Mrs. William Loftus, Cider Hill; Mrs. H. H. Leland, Waterford; Miss Nellie Gray, Colchester; Mrs. John Lyman, East Great Plain; Mrs. Sadie Roberts, Hadlyme; Mrs. Louis Chapman, Salem.

This year for the first time in the county, leader training meetings were held. The county was divided into two sections and leaders from each section met at a central place and were given definite instructions which they in turn, passed on to their own groups.

A county home economics committee was formed during the past year. This committee is composed of the following: Mrs. E. J. Graham, Lebanon; Mrs. H. R. Whitman, Waterford; Mrs. E. M. Woods, Wequetequock; Miss Margery Brewster, Griswold.

The idea in forming this committee was that it might furnish a connecting link between the local people conducting home demonstration activities and the county home demonstration agent and so that it might be able to help with county events such as the field day for women.

Home demonstration work has done what it has been possible for it to do in helping other projects and organizations. Three times during the past year county granges have asked for help with their home economics program. Miss Russell has given talks at all three of these and in addition, lantern slides were shown at one meeting.

The two Norwich papers have been very generous and have printed almost weekly on Monday morning and evening, a program of meetings to be held during that week. Quite ofen they have also given a complete summary of meetings held during the preceding week.

The Farm and Home Bureau News published by the New London county farm and home bureau provides an opportunity for publicity as regards not only meetings but subject matter. This has a circulation of about 250.

Two commercial companies have sent food demonstrators free of charge to give county or sectional food demonstrations.

The Norwich gas and electric department has generously given the use of their home service room twice for county meetings.

Summary For Year

What the work of the year has been is given in the following summary by Miss Russell:

Twenty-eight groups have met during the past year for 137 meetings with the home demonstration agent. The attendance at these meetings has been 1,709.

Of these meetings food and nutrition work has had the greatest number with a total of 64 meetings and eight training schools held. As a result of food work the following accomplishments have been stated by the women on a questionnaire returned by 52 per cent of these women:

One hundred and twenty have increased the use of vegetables; 64 the use of milk; 98 the use of whole grain cereals and bread; 113 the use of fruit; 95 have adopted the method of cooking vegetables recommended; 139 different homes have adopted these improved practices, the information given has been passed on to 235, and 78 different families are using the recipes given at food meetings. The recipes have been passed on to 120.

Thirty-eight clothing meetings have resulted in 63 dresses being mode, 30 patterns checked, six fitted patterns being made, 29 coats and dresses remodelled, five dress forms and 244 hats being made. Work done at home on this project includes 330 dresses made, 150 articles renovated and 150 hats made.

Two training schools in sheepskin moccasins, a new project this year, were held, resulting in a total of 410 pair of moccasins being made by the women under the direction of local leaders.

Sixteen health meetings have been held in eight communities. The project on "The Care of Young Children" was given complete in Lebanon. Four meetings have been held in Franklin during this year with the other two to follow in the first of the coming year. As a result of health work, the following is of interest, showing the number who have used the suggestions given along the different lines:

Twenty-five have used the suggestions given on good posture; 22 on good elimination; 27 on care of skin and hair; 14 on home nursing; 30 on prevention of colds; 19 on care of teeth; 18 on care of feet; 19 on first aid, and 21 on care of children.

The home management project was started late in the year. However, as a result of work done either this or previous years the following equipment has been added and work done:

Nine washing machines, five fireless cookers; eight kitchen sinks; twelve vacuum cleaners; eight kitchen cabinets; fourteen electric irons; 20 have had running water installed; two built in fuel box; twelve heating systems; eleven lighting systems; four pressure cookers; two lights put in over working surfaces; one cooking utensils rearranged; one shelf erected near working area for utensils.

Forty-seven chairs reseated at meeting; 105 chairs reseated at home after meetings; 10 pieces of upholstering done at meetings; 67 pieces of upholstery done at home; 10 lamp shades made at meetings; 40 lamp shades made at home; 235 information passed on.

One meeting on landscaping and home beautification was held, but too late in the year to get any check for this year's report.

The local and county leaders have been very cooperative and without their cooperation nothing of any account could have been accomplished within the past year.

Comment From The Field.

Some interesting statements have been made regarding the food work done. One woman who has been carrying on extension work for several years says that due to the work we have done on food, she has cut down on the amount of meat her family has been in the habit of eating and has increased the amount of fruit and vegetables and milk with the result that the health of her family has been very much better this past winter than any winter before.

Another woman who attended home demonstration meetings told of her girl's experience in health class at school as follows: the teacher asked the children in school how many had two green vegetables served them? Her daughter said "Yes, she always had two vegetables every day." A visitor in the school who attends extension meetings quite regularly in another town spoke up and said "I guess your mother goes to Farm Bureau Home demonstration meetings" to which the girl immediately replied "Yes, she always goes."

It also seems that the women are not the only ones to discuss food habits for it seems that even in the railroad yards of a community in the county the men whose wives go to what was done at the food meetings extension meetings always discuss and whether or not they approve of the recipes served them. One woman reports having given her husband her extra copies of the recipes so that he may give them to some of the men whose wives do not attend meetings.

One specific request was made for the health specialist to visit a home in the county where the youngest daughter had for about a year been in very poor health, unable to gain weight or to resist any disease or a cold. A visit was made which resulted in some definite suggestions in regard to the child's food and health habits being made.

At the end of four months the child had gained to such an extent that she was able to play with other children, she had gained ten pounds and no longer had a severe case of rickets.

The mother of the child told me that the extension service had done for her what no doctor or nurse could or had done and she was most grateful for the help.

State Rug Loom

The state rug loom was in the county for nine months. However, in the place it went first it was idle for several months. The Norwich Town group wove about 35 yards of carpeting while they had the loom. At Poquonnock Bridge, where the loom went second, they wove about 50 yards during its four weeks' visit.

The third place in the county where rugs were woven was in Bozrah. Here 90 yards of carpeting were made into 47 rugs.

County Meeting for Women

One hundred and seventy-five women were present at a county wide meeting for women held at Mohegan park, Norwich, the purpose of which was to get the women together so that they might meet women from other groups and talk over as they wished what they were doing. A lunch of salads, sandwiches, lemonade and cake was served in the pavilion followed by community singing. The remainder of the day was spent in playing games under the direction of Miss Dorothy McCall, swimming and enjoying the beauty and restfulness of the park.

Sees Bright Outlook For Home Demonstration Work

Home demonstration work seems to me to have a bright outlook for the year, says Miss Russell, home demonstration agent, in her recommendations for the 1930 programme. There are about ten more communities that should be organized for our extension program in order for time to be available to organize and work with any of these extra groups, less meetings for the agent to attend in each group is inevitable. It seems to be that this can best be taken care of by more leader training schools where leaders are taught simple mechanical things such as, for example, the making of magazine racks or other woodwork articles. A one hundred per cent completion of the moccasin project which was done by leaders, is sufficient proof to me that other projects might be done in the same way. I think that at least two leader projects might be put across in those groups interested during the coming year.

The state Christmas box was of interest to the women. Many have asked for a county box which could remain longer in one place than the state box could. It is probable that this may be carried out next year.

A county fashion show in the spring is planned in order to teach the women style lines, design and color. This will probably be held in Norwich with the chamber of commerce co-operating.

Not as much food work will be done another year but several isolated meetings have been asked for by groups.

The home management project will be worked on considerably during the coming year. The women seem to be interested to rearrange their homes and kitchens in particular, so as to make their work easier. Several have asked for meetings to make sewing screens, magazine racks and bedside tables, etc.

As health is important in order to accomplish anything, several health meetings are planned. One group will finish up the work on "Care of Young Children" and another such group may be formed.

The county field day seemed to have accomplished its purpose and probably will be made an annual affair.

In general, some work in most all projects will be held with the groups. More groups will probably be organized and with the co-operation of the leaders a successful year is looked forward to.

Membership of 465 in 4-H Clubs—Home Gardens, Sheep, Dairy and Poultry for the Boys—Girls Did Prize Winning Work in Canning and Cooking—Had Health and Clothing Clubs.

The club work with the boys and and girls in New London country, popularly known as the 4-H, signifying heart, health, head and hand, has been carried on under the direction of Randolph W. Whaples, county club agent, with Miss E. Elisabeth Grover, assistant county club agent, working half time since July 1, and giving particular attention to the clothing, canning, cooking and health projects.

The following have served on the county club committee during 1929: Miss Julia Rodman, North Franklin; Miss Margery Brewster, Griswold; Mrs. Hugh Whitman, Waterford; Mrs. Eugene Woods, Stonington; Mrs. H. H. Tompkins, Colchester; Mrs. Thomas Woods, Waterford; Ernest Manning, Lebanon; Edward Lewis, Preston; Imbert Fellows, Norwich Town; Albert Lillibridge, Norwich Town; Joseph Clark, Ledyard.

RANDOLPH W. WHAPLES
County Club Agent

The following are the local leaders to whom 4-H club work in the county is greatly indebted: Miss Florece Rockwood, Miss Annie Gillett, Mrs. C. J. Hogan, Miss Helen Ryan, Miss Idella Young, Mrs. H. H. Tompkins, Miss Bernice Walkinshaw, Mrs. R. W. Whaples, Mrs. Sadie Phinney, Mrs. George Brush, Mrs. Harold Muttart, Mrs. Fred Abell, Arnold Manning, George Wood, Harry Pierce, Albert Lillibridge, A. W. Canney, William Spencer, Miss Julia Rodman, Miss Margery Brewster, Mrs. Henry King, Miss Frances McIntosh, Miss Lilly Larson, Miss Helen Taylor, Mrs. Mabel E. Capshaw, Mrs. Clifford Thompson, Mrs. Harold Reynolds, Miss Cynthia Crary, Mrs. Thomas Horan, Jason Kingsley, Edwin Lewis, Paul Holdridge, Carl Ricker, Bernard Crandall, Edward Bushy.

In part the report for this department of the farm bureau is made as follows:

Home Gardens.

We carried on this project, in a limited way in four towns, namely: Griswold, Voluntown, North Stonington and Franklin. The Pachaug Grange Fair association, in the town of Griswold, furnished certified seed potatoes and Hubbard squash seed to every boy or girl in Griswold and Voluntown who would take the seed, plant them, care for his garden and exhibit some of the results at the Pachaug Grange fair. This fair gave the youngsters plenty of space to exhibit and offered very liberal premiums. The exhibit this year was much better and some larger than in the past.

In North Stonington, the same procedure was followed. The North Stonington fair also offered very attractive premiums. The exhibit at this fair was of higher quality than in years past but was not as large.

In Franklin the garden project was tried for the first time. Franklin Grange offered ribbons as premiums. Besides the certified seed potatoes and Hubbard squash seed the members in this town were given some corn to plant. In each town each youngster was given two pounds of certified seed potatoes, three squash seed, and in Franklin they were given in addition five kernels of sweet corn. We enrolled 140 in the project and had 65 exhibiting. Many of the youngsters were unable to exhibit because of lack of transportation facilities for their products.

Sheep.

The Wide Awake Sheep club of North Stonington has been in club work a little over one year. They own eight animals; all of which are grades. Two members exhibited at the county fair. They put on shearing and docking demonstrations and as a result have the adults in their neighborhood using machines for shearing and also using the docking irons.

MISS E. ELISABETH GROVER
Asst. County Club Agent

Dairy.

We have six dairy clubs in the county as compared to three for last year. These clubs are located in Lebanon, Waterford, Norwich Town, Colchester and Franklin.

The Lebanon Dairy club members own twelve animals, seven of which are purebreds. Three boys from this club were members of the county dairy judging team and two of them, Stephen Manning and Hollis Cummings, made the state dairy judging team that judged at the National Dairy show held at St. Louis, Missouri.

The Out-To-Win Dairy club of Waterford have completed their second year. The members own nine animals, but only one animal is purebred. One member of this club made the county dairy judging team. This club in conjunction with the Farm View club held a community fair at which $54 was realized. This money will be used to defray expenses to State Club Round-up, Judging Trip and Junior Short Course.

The Wide-Awake Dairy club of Westchester has been organized only a few months. They seem to be getting along nicely under the direction of A. W. Canney. One member from this club made the county dairy

Programme For 1930 In 4-H Club Work

The outlook for 4-H club work in New London county is very bright at the present time, says County Club Agent Whaples. I feel confident that we are gradually enlisting the confidence and support of new people in the rural districts. This is exactly what we want and need; especially from the people in the districts where the work should be or is being carried on. We have made many new connections with merchants who are willing to donate loving cups, etc., as incentives for the boys and girls to do more and better work. These, too, I feel, are valuable connections and cannot be overlooked.

At present we have 44 clubs, 12 more than we had a year ago. Prospects are bright for more. I feel we should not go ahead and organize too many new clubs but that we should put in more time on subject matter with the clubs now organized. This, of course, will be possible now that we have an assistant club agent spending half time with the girls of the county.

To spend more time with local leaders and make sure they understand their job.

To have some good dairy demonstration teams.

To have a good strong county sheep club.

To have two or three new dairy clubs.

To have larger and better exhibits at state and county fairs.

To have a county camp.

Homemaking Projects In Programme For 1930

For the club work with girls, Miss Grover, assistant county club agent, has the following aims in her 1930 programme:

To carry on some judging and demonstration work in every club.

To hold a demonstration training meeting, probably one for clothing clubs and a second one for cooking and canning clubs combined.

To have the products of a larger proportion of the clubs in the county entered in the county and state exhibits.

To do simple millinery work in some of the clothing clubs.

To have one or two trips to mills, bakeries, stores and other places of interest and instruction for homemaking club members.

To take more pictures showing club members in action and club members' products for use in explaining the work to new leaders and parents.

TWO EASTERN CONNECTICUT COUNTIES HAD FAIRLY BUSY YEAR IN BUILDING

Total of $4,529,553 in New London and Windham Counties Fell Behind the Preceding Year—Both Norwich and New London Show Smaller Figures—Willimantic Made Big Gain—New Bank Buildings in Jewett City and Willimantic—Additions at State Farm for Women.

The twelve months of 1929 were a fairly busy year in building activities in New London and Windham counties, where a total of $4,529,553 was recorded, but this fell behind the figure of $5,952,245 for 1928. Some of the more notable pieces of construction were a new inn building and a group of county home buildings in Norwich, a new bank home for the Willimantic Savings institute and a new building for the Jewett City Savings bank.

Towards the year's total New London county gave estimated expenditures of $3,517,743 which compared with $5,196,285 for 1928. In this Norwich showed $932,350 which was less than the preceding year's figure of $1,017,633, and New London likewise fell below the previous year, having $1,613,393 for 1929 as compared with $2,188,652 for 1928. In the other parts of the county there were estimated building expenditures of $972,000.

In Windham county, due largely to increased building figures in Willimantic, the total was $1,011,810 which substantially exceeded the 1928 total of $755,960. In Willimantic, where the building expenditures in 1928 were estimated at $55,960, they were $272,810 in 1929. Putnam held practically the same figure for both years, the estimate being $224,000 for 1929 and the same was true in other parts of the county where the estimated expenditures were $515,000.

Norwich building lines experienced a year of more than usual slackness in 1929, which is indicated when it is seen that the estimated expenditures, according to the building permits issued, were less than the total for either of the two preceding years. There were 429 permits issued in city and town for a total estimated expenditure of $932,350, which was $85,283 less than the estimate of the year before, but the permits numbered 33 more in 1929 than in 1928.

Except for the erection of the Norwich Inn on property adjoining the Norwich Golf club and the three buildings for the New London county home on Laurel Hill road, both of which were started during the year and are yet to be completed, there were no big pieces of work, but the activity of the year was largely in the construction of new dwellings, of which there were 82, and of new garages, of which there were 115. Forty-nine of the new dwellings were erected in the city limits and 33 in sections of the town outside the city.

In mercantile and industrial lines, Ponemah Mills at Taftville erected a fine, new brick office building standing detached from the main property and providing very complete accommodations for the office and accounting work of this important industry.

Jewett City Savings Erecting New Building

The new buildings erected during 1929 within the borough limits of Jewett City and the near-by Griswold districts, including alterations and enlargement of business blocks and residences, have cost in excess of $115,000. The main item of new construction made necessary on account of increasing business demands, is the new Jewett City Savings bank, which is nearing completion at the corner of Ashland and Main streets, Park square. This beautiful building is to be completed and fitted at a cost of $80,000. The plot, with a frontage of 72 feet on Main street is 100 feet deep, and was formerly a part of the A. A. Young estate. The material of construction is tapestry brick with limestone trimmings. The Main street front, all completed, shows a pillar effect with a wide main entrance on Main street. Above the door is to be placed an electric clock, which will be synchronized daily to Western Union time. Across the front, at a level with the cornices, there is to be seen the title, Jewett City Savings bank, cut in the stone adornment. Upon a granite foundation in the near center the chilled steel, burglar and fireproof vault is to be placed. The furniture, fittings and all items connected with this modern banking institution are to be selected with care, and with a view to perfection in the line of accommodation for its thousands of depositors and patrons.

In the Belvidere section, on Talcott avenue, Eli Abraham and Mike David have each built attractive new homes for themselves. William M. McNicol has expended close to $25,000 in building seven new four-room bungalows of varying dimensions. These are all on East Main street sites, overlooking the Ashland reservoir. Gustav Almorth, at considerable expense, has proceeded well toward the reclaiming and developing of the Ashland Lake sites on a large tract purchased of Mr. McNicol. Mr. Almorth has built a house for himself and has sold many attractive lots for building. The improvement of the Blanchard block on Park square, at a cost of over $5,000, includes besides two new stores on the street front, a number of residential apartments on the upper floors. At the corner of Palmer avenue and North Main street, Stanislaw Maciejewski has built a new block, which will represent an outlay of around $20,000. On the East Main front there are stores, with modern equipment, and residential apartments above. The two flats, owned by Edward Blanchard and Mr. Maciejewski, should, to some extent, solve the borough's housing problem. Miss Delphine Beauregard, the owner of the block of that name, has expended several thousands of dollars in a front two-story addition which brings the two stores below forward to the street grade, also providing for a large flat above, facing on Main street. The improvements on the late G. A. Haskell property in the Park square section, have been made by Mrs. Grace Webster, the present owner. An extension to the business block on the corner of Tracy avenue and the improvements and alterations on the residence of Mrs. Webster have beautified the property, made the living rooms more convenient and materially enhanced its value.

PONEMAH MILLS NEW OFFICE BUILDING, TAFTVILLE

ERECTING NEEDED NEW BUILDINGS AT THE STATE FARM FOR WOMEN, NIANTIC

Administration Building to be Occupied by First of February—Receiving and Industrial Buildings to be Ready Early In May—Work Just Started on Prison Building.

The need for adequate buildings at the State Farm for Women, which is located at Bride lake, Niantic, in the town of East Lyme, brought a response from the last legislature of an appropriation of $250,000, through which construction work has been started on three new buildings which are well on the road to completion and, under favorable conditions, should be ready for occupancy by the first of May.

These are the administration building, for which the appropriation was $35,000, the receiving building for which $130,000 was provided, and the industrial building, for which $75,000 was appropriated. All will be important adjuncts in the correction and rehabilitation work so well carried on at the institution where Miss Elizabeth Munger is superintendent.

The administration building, which is to be used for the offices of the instituton, will house a part of the administrative staff. It is of brick, fire-resisting construction, 75x26 feet, two stories. On the first floor will be the superintendent's office, the deputy superintendent's office, accounting office, parole office, secretary's office and rooms for stenographers, visitors and mail. On the second floor will be ten bedrooms for the staff. This building is now under roof and will be ready for occupancy by February.

The receiving building, which will contain all facilities for medical treatment, including dental and surgical, will be of brick, fire-resisting construction, two stories, including basement (full height) where the kitchen, dining room, garages and hydro-therapeutic equipment will be installed. The general dimensions of this building are: 152 feet 8 inches by 61 feet 10 inches. On the first floor will be quarantine quarters and single rooms for 18, clinic, dental department and rooms for psychological and psychiatric examinatons; also recreation room; on the second floor will be 32 single rooms for inmates as well as bedrooms for staff. This building will function as a clearing house for all admissions and for the detention of all cases suffering from venereal disease until recommended by the physician for transfer to other buildings.

The industrial building was originally planned to contain a central laundry, canning and bakery facilities but these were omitted owing to lack of sufficient funds. The present building, of the same construction as the above is 63 feet 3 inches by 65 feet 2 inches. It will contain an assembly room, two stories high, and class rooms on two floor which will provide space for academic, sewing, domestic science and art needle work instruction.

The building to house the women from the state prison has just been started. It is a two story building of the same type of construction as the others and will house 30 women and five officers. It will also contain work rooms and will function as a complete and separate unit.

BALTIC ACADEMY ERECTS ADDITION TO PROVIDE RESIDENCE FOR NUNS

Crowded conditions at the Baltic convent have been met this year by the erection of an addition to the main building of the Academy of the Holy Family, joining the southeast section of the main building. The addition is a four story and basement building, erected at an approximate cost of $70,000, and will be used exclusively for residence by the nuns of the convent.

The addition is 98x76 feet, of brick with cast stone trim, that presents an attractive appearance. On the main floor are the kitchen, living room, dining room, recreation room and a large enclosed piazza, about 13x10. The three floors above are to be used entirely for sleeping quarters, and contain 36 sleeping rooms, each 10x10 feet, known as cells. Each has a closet with places for books, a [illegible] light and plugs on the side for [illegible] light attachment. On these three upper floors also are eight [illegible]

The walls in the building are [illegible] hard finish plaster, brick [illegible] used on the sidewalls and [illegible] on the ceilings. In the bath [illegible] and the porches the sidewalls are [illegible] tile. Floors in the building are [illegible] sanded and varnished, and all [illegible] finish is hardwood.

In the basement are 14 showers [illegible] a large shower bath room. This [illegible] also contains the boiler room and [illegible] large room for storage. Heat will be furnished by a hot water system and the building is supplied with both reservoir water and spring water.

IMPORTANT IMPROVEMENTS MADE IN YEAR AT NORWICH STATE HOSPITAL

Sewage Disposal Plant is Ready for Use—Addition Made to Cow Barn and New Hog Pen Built—New Equipment For Power House—Walks and Roadways Improved.

Through appropriations made by the state legislature, several important pieces of work have been carried on at the Norwich state hospital during the past year, that have included installation of a sewage disposal plant, an addition to the cow barn, the erection of a new hog pen, extensive improvements of roads and walks on the hospital grounds, and the installation of a new boiler and stoker for the power and heating plant. Although along different lines, each contributes a factor towards the efficient administration which this big state institution enjoys under the superintendency of Dr. E. S. Burdsall.

DR. E. S. BURDSALL

Superintendent

By the use of the sewage disposal plant, which is about finished and ready to be put into operation, the state hospital will cease to continue to add to the pollution of the Thames river, as all sewage will be handled through the sewage plant, which is an interesting adjunct to the operation of the hospital property. It has three buildings, of which the largest is the drying bed, built largely of glass, in which the sewage is disposed for drying under the rays of the sun. The plant has cost approximately $65,000.

At a cost of about $12,000 a new wing has been added to the cow barn and other renovations have been made so that the barn is now admirably adapted to provide accommodations for the registered herd of 80 Holsteins, which has been built up by the hospital management. All young stock are now being raised on the farm, which is expecting to have about 120 calves in the herd this spring.

Another one of the farm interests which has had special attention is the raising of hogs as an important food supply for the institution. A new hog pen has been built at a cost of about $2,000, big enough to take care of 400 hogs, and it is the expectation of the management to have 800 hogs on the farm some day.

An improvement that strikes the public eye is the work that has been done on roadways and walks about the grounds at an expenditure of about $18,000. This includes a cement walk along the front of the hospital grounds on the Military Highway and improvements on the walks and roadways within the grounds.

At the power house the new boiler and stoker have been put in at an approximate cost of $25,000 and there is another $25,000 to be spent in the spring when automatic coal handling machinery and a new side track are to be put in at the power house.

Bank and Mill Work In Danielson Building

While there was considerable building activity in Danielson during 1929, there was nothing approaching a boom. A number of new homes were built in various sections of the borough, and a considerable amount of remodeling work was done.

The year marked the completion of the Brooklyn Savings bank's new home at the corner of Main and Academy streets. Construction of this building was begun in the spring of 1928. It was formally opened to the public on April 1, of this year, with a reception for the public during the evening hours, several thousand people improving the opportunity to inspect it. The building is of brick, in colonial style, with white marble pillars and marble trim.

The interior is handsomely appointed, and it has been rated by a great many people who have been about as being one of the finest banks in a community the size of Danielson in New England. The Brooklyn Savings bank was incorporated in 1872, and did business in Brooklyn for many years before removing to Danielson in 1913, that it might enjoy the prospective growth and expansion that it has since experienced.

Reconditioning and refitting the Connecticut mills by its present owners, Powdrell and Alexander, involved several months of work in 1929. This big plant had been idle for many months when the P. and A. company purchased it and started to make the many changes in its interior that were necessary to fit it for a curtain manufacturing plant, which it is today, with about 750 operatives and office workers engaged there. One large section on one floor of the mill has been equipped and is now in use as general offices of the company, these offices having been removed here from Boston a few months ago.

The handsomely appointed private office of the president, J. W. Powdrell, and the adjoining display room to which buyers come from many parts of the United States and Canada, is located at this plant. Many thousands of dollars were expended by the concern in making this plant ready for its present use. This company plans the construction of a bleachery building in 1930.

Offices Moved To Danielson

In the closing days of 1929, the first of the present week, in fact, the general offices of the Quinebaug company and of the Wauregan company, cotton manufacturing concerns, were removed here from Providence. They are now located in what was the Quinebaug store building, a three-story brick structure on the West Side. The making of the necessary changes in the interior of the building has been underway for many weeks. At the west side of the building a garage of several cars capacity has been constructed and a new concrete sidewalk built along the frontage of the building.

While Danielson did not witness the construction of the new hotel that it expected to see built during 1929, the prospect that such an establishment will be acquired in 1930 seems good. The past fall E. C. Rogers, owner of the Putnam Inn, purchased the T. E. Hopkins estate on North Main street and has plans prepared to enlarge it and develop it in Spanish style of architecture. Mr. Rogers plans carried into execution would give Danielson one of the very nice inns of Connecticut.

Real Estate Changes

Numbers of pieces of property changed hands in real estate deals in Danielson and nearby parts of the town during 1929. A notable purchase was that of the old Windham County Savings bank building in the heart of the business section by George A. LeClair from the Brooklyn Savings bank, which had owned the structure for years. Mr. LeClair spent several thousand dollars remodeling the interior on the street level floor and in installing a modern store front, at sidewalk level.

The major road building activity in this territory during the year just closed had to do with the construction of the several miles of highway between Brooklyn Center and Pomfret, to connect up with the state highway leading through that place, on into the Woodstocks and to the Massachusetts line. Another section of this highway was built during the year from Canterbury Green southward toward Newent. When this road is completed to Newent there will be a new hard-surfaced route running from Taftville right through into Massachusetts, through a beautiful countryside, and it is certain to be one of the most popular scenic routes in eastern Connecticut.

Boom For 1930 Launched

Danielson enters 1930 with a building boom launched. The plan is to construct at least 50 homes to relieve the present housing shortage. The financing will be done by issuing a series of shares that it is hoped will be subscribed up to 5,000, by the Danielson Building and Loan association. There are already assurances that many shares will be signed up for promptly and that the building of some of the houses will be underway early in the spring.

Willimantic Savings Has Remodeled Bank Building

Building activity in Willimantic enjoyed a strong recuperative period during 1929, climbing out of a most pronounced slump in 1928 to the handsome figure of $272,810. This total is gained from the estimated costs of building operations recorded in 95 permits issued by the city building inspector, a position now being held by Acting Fire Chief Michael J. English. These estimates are conservative and are given before the work is done.

A comparison of building values for the past five years follows: 1925, $627,970; 1926, $212,010; 1927, $303,355; 1928, $55,960; 1929, $272,810.

A [illegible] of the number of permits issued during the past several years: 1923, 146; 1924, 123; 1925, 120; 1926, 93; 1927 75; 1928, 63; 1929, 95.

Bank Building Re-modeled

By far the highest in value of any one permit was that issued during the past year for the complete alteration of the Willimantic Savings institute building. The permit was issued at an estimated cost of $5,000 but the completed cost, which embodies gratifying improvements, is expected to run considerably higher. The exterior of the building is now completed. It is of fluted stone work running the equivalent of four stories in height and of most pleasing appearance. The new structure is a notable asset to the business district of the city.

The wave of store-front remodeling which began in earnest in 1928 continued during 1929 and with but few exceptions all leading stores in the city boast modern fronts that compare favorably with fashionable shops in larger cities. Merchants on sidestreets in the business district have fallen in line with the new store front movement. The last permit of consequence to be issued called for the expenditure of several thousand dollars in remodeling the entire Church street frontage of the Willimantic Lumber & Coal company offices and show rooms. Attractive dormer windows are to be annexed to the present office quarters. The adjoining show rooms are to be extended on a frontage over 50 feet in length to the Valley street junction, the exterior to be finished in tapestry brick.

St. Joseph's Rectory

Another noteworthy building erected during the year was the rectory of St. Joseph's parish on Jackson street. The rectory, built of colored brick, is one of the most modern and attractive parish residences in this part of the state.

Other residential building followed well along the bungalow or cottage type, adding approximately 18 tenements at a cost of about $59,000. This figure does not include the rectory nor the annexation of several tenements provided for under the heading of alterations and additions except the remodeling of the former Hayden residence on Pleasant street into model apartments. Based on the above estimate, Willimantic now has a housing capacity of 2,879 tenements contained in 1,979 dwellings. The tendency toward residences of the bungalow or cottage type has prevailed here for the past four years with the result that several new developments outside of the more settled residential areas are noted.

Increase in Garages

The number of garages built for private use reached a new high mark in 1929, there having been 28 garage permits estimated to house 52 automobiles. While in 1928 there were 29 private garages built at a total cost of $12,916 and providing 39 stalls, during 1929 Willimantic landowners invested about $18,000 in private garages. It is noted here that in 1927 there were 34 garages, containing 79 stalls built at a cost of only $11,650, while in 1926 there were 28 garages with a capacity of 71 stalls representing an expenditure of $12,035. While the average cost per garage stall for 1928 approved by the building inspector, was about $219, the average stall cost in 1929 was approximately $192. The fine new Sousa Motor Sales public garage on upper Main street is the only new structure of this type.

WORK BEFORE PLEASURE SHOWN IN CAR OUTPUT

NEW YORK, Jan. 1 — (AP) — More trucks and fewer passenger cars sum up the present trend in motor car production

Commerce department reports from 148 automobile manufacturers in the United States show that factory sales of new trucks continued higher in 1929 than in 1928, while figures for the passenger car output declined.

Production of passenger cars in November totalled 169,309, compared with 216,754 in November, 1928. The number of trucks produced in November, 1929, was 48,513, compared with 59,-688 for the same month last year.

Smaller Building Year Shown in New London

Building figures in New London in 1929, according to the summary of permits issued through the office of Building Inspector William Gunn, Jr., showed a valuation of $1,613,393 for 446 permits. This was a decline from the figures of the preceding year when there were 566 permits for $2,188,652

SPECTACULAR UPSWING OF STOCK PRICES IN FINAL SESSION OF YEAR

NEW YORK, Dec. 31.—(AP)—The bull spirit was revived for the final session of the stock market year today, a year in which speculators for the advance met with the most dramatic reverses of modern financial history, and in which much of the new economic theory springing from a five-year bull market, was completely discredited.

The year's final market session saw a swift upswing of prices, but trading was at a low ebb, only 3,-[illegible] shares changing hands. More than 50 shares closed from 4 to nearly 10 points higher. The advance, however, appeared to be largely the result of shifting of positions for tax purposes. The market has been dominated during recent sessions by selling of outstanding issues for tax purposes by traders long of the market. Today it was the shorts' turn. They were able to cover their commitments without taking profits taxable in their 1929 income, as today's transactions will not be cleared until Jan. 2. The selling by longs had to be for cash in order to appear in 1929 statements, and the extent of last minute liquidation of this character was surprising. Veterans in Wall street could not remember when the ticker printed so many cash sales.

The thoroughly liquidated state of the market, however, was attested by the scarcity of offerings, and shorts were forced to bid actively for leading shares. Moreover, the dormant bull crowd awoke long enough to take advantage of the situation and give the shorts a run.

Call money held at 6 per cent despite further moderate calling of loans. This contrasts with 12 per cent money at the close of last year and 20 per cent money in March. Credit normally cheapens markedly after the turn of the year. Undoubtedly the reduction of approximately $4,500,000,000 in brokers loans during the past three months has vastly improved credit conditions both here and abroad. The Belgian bank rate was reduced from 4 1-2 to 3 1-2 per cent today, which may foreshadow a reduction in the rate of the Bank of France.

Many bankers hold, however, that there are further adjustments which should be made in the domestic credit situation. The condition statement of weekly reporting member banks today disclosed a moderate increase in loans on securities, and a total approximating the high levels of September. One of the theories of the "new economy" of the late bull market which was most completely discredited by the autumn crash was that the supply of credit is unlimited so long as you are willing to pay the price. The price to Wall street went as high as 9 1-2 per cent for time money in May, the highest in 26 years. Wall street seemed willing enough to pay that price, but was called upon to pay the cost of disaster in the autumn.

Business and industrial reports of the day were in keeping with the recent trends. The weekly steel trade reviews indicated that requirements for railway and structural materials is holding up well, and that automotive demand is slowly gaining. Mill operations, which has recently fallen close to 60 per cent of capacity, as compared to above 80 per cent a year ago, are expected to be reported at 60 per cent of capacity at the close of the week. A tabulation of net operating income of the first 75 railroads to report for November shows a reduction of 22 per cent from the previous November.

At the close of the year, the Standard Statistics Co.— Associated Press composite index of 90 leading stocks at 110.3, compared to 130.5 on Dec. 7, the peak of the rally from the minimum level of 140.3 per cent on Nov. 13, the bottom of the crash. The high record of 263.8 was reached Sept. 7. The year's final level of 170.3 compares with 158.4 at the close of 1928, which was the peak of that year, and approximates the levels of early October, 1928.

Utilities and leading industrials were prominent in today's rally. Shares selling up about 4 to 10 points included such issues as American Telephone, American and Foreign Power, American Can, American Tobacco B, American Water Works, A. M. Byers, J. I. Case, Eastman Kodak, General Electric, Macy, Missouri-Kansas-Texas, Republic Steel, Simmons, Southern Railway, Standard Gas, Underwood Elliott, U. S. Steel, and Westinghouse Electric. High flyers were International Business Machines, up 12, Western Union, up 13 1-2, and Midland Steel preferred, up 13 1-2.

The commodity markets were steady to firm. Wheat futures gained about 1 cent a bushel, reflecting firm foreign markets and good export demand. Corn futures were firm on unfavorable weather reports and smaller receipts at markets. The cotton market continued quiet with prices moving in a narrow range.

Foreign exchanges reflected preholiday dullness. Sterling cables sagged 1-16 to $4.88 1-8, while French franc cables rallied 1-16 to 3.94 cents, at which level further takings of New York gold would be profitable.

THE CURB MARKET

NEW YORK, Dec. 31. — (AP)—The curb market ended the most trying year since it came in from outdoors today with a brisk bullish demonstration. Scores of leading shares mounted 1 to 5 points, while a few of the more mercurial issues made wider gains, running to a maximum of 30 points in degree. Trading, however, was in comparatively light volume, sales running but little above 800,000 shares.

The upturn appeared to be accelerated by covering by shorts who have been waiting until today to take their profits, so they would not be taxed on them until 1931, as the day's trades will not be cleared until January 2. Operators for the rise took advantage of the covering to enliven the proceedings.

The buying movement was broad, including practically all sections of the list, but was most conspicuous in the utilities and oils. Investment trusts also made marked progress. Northern States Power closed nearly 10 points higher, and American Gas and Electric, Electric Bond & Share, Central States Electric Allied Power, American Superpower and American and Foreign Power Warrants were among issues rising 2 to 5 points.

Chesebrough Manufacturing, usually classed with the oils, rose 26 1-2 points. Ohio Oil mounted 3 and Gulf nearly 5. Goldman Sachs was a strong spot in the investment trusts, rising 2 points. Among the lower priced issues, Interstate Equities, Shenandoah, and selected industries rose 1 to 3 points, and National Investors 7.

Among the specialties, Ulen & company rose a couple of points on announcement of the signing of a contract to build a dame in Chile. Mines were strong, Newmont rising about 7 and Mayflower Associates more than 3 points.

A handful of stocks were weak. American Cigar, Curtis Light, Landis Machine, and United Chemical breaking to new lows. A particularly weak spot was Wiebolt Stores, which dropped 15 points to 22. U. S. and International Securities, which had previously traded at 4 3-4, changed hands at 1.

BOND MARKET

NEW YORK, Dec. 31—(AP)—The close of an exceptionally dull year found the average of bond prices about midway between the high and low for 1929. The former level was reached last January, the latter in September when interest rates were at their peak.

Between those months bonds slumped almost steadily as the country's credit structure was burdened with the load of stock speculation and interest rates soared. After the October crash there was a brief revival in fixed income securities as money cheapened but the improvement came just before the seasonal tightening in funds and was short-lived.

From late November until today prices tended lower in a thin market, although bonds of the highest grade maintained a firmness that suggested a much stronger market when unfavorable temporary conditions had disappeared.

In some respects, today's session was typical of the year. Convertibles were strong, and it was the share feature group that gave the list its life during the dreary months of the long decline. Also, the market's turnover was very small, reminiscent of the mid-summer apathy.

On the other hand, the hardening process which has been at work in investment loans during the past six weeks was continued and net gains exceeded losses by a comfortable margin. The larger declines were traceable to special conditions, while the smaller recessions resulted from final tax selling which was for cash.

Time money was dull at 4 3-4 to 5 per cent, the prevailing rates of the holiday period. A year ago the charge was 7 1-2 to 7 3-4. The difference reflects the improvement in the credit situation which followed the break in stocks.

Because of the light trading today's market was uninteresting. The advances in the convertibles ranged from 1 to more than 4 points in the more active issues, with American Telephone 4 1-2s, exchangeable for stock beginning Thursday, moving up 4 1-2 points and maintaining their customary leadership in volume. International Telephone 4 1-2s advanced 2 1-2; Alleghany 5s, American I. G. Chemical 5 1-2s and Missouri Pacific 5 1-2s, one point each; and Atchison 4 1-2s, 1 1-2.

The utilities provided some of the best gains in the general list, but high grade industrials were not far behind. The rails were slightly less active than in recent sessions. Foreign bonds were much stronger and French 7 1-2s celebrated the close of the year by making a record 1929 price at 113 1-2.

New York state railways issues suffered from the announcement of a receivership for the traction company, the 4 1-2s dropped 2 1-2 points and the 6 1-2s tumbled 5 3-16, but the latter loss was on the sale of a single $1,000 bond. Cuba Cane Sugar 7s and 8s were undisturbed by word that neither principal nor interest on the former, due tomorrow, would be paid. The company is in a receivership and its securities have been weak for several months.

CHICAGO GRAIN MARKET

CHICAGO, Dec. 31—(AP)—Optimism regarding the 1930 outlook for higher prices dominated the wheat market today. United States wheat at the Gulf of Mexico ready for shipment overseas was reported as commanding the best basis yet this season, equalizing the price of May delivery. Besides, a leading Chicago authority announced that for the first time since July, 1925, commercial wheat stocks of the world now show a smaller total than for the corresponding stage of the preceding year.

After scoring advances throughout the day, wheat closed unsettled 5-8c to 1 1-8c a bushel higher than yesterday's finish. Corn closed at 1 3-8c net decline to 1-8c gain, oats 1c off to 3-8c up, and provisions unaltered to a setback of 10c.

EASTERN CONNECTICUT LEADERS IN OPTIMISTIC MOOD FOR NEW YEAR

Heads of Business, Civic and Social Organizations in New London and Windham Counties Will Support Plans for Community Advancement—Much Accomplished in Past Year in Many Lines.

Leaders in business, civic and social organizations in Norwich, Putnam, Danielson, Willimantic and New London record a year of rewarded effort in many lines as they look back upon the months of 1929. New steps on the road of progress will be their aim for 1930, which they approach with the determination that it shall find them a-glow with the spirit to realize the best for their communities.

What the past year has been to them and what they anticipate in the opportunities which the new year offers are set down in their observations upon the activities in which their groups have been engaged during the year that has passed. "Onward" is the rallying cry as the new year opens before them.

Takes Active Part In Vital Norwich Interests

Activities of the Norwich chamber of commerce during the current year just closing have been many and varied. Civic projects have been undertaken and completed, the program of trade events under the auspices of the Merchants bureau has been carried forward with increasing vigor and results and there has been a great deal of time devoted to industrial activities.

Many other miscellaneous activities such as the organization of the Contact club and membership meetings; the work of the aviation committee and the publicity for the city; Norwich Progress exposition; the entertainment of the fresh air children have been included in the programme.

FRANK R. MURDY
President

The close of the year 1929 found us with the completion of financing of the Norwich Inn project, resulting in the subscription of over $230,000.

The next important event was the merchants' night dinner in January when William Pidgeon of Rochester, N. Y., addressed a group of 186 business men on the subject "Business and Its New Dawn." This meeting was followed by a series of other important meetings during the course of the year which proved popular.

On February 22nd—Patriotic dinner, speaker, Gen. Paul B. Malone—"International Trade and War," attendance 377.

March 12th—Bankers' night, speaker, Lester B. Shippee, state bank commissioner, "Banking Progress in Connecticut." 84.

April 16th—Public utility night—speaker, John Fitzgerald, "Government and its Relation to Transportation." 88.

Sept. 16th—"Calendar Reform,"—speaker, Paul Wilson.

Oct. 14th—"Your Town and My Town"—James E. Gheen.

Dec. 20—"Christmas Spirit"—Dr. Clarence A. Barbour.

The Contact club was organized in January to provide a medium for fellowship to the many members of the chamber who were not at present connected with any other luncheon clubs. This organization has grown until the attendance now is averaging about 40 and a great deal of interest is being shown in the weekly meetings.

The Norwich Progress Magazine was continued through the year until the month of June, carrying all the facts of the chamber activities to the members. In the fall the directors approved the publication of a new type of magazine called the "Months Work," which it is believed will save time and expense and for which arrangements have been made locally for printing.

Aviation

One of the most active committees of the chamber during the year has been that headed by Walter F. Lester, engaged in studying the airport situation as it affects Norwich. The services of the firm of Chandler & Palmer have been very valuable in completing this survey. Meetings were held with the commissioner of aviation for the state of Connecticut. As is quite frequent in the case of a project of this nature, it takes considerable time and work to bring about definite results. However, the committee have been authorized by the board of directors to make the necessary endeavors to carry out the original recommendations of the survey which recommended the Preston Plains site as the most suitable for an airport in the vicinity of Norwich, and the only site which met the full approval of state commissioner of aviation, Clarence M. Knox.

position was held and attended by over

In May the Norwich Progress ex-1500. Seventy booths attractively displayed products of local manufacture, modern labor saving devices, household furnishings, a few motor boats and automobiles. The show was well diversified and attractive.

Publicity

The office continued the distribution of Norwich publicity booklets to many hundreds of inquiries received from all over the country. Many pictures have been taken in preparation for a new booklet now under consideration to be known as "Norwich—Connecticut's Summer Playground." Views in this booklet will include the beaches, the Nelseco, Mohegan Park views, golf club, views of the Harvard-Yale boat-races, some of the summer camps and fishing scenes.

Provisions were made by many Norwich citizens to entertain the fresh air children from New York as in previous years. This year a total of 58 comprised the Norwich assignment.

Industrial Commission

The Norwich industrial commission was organized during the year and its purposes defined as follows:

The industrial commission recommends that the chamber of commerce of Norwich adopt the following program for the encouragement of industrial development of Norwich:

1. Actively strive to assist in the development of established industries.

(a) to cooperate and encourage in any and all practical ways other than direct financial or promotion activities.

2. Actively strive to interest new business to establish themselves in Norwich.

(a) to thoroughly investigate such new business.

(b) to assist same in locating in available buildings or refer them to the Norwich Industrial Development Co.

(c) to encourage the Norwich Industrial Development company to raise money which would be available to erect buildings for new industries when needed and at terms of mutual benefit.

This committee has been actively studying many industrial problems. The very nature of the committee's work makes it impossible many times to publish the facts of the great amount of work that is being done. Many projects have been considered and worked upon. No definite additions to the industrial community have been made through the efforts of the committee as yet, although many prospects have been interviewed. The lack of suitable space has been the real difficulty. Plans are now underway which if completed, will enable the city to be in position to interest new industries in new factory buildings under a plan that will be equitable for the industry and for the city.

The activities of the solicitations committee in investigating the various advertising and fund raising schemes were continued through the year as usual saving many thousands of dollars for the business and professional men by the refusal of the committee to endorse unworthy projects.

The monthly business survey was continued through the year for use in the state wide survey conducted by the Connecticut state chamber and for local information.

There is an increasing number of calls being made through the retail credit bureau which now has active records on over 20,000 accounts. Approximately 30 meetings were held during the year for the purpose of discussing various accounts.

The merchants bureau conducted several successful trade events, including two Dollar days, two Suburban days, the spring and fall openings. This organization has had several meetings during the year, at which matters pertaining to the welfare of the merchants were discussed. A summer closing schedule and the Christmas opening were carried out as in the past. A committee known as the summer camps committee has been active in focusing attention of business interests upon the value and importance of summer camps locally in the vicinity of Norwich. One of the items of importance carried out by this committee was the tour to the summer camps.

The chamber has also voted upon all of the U. S. referenda and has also acted upon many recommendations pending before the legislature.

Membership of 477

In March the chamber of commerce undertook an expansion campaign in order to establish a budget of sufficient size to carry on the activities of the chamber of commerce, merchants bureau and credit bureau on a three-year basis. In the course of the campaign it was found that the membership roster had ben increased to 477, which is the high-water mark in the history of the Norwich chamber and that a total of $17,500 had been suscribed.

Thames River Channel

During the latter part of the year it has been necessary for the chamber to secure more action in support of the Thames river channel deepening project. For some unknown reason the dredging concern that was at work on this matter ceased operations in October and the chamber has been actively at work with representatives in Washington to revive it. Letters of assurance have been received from Senator Bingham and Congressman Freeman that the work will be completed presumably before the spring of 1930. However, a movement is on foot now to deepen the channel to 25 feet up as far as Allyn's Point. The city of Norwich is very much interested in this whole situation as the industrial progress of the community in future years depends to a large extent upon its success.

The yard and garden contest attracted a great deal of attention this year. A total of over 75 entries were made and the prizes totaled $65 and were awarded in October. The committee of judges that viewed all of the gardens in the contest were unanimous in their expressions of enthusiasm over the improvements made throughout the city. Mayor Robbins very heartily gave his endorsement to the project.

The directors of the chamber worked conscientiously throughout the year having held eleven regular meetings and several special meetings.

In August a delegation of chamber members joined with His Honor, Mayor Lee Roy Robbins in a tour to Vermont where the Lord Mayor Herbert F. Gowen of Norwich, England, was welcomed to New England and entertained at the Middlebury Inn, Middlebury, Vt., the Williams Inn at Williamstown, Mass. and the Lord Jeffrey at Amherst, on route to Norwich. While in Norwich the lord mayor was entertained by the Rotary club, took part in the breaking of ground for the Norwich Inn and dedicated a memorial to the Mohegan Sachem Momohet.

The members of the chamber of commerce who not only through their financial support but through their sacrifice of time have contributed to making this programme of accomplishments possible, should be congratulated.

There is no other organization in Norwich which affords the opportunity for service to the community as a whole as the chamber of commerce. The success of the chamber of commerce depends to a large degree upon the interest and enthusiasm of the members toward its program of work. The fact that over 150 members of the organization have served on various committees through the year should be of interest. The record of the preceding year is an enviable one and I have every reason to believe that 1930 will be equally so.

FRANK R. MURDY
President, Norwich Chamber of Commerce.

Woman's City Club Sets High-Purposed Goal

In the midst of its third year of being, the Woman's City club greets its fellow citizens heartily and offers the full strength of its membership of 517 women to the betterment of Norwich. Fully and deeply entrenched in the civic life of the city and town, they have begun work that has grown already to large proportions. The Norwich Choral society had its beginning in the music department chorus of the club, the Girls' City club, numbering 3-odd teen-age girls, sprang from a small girls' work committee started a year ago. Literary Norwich will be studied in the literature department during the spring. Art exhibits arranged for by the art department, after a private showing to members are opened to the public for their delectation and instruction. Every opportunity to assist in community enterprises is welcomed and supported by members of the civics department. They help by co operating with all other civic groups in the city.

It is with keen enthusiasm that the club pushes on to the betterment of the life of the community and the better acquaintance of the women of Norwich, joined together to reach a lofty and high-purposed goal.

MRS. CHARLES BREED GILBERT,
President Woman's City club.

Norwich Lions Support Community Enterprises

The Lions club of Norwich during the past year, has lived up to and practiced the code of ethics laid down for the guidance of Lions clubs.

In doing this we have aided civic and community enterprises both as a club, and by the individual members of the club working on different committees.

We have given aid to worthy families, and have had the pleasure of entertaining children at a Thanksgiving dinner and a theatre party. We enter the new year with a strong purpose and resolve to widen our activities, and to do more for the wonderful community in which we live.

CHARLES W. CASSIDY
President

The Norwich Lions club takes this opportune time to wish all the citizens of Norwich, a very happy and a more prosperous New Year.

CHARLES W. CASSIDY,
President Norwich Lions Club.

Cooperation in Danielson By Business Organizations

While both the Danielson chamber of commerce and the Danielson Building and Loan association have regularly pursued normal activities during 1929, there came for them, jointly, the big opportunity of the year as late as December.

After meetings of their directorates there followed endorsement by the stockholders of the Building and Loan association of the plan to promote the sale of a new series of 5,000 shares, the income of $5,000 per month to be used in constructing new homes to meet Danielson's business needs.

The fact that this project was launched right in the midst of the holiday season has for the time being, hindered it hitting its stride, but after New Years a concentrated drive will be inaugurated to put the movement over the top.

Some business men—a few—have signified their intention of subscribing for a sufficient number of shares to insure that each of them or the firms they represent, will build a house. Powdrell and Alexander, anxious for at least two score homes for their employes alone, will lend invaluable aid toward making the building program a success.

W. H. G. Herbison, president of the chamber of commerce, and his board of directors, have give assurance of their hearty co-operation and active support of the plan. Construction of the homes should and probably will be underway in the late part of the present winter and being rushed along in early spring.

Private operators also during the last week of September purchased a block of houselots in the L'Homme street section of the borough, their program calling for the erection of a number of pretty new cottages in that desirable residential section.

Oklahoma Lifts Quarantine

OKLAHOMA CITY, Jan. 1— (AP) — Quarantine on Florida fruits and vegetables has been lifted in Oklahoma. Fear of the pink boll worm, however, has led to a requirement that all cotton seed brought into Oklahoma carry a certificate showing that it has been inspected.

Business Women's Club Active in Many Lines

Another year in the life of the Business and Professional Women's club of Norwich has run its course and as the events of 1929 are reviewed, many are outstanding in their effect upon the success and progress of our organization. Many and varied have been the activities resulting from the efforts made to achieve the aims and purposes of the club: namely, to unite the business and professional women of Norwich in order that there may be a greater solidarity among them for mutual helpfulness and for service in the community; to promote acquaintance and social life among the members; and to provide programs which shall stimulate thought and study of the vital questions of the day.

Through talks at some of our luncheon meetings we have come to a better understanding of the different lines of work carried on in the city and state by women. The objectives and methods of the neuro-psychiatric clinic, of the state department of public welfare, of the work in bacteriology at the Backus hospital, of the evening schools and of the Norwich credit bureau were all clearly presented by workers in these professions at different times. Mrs. Nathan Gilman of Bozrah gave the club members enlightening and interesting information of the work of the National Council of Jewish Women at a luncheon meeting.

In March a prize of $5 was awarded one of the five women students of the public evening schools for attaining a perfect attendance record, awards to the other four being made by other organizations. During the summer three local children who needed vacations but were unable to finance them, were given two weeks at camp.

A talk on Newfoundland by Dr. Lillian Lynes and a description of her trip through southern England by Miss Lucy Abbott, were enjoyed by fellow club members. Miss Amy Cogswell gave a delightful talk about her trip through western Europe, at one of our dinner meetings. The travel talks, however, were not all confined to club members. In January Dan McGowan of Philadelphia and British Columbia greatly interested and pleased an audience in Slater hall with his fascinating pictures and thrilling tales of Banff and the Canadian Rockies. This lecture was open to the public.

MISS BERNICE E. WILLEY
President

Social life among the members was promoted by a frolic and entertainment at the nurses' home in March, a weenie roast and picnic in Mohegan park in September and a dinner and entertainment at Cinderella inn in October.

In November Dr. R. L. Morrow of Wesleyan university lectured on the "Problems of American Democracy," a subject which dealt with the American relations toward the league of nations, the world court, the peace pact and the coming disarmament conference. This meeting was also open to the public and was unusually interesting and full of valuable information, since the subject was one of particularly vital interest to business and professional people.

In April club members received advice on safe investments for business women, from Elbert Church of a Hartford company. In February the club became the recipient of its national charter. This was presented by Miss Kate Ryan of Hartford, then president of the Connecticut State Federation of Business and Professional Women's clubs. Through our federation with the state and national organizations, new friendships have been made with members of other clubs. In the local club itself, also, new friendships have developed and the old ones strengthened.

Following out its policy of supporting in any possible way the prevention of war and the establishment of world peace, the club will this year go on record as endorsing the ratification of the world court protocols, just as in 1928 it endorsed the resolutions of the Kellogg-Briand peace pact.

Thus by means of one activity or another the club has, during the past year, carried on its purposes of pleasant associations, friendly relations and mutual interests and helpfulness. Although we deeply regret the loss of some of our valued members, three of whom, Miss Betsy Mitchell, Miss Dorothy Holden and Miss Josephine Canty, were members of our executive board, through their leaving town, we are looking forward to the fourth year of the club life with interest and enthusiasm. We are confident that the plans and purposes of our organization will be carried forward in the same satisfactory manner by the new members who have joined us, as has been done in the three years which are past, and we anticipate with pleasure a successful year for 1930.

BERNICE E. WILLEY,
President of the Business and Professional Women's Club.

Norwich Merchants Bureau Highly Successful Year

The work of the Merchants bureau of the Norwich chamber of commerce has gone forward with increasing interest during the year just closing.

The "Merchants Night" dinner, held in January, was perhaps the best attended meeting of the year although several others were held as usual.

Four special sales events continued to attract many hundreds of enthusiastic shoppers, not only from Norwich, but from the surrounding trade territory throughout eastern Connecticut. They included the Dollar days in February and August and the Suburban days in May and November. The spring and fall opening programmes both included special features this year which greatly increased the interest of shoppers.

As a part of the programme of the spring opening a fashion show was conducted for the bureau by Miss Katherine Hempstead in the Broadway theatre. The fall opening saw one of the largest crowds ever out for such an occasion, when literally thousands lined the streets to witness the fashion parade of attractive models in magnificent sedans furnished through the courtesy of the automobile dealers of Norwich. The usual prize window contests were featured in both events, as in the past.

The budget for the year provided approximately $3,000 for use in Merchants bureau affairs. Of this amount $1,200 was expended on trade events and the balance, $1,800, for the operation of the credit bureau (salaries, stationery, postage, etc.)

The credit bureau completed the busiest year in its six years of operation. Over 18,000 accounts now compose the record file in this office. The value of this service to the mercantile concern and to business in general is considerable and an increasing number of merchants should avail themselves of it.

The summer-closing schedule and Christmas openings were carried out with nearly 100 per cent. cooperation of the stores.

GLENN R. MERITHEW
President

Last January Cyril E. Fitch was elected president of this organization and served with admirable enthusiasm and interest until he was called, last October, to another position in Rochester, N. Y.

It has been my pleasure to serve out the unexpired term and from what contact I had with the organization previously as a member of the executive committee, coupled with this later service as its president, I can confidentally state that, in my opinion, we have just closed one of the most successful years in our organization's history and I am greatly encouraged over the prospects for 1930.

GLENN R. MERITHEW,
President Norwich Merchants Bureau.

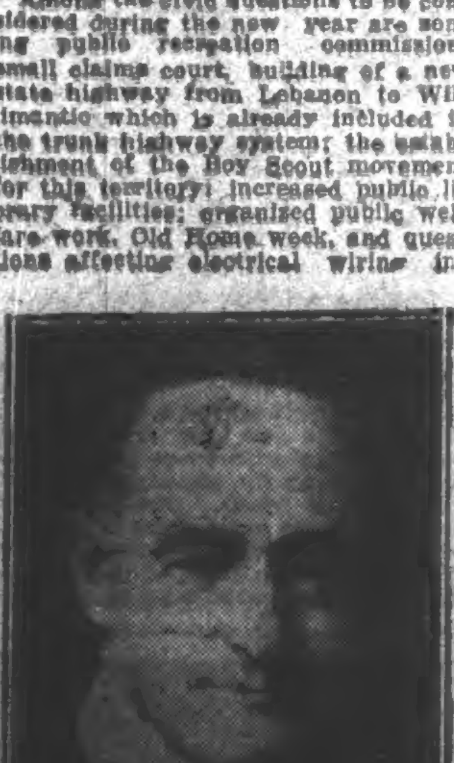
Willimantic Moves On With Progressive Spirit

Willimantic continues its efforts to become a progressive and aggressive community. It has the vision to look into the future with every reason to believe that this community will continue to grow because of its splendid transportation and educational facilities. Located on a direct line of the New Haven railroad from New York to Boston, served by the Central Vermont railroad and the Thames River line, Willimantic is in very fact a community regarded as a transportation center. Willimantic's central location as a distribution point is becoming well known even outside the state. Providence, Boston, Worcester, Springfield, Hartford, Waterbury, New Haven, Bridgeport, the metropolitan cities of southern New England are within easy access from Willimantic, while New York can be reached in a short time from this community by rail, boat or truck. Good transportation facilities are a basic factor for industrial growth, hence Willimantic, possessing this factor to a high degree looks with confidence to further industrial development with consequent increasing population.

Willimantic is the educational center of eastern Connecticut, a fact proven by the following educational institutions: State Normal school, with a dormitory capable of accommodating 150 students; State Training school; State Trade school; while in proximity to this community and naturally within its trading area are the Mansfield State Training school, and Connecticut Agricultural college.

Civic Questions For New Year.

Among the civic questions to be considered during the new year are zoning, public recreation commission, small claims court, building of a new state highway from Lebanon to Willimantic which is already included in the trunk highway system; the establishment of the Boy Scout movement for this territory; increased public library facilities; organized public welfare work, Old Home week, and questions affecting electrical wiring inspection, local milk supply, community advertising, and other matters pertaining to the general welfare and the public good of this community, notably the matter of an aviation field.



JOHN J. O'ROURKE
Secretary

Industrially, Willimantic's manufacturers are men keenly alive to their possibilities. Local industries have been operating on full time schedule for the greater part of 1929. It is only during the past several weeks that operations have slackened, which is usual at this time of the year. A noteworthy fact is that none of our manufacturing plants were closed entirely during any part of 1929. This indicates that the local manufacturers are men of sound business acumen and integrity and that we are fortunate indeed that our industrial enterprises are in the hands of capable and efficient business men. The latest industrial addition to our community, the Willimantic Silk Co., has operated day and night during the past year and its payroll has now reached an average of $4,000 weekly. This concern recently purchased two of the three mill buildings formerly occupied by the Quidnick-Windham Co. This new industry has become a most welcome and important industrial asset to our community. From a public spirited viewpoint, the men of Willimantic are leaving no stone unturned to aid in any manner possible our local industries and in their efforts to attract additional factories. We be-

OLD POMPEY HOLLOW COACH TAVERN RECALLS DAYS OF THE COLONIAL PERIOD IN NEW ENGLAND LIFE

On the Connecticut Path at Warrenville—Haitoric Building Preserves Typical Features of Stage-Coach Days—Mammoth Dining Room Fireplace—Tap-room and Officers' Mess Room Just as They Were More Than a Century and a Half Ago.

Ye Coach Tavern of Pompey Hollow. What intriguing flights of imagination that stirs in these days of swift moving automobiles and thousand-room hotels. It is a magic phrase that causes the doors that guard the memories of the past to swing open on their rusty hinges. It is a phrase that turns time backward in its flight, a magic carpet that transports one back through the years to the days of jolly innkeepers and tallow candles, roaring fireplaces and powdered wigs, stage coaches and hooped skirts, four-post beds and venison. It causes one to forget the hustle and bustle of the twentieth century and remember the staid days of the past, days when news carried by men on horses from one village to another instead of being shot over copper wire or hurtled through the air by radio. Those days when a trip from Boston to New York was an event that came to one but once in a life-time and it was planned weeks ahead and then became a subject of evening conversation for years afterward. Those days are gone and perhaps seem incredible to those of the present generation.

THE TAP-ROOM WHERE BRIMMING TANKARDS OF ALE WERE SERVED

THE OLD COACH TAVERN

But there is a spot less than 30 miles from Norwich where these memories can be awakened and where, by the simple act of crossing a threshold, one steps from the modern world into the midst of colonial antiquity. And as one crosses this threshold he invariably stops and looks back to see whether he really stepped out of an automobile or a stage coach, with its red coated driver and steaming white horses. The transformation is complete, in fact, so complete that it is breath-taking and one wonders whether it is real or just a dream. It is the Coach Tavern known now as the General Palmer Inn.

This inn is now the private residence of Mr. and Mrs. Robert B. Haggett of Warrenville, who purchased the place about seven or eight years ago. They have endeavored to restore the place to its appearance in the early years of the nineteenth century when it was at its height as a turnpike tavern. The house is furnished almost entirely of antiques of the period between 1725 and 1830 when the inn was one of the principal stopping places between Boston and Hartford.

AT POMPEY HOLLOW

Pompey Hollow. How many know where it was? Few, probably, unless it is some of the old residents whose ancestors helped settle this place in colonial days. Pompey Hollow is none other than Warrenville in the town of Ashford, this state. Warrenville is a little community typical of the old New England village settled late in the seventeenth or early in the eighteenth century. Pompey Hollow was situated on what in colonial days was known as the Connecticut Path, an Indian trail leading from Boston to Hartford and thence to New Amsterdam or New York. It was along this trail, which had later become a stage coach route, that Gen. Washington went from Boston to New York in 1776.

In colonial days this section of Connecticut was a part of Massachusetts and was inhabited by a friendly tribe of Indians known as the Wabbaquassets. During the famine in the Boston colony in 1630 the Wabbaquassec Indians under the leadership of their chief, Aquittimaug, packed hundreds of sacks of corn on their backs to the Boston colonists.

DOORSTONE DATE 1691

The history of the inn is more or less hidden in obscurity and the date of its construction is unknown, but one is led to believe that it was built in 1691 because of the date on the doorstone. The only authentic record of settlement of Pompey Hollow is found in the record of the deed given to John Mixer, who in 1706 purchased 103 acres of land which includes the village of Warrenville and the land on which the inn now stands. The original builder of th einn is not known and the first owner of which there is any record is General Joseph Palmer. Gen. Palmer, history shows, was a general of the 5th brigade of the Continental army, and had been an old Indian fighter in the colonial wars.

KING'S WARRANT TO PALMER

In 1762 General Palmer was granted by king's warrant permission to sell liquor in the Turnpike or Coach Tavern. Apparently Gen. Palmer had conducted the inn is not known and the first owndate. The Palmer family was prominent in Ashford, there being a record of a Dr. Benjamin Palmer, who was a graduate of Yale and who practiced medicine in 1750. There was another brother of Gen. Palmer, who was also a doctor, but who later moved to Canterbury.

The inn comes into real prominence just previous to the Revolutionary war when it was the gathering place for young and old of the community who came to discuss the happenings at Boston and to learn the latest news regarding the differences between the colonies and England. At the outbreak of the war the tavern apparently became the headquarters for the militiamen of those days. Companies were drilled and quartered here under the supervision of General Palmer, whose training in the Indian wars stood him in good stead. Records show that Gen. Palmer and General Israel Putnam were staunch friends and that Palmer was visited several times by this illustrious general.

Although practically every inn along the route followed by Washington and Lafayette on their journey from Boston to No wYork claims that these generals stopped at them, it is highly probable that these two colonial warriors did stop at the Gen. Palmer Inn. Palmer was a friend of Putnam and Washington had endeavored to see Putnam on his trip through but failed, so it is logical to believe that he would stop to see Palmer. However, there is no positive record that he did.

ADDITION BUILT IN 1775

The inn originally was much smaller than it is today for in 1775 Gen. Palmer's son was married and the general built an addition to the west end of the inn for his son and his wife. The addition can be easily discerned at the present time through the difference in construction. The original construction shows cruder work but by far more substantial.

With this bit of history of Pompey Hollow and the inn one visits this inn today with keener interest and a sharper awakening of the imagination and realization of what transpired in these early days.

STONE HITCHING POSTS.

The inn is situated at the four corners of what was the Connecticut Path and a trail leading from the north and then south through the Mansfields. It is a large structure, with its gleaming white or cream clapboards making it a real landmark. Surrounding it is a fence with heavy stone posts and gates swinging on wrought iron strap hinges. A row of stone hitching posts runs along the front of the fence where the gay young blades of early days would hitch their steeds. One post in particular attracts the attention by the simple fact that it leans slightly toward the road in front. Historical search brings to light the fact that this stone post was set that way for a purpose. When the old coach drivers would drive up to the inn with the horses running at top speed and stop to let out the travelers at the inn they would round the corner with a flourish and crack of whip. The stone acted as protection for the corner of the fence. In the rear is the large court yard.

BRINGING BACK THE PAST.

As one approaches the inn from the front the eye is attracted to the windows which are of old colonial type with 12 panes in each sash. Some of the original glass still remains in the windows and is noted by its rose tints and slight imperfections. And here one's imagination can see the faces surmounted with powdered wigs peering forth to see who the new arrivals from the stage coach are. And one can almost hear the whispered speculations as to the identity of the visitors.

And letting the imagination run free to about 1699 one can see the large double doors swing open and the corpulent and jovial inn-keeper in his tight-fitting breeches, buckled shoes, long brass-buttoned coat of a vivid hue, his cream colored vest, spotted, mayhaps, with spatterings from the bar, his powdered wig, ready to greet his new arrivals. He beams and bows as he extends the hospitality of his hostelry. A chore-boy comes running to take the parcels and bags of the new guests. The women of the party are ushered into the parlor at the left of the door while the men turn to the right and enter the public room, at one end of which is located the taproom. And as the inn-keeper bustles into the tap-room and there is a rattling among the tankards, one surveys the room with interest.

WHERE THE PUBLIC ENTERED

This room is one of the most beautiful in the inn, with its open fireplace with the logs crackling cheerfully and sending little flurries of sparks chasing one another up the chimney. The beautiful hand-carved paneling in this room attracts instant attention. One side of the room has this delightful paneling which surrounds the fireplace. It is painted a warm cream color and is slightly mottled with age. The door through which one enters the room from the front hallway has two little heart-shaped peep holes, frequently used no doubt, in the olden days by the aristocracy of Pompey Hollow to see who was in the tap room before entering for their tankard of ale. An old settle is at one side of the fireplace where the wise heads of the community sat and discussed the affairs of their day.

The north side of the room is also paneled but with two doors, one leading to the dining room and the other directly into the tap-room. The door leading to the tap-room is in two sections, the upper half can be lifted up to the ceiling when the bar is open. There is also a small window which can be lifted as the bar is opened for business and a small shelf runs along the bottom on which the brimming tankards were set. The doors are hung on wrought iron strap hinges and swing noiselessly when opened. There is also a large door that opens directly to the outside.

BEAUTIFUL PANELING IN PARLOR

The inn-keeper now has the tankards filled and his new guests are served and quaff their ale with a pronounced smacking of the lips and evident relish. Then they go to join the ladies in the parlor and here they are enraptured by the room and they stop for a minute to consider this room before the chore-boy shows them to their rooms.

This room is indeed a monument to the patience and skill of those colonial builders who spent many weary hours carving the paneling for which the room is noted. One entire wall is paneled and around the other walls there is a paneled wainscoting running up about a third of the distance to the ceiling, which, as in all other rooms, is oak-beamed. The paneling is exceptionally well done and is painted a cheerful blue making a pleasing contrast to the gleaming wide-boarded floors.

CHIMNEY NOOK SMOKE-HOUSE

The chore-boy arrives to show the travelers to the room and they mount to the second floor by the beautiful hand carved staircase. On the way up the stairs the chore boy stops and proudly opens a panel door in the wall to show his guests what he considers a very modern improvement in the construction of the house. Looking in at the door the guests see another door of iron, which, when opened reveals a room about four feet square directly in the center of the chimney. The chore-boy informs his guests that this is an inside smoke-house, and hams, the hind quarters of a deer and a piece or two of beef are seen hanging from iron hooks with smaller pieces of meat on little benches. He tells them that every flue from the downstairs fireplaces feeds into this chamber and the smoke from these cures the meat. The chore-boy closes the doors and leads his guests to their rooms.

EXQUISITE BED ROOMS

These rooms are beautiful beyond description and are finished in creamy painted panels, all hand-carved to match the trimmings of the lower floor. The ceilings here are beamed but not quite as heavily as in the downstairs rooms and the ceiling between the beams is also in cream white. Each of the rooms has its huge four-post bed with its blanket chest, dresser and corner closets for the ladies' gowns. One notable feature in the furnishings of the bed rooms is that each room has its own distinctive type of furniture. One room is the cherry room where everything is in cherry-wood; another room is the pine room and here all the furniture is in pine; and then there is the maple room where maple furniture prevails. Everything is most artistically arranged and each room has its own fireplace with a fire glowing brightly on the hearth and there is a delightful odor of pine smoke.

FINISHED IN THE ROUGH

The chore-boy, who takes delight in showing off the inn, tells his guests that there is one room which has been left just as it was finished in 1691 with its rough pine boards. Of course everyone is anxious to see this room and they are shown in. It is a room with walls darkened by time. The boards are 24 to 30 inches wide and little attempt has been made at paneling such as is seen in the other rooms. In one corner, a very dark corner where one lights a candle to see the construction, it is found that apparently the original builder ran out of lumber and used the odds and ends left over from the other rooms. The boards are small and not matched, with many pieces being only an inch or two wide and only a foot or so long. A door from this corner leads to the attic and as the chore-boy opens this door the guests see by the light of his candle the words "Corn 1697" scratched in the wood and after this are 150 straight lines indicating that in 1697 there were 150 bushels of corn placed in the attic. Upon closer examination one finds that many of the marks have been scratched across. The chore-boy says that the corn was taken to the attic at harvest time and as it was used through the winter every bushel was checked off. He says with a smile that it was the first method of bookkeeping or a perpetual inventory.

At this point the guests hear the inn-keeper summoning them to supper and they go downstairs into the large dining room where their host has prepared a bountiful repast of venison, corn-bread and other good things. The guests stop for a minute in front of the huge fireplace to warm themselves for the rooms upstairs are a trifle cold. And as they pause for a moment their gaze roams appraisingly over the room.

MAMMOTH FIREPLACE

Of course, the fireplace is the first thing that attracts their notice and they remark upon its rugged beauty and charm. As the roaring fire drives them back they have a better opportunity to survey it. They remark on the heavy headstone of solid granite which is fully 15 inches thick and six feet long. The original oil and redding is still visible although many years have passed since the original owners of the inn painted it on in an effort to decorate the stone. The old hand-made bricks reveal some of the patience and ingenuity of those early builders. There is the Dutch oven at the side of the fireplace from where only a few minutes before have come the steaming loaves of corn-bread which are now waiting on the long tables in the center of the room. On the hearthstone are the foot-warmers that the good churchman takes to church with him on cold days as religiously as he does his Bible. Hanging besides the fireplace are the long-handled bed-warmers that will make the beds of the guests nice and cosy later in the evening. A flax-wheel is at one side of the fireplace where the good housewife has left it before having to prepare supper for her guests. Snoozing quietly on the hearth rug are two of the dogs of the inn keeper. The admiring gaze of the guests wanders to the tap-room door where the bar-keep is filling tankards with ale and passing them to the chore-boy who in turn places them on the dining table. In the far corner is a lowboy where the gleaming silver is kept to be brought out only on special occasions or in honor of a noted guest who may chance to stop at the inn. The carved wainscotting about the room is gleaming in a new coat of gray paint and the doors with the hand-wrought LH hinges are of oak boards, two boards making the door. The beams in this room attract the attention and one pauses to examine them closely. The marks of the adze of the colonial builders are discernable and one can see in his imagination these rugged pioneers hewing their logs, but with one eye on the surrounding woods and their muskets near at hand ready for a surprise attack of any unfriendly Indians. And as the guests turn they glance toward the stairway down which they came a few minutes before. These stairs are worn from the feet of many generations. On the lower landing an old grandfather's clock tells the guest that the night is fast approaching. At this point the host informs the guests that supper is ready and they sit down at the long narrow tables to a meal such as only an old New England innkeeper can provide and prepare. The guests remark on the beauty and comfort of the inn and the innkeeper glows with pride at the compliment, and well he may.

He tells his guests that after supper he will show them a room that played its part in the Revolutionary war which of course is very interesting as each and every one of them know the trials of that period.

OFFICERS' MESS ROOM

After supper the host conducts his guests through a door at the end of the dining room into what was once one of the rooms of Gen. Palmer's son. This room is exceptionally attractive but the difference in construction is at once noticed. Where the other rooms seen by the guests have been strictly of 17th century construction this room is of the period of the Revolution. The paneling is beautiful and of a very different type and is also hand carved. There are beautiful carved mantels over the fireplaces instead of the rugged stone of the early period.

From this room the guests are taken into what the host considers the prize room of the inn. He tells his guest that it is the officers' mess room used by Gen. Palmer and his officers during the Revolutionary war. It has been left just as it was in those days, in all its ruggedness and roughness. And as the guests stand and survey the room there is almost an audible clank of swords and the martial tread of those sturdy fighters for liberty. One's imagination sees the officers seated about the table, with its burning tapers, discussing the latest news that has just come by courier from New York and New Jersey where there has been several battles.

IN REVOLUTIONARY WAR DAYS

The host tells his guests that this room was originally the kitchen of the old inn, but when Gen. Palmer took it over he made it into the mess room for the officers of the companies that made their headquarters there during the early days of the Revolution. Several companies were organized and drilled here before being sent to Boston or to join the Continental forces in New York state.

The fireplace, in which cheerily burns a fire, is rugged in its construction and little attention has been paid to beauty. Utility was the principal object of the builders of the fireplace for they built it to serve the travelers of those early days. A Dutch oven is at the left of the fireplace and to the right of it is a huge iron caldron set in stone so that a fire can be built under it, the flue running into the main chimney. There is a large crane on which hangs a kettle of brass. Over the fireplace hangs an old flintlock musket and a brace of pistols, said to be some of those belonging to the Revolutionary soldiers. The ceiling is heavily beamed and browned with the smoke of a thousand fires. A lantern or two hangs from these beams and there is one on the stone mantel shedding a soft glow over the end of the room for it is getting dusk.

The host takes his guests into the parlor of Gen. Palmer's son which is one of the most beautiful rooms of the house. This room is of Revolutionary period with a beautiful panel wainscotting and mantel. The host does not tell them but it is learned from other sources that concealed over the fireplace is a secret room, entrance being gained through a panel in the woodwork.

CELLAR SAFE DEPOSIT VAULT

The real beauties of the inn having been seen, the guests return to the parlor and tap room before retiring for the night. They sit around discussing various things for an hour or two and then inform the host that they will retire for they must be gone early in the morning. The innkeeper has one more spot of interest to show his guests. He asks them if they would like to deposit their valuables in his vault for safe keeping. As they reply that they most certainly would he takes them down to the cellar to show them the vault of which he is justly proud.

The vault is built in the foundation of the large chimney and is a room some 12 feet long and eight feet wide, the roof being arched to bear the weight of the chimney. The walls are about three feet thick and of solid stone. The door to this vault is of four-inch oak with heavy wrought-iron hinges and heavy iron lock. In this vault the inn-keeper stores his wines and liquors and his valuable papers.

GEORGE WASHINGTON COMB

Realizing that their valuables will be perfectly secure, the guests start to return upstairs when the innkeeper points out a niche in the cellar wall where he claims that the chore-boy, who was at the inn when Washington was a guest there, hid a comb belonging to Washington as a souvenir. To bear out his statement he shows them the comb. It is a comb of hand-wrought iron, the teeth being hammered out when the metal was hot. Across the top of the comb is the name of "G. Washington' punched in the metal by hand. As to the authenticity of the comb the guests are allowed to use their own judgment, but the circumstances in which it was found would seem to lend weight to the contention.

The guests then retire to their rooms and a peaceful sleep in rooms throbbing with local history and the Revolutionary days. In the morning lieve our first duty is to our local industries and give our fullest co-operation in assisting them to succeed for we realise that our industries are the backbone of our community.

Another phase of our community industrial life which is important is the poultry business. This territory is the second largest poultry producing area in the state and one of the largest in New England. The annual exhibit of the Windham Country Poultry association will be held in the state armory during January and co-operation is manifest on the part of the local business men to make this fifth annual exhibit more attractive, interesting and educational than ever. This exhibit is one of the most important in the state and attracts many exhibitors from beyond the state's confines.

Modern Stores.

Modern stores, seasonable merchandise at reasonable prices, courteous service and dependability are next in importance to industry. Like our manufacturers Willimantic merchants are men of sound judgment, business sagacity, and dependability. Every effort that can be put forth to supply the mercantile needs of this trading territory is performed by our Merchants' bureau. Given the loyal support of the buying public of this community local merchants provide and will continue to do so the latest ideas in styles, and up-to-date merchandise of every description. A city is largely judged by the quality of the stores it supports and certainly no reflection can be cast upon our local merchants in this respect. During the past year our merchants generally experienced a very satisfactory business.

The hotel business during the past year was very gratifying. The renovated Hooker house and the new Nathan Hale hotel supply this community need to the traveling public in keeping with what comfort and courtesy demands. Several state conventions were held during 1929 which brought several hundred visitors to our community. Our hotels are an important asset to us for entertaining conventions.

The banking business was excellent during the past year, gains being made over the previous year. Savings accounts were excellent despite the wave of speculative investments prior to the recent stock market break. Here again our community is fortunate in having banking men of experience and integrity conducting our financial affairs along sound business lines. The Willimantic Savings Institute will soon move back to their remodeled banking offices which, when completed, will take place among the best equipped and modern banking quarters in the state.

St Joseph's hospital, rated Class A by the American College of Physicians and Surgeons, serves the need for hospital purposes efficiently and there are evidences that this institution will have to expand in order to meet the demands made for its services. The local doctors co-operate fully to carry on the successful work of our local hospital.

Confidence in the Future

It is only too apparent, therefore, that Willimantic faces the new year with confidence and vision. Her industrial, mercantile, banking, religious, educational, and professional leaders have faith in her future growth and prosperity. Our exceptionally good transportation and educational facilities; the excellent location of our community as a central distribution point for all the metropolitan centers of southern New England; the community spirit and local civic pride and co-operation of all interests that is being awakened and strengthened as indicated by the service clubs, Rotary, Exchange and Lions, together with the central civic organization, the chamber of commerce, is evidence of the fact that our community is progressive and aggressive.

Willimantic believes that a city worth living in is worth working for and is in full accord with a recent statement from President Hoover who said: "Chambers of commerce have not only promoted the business interests of their communities but have justified our confidence in American business men by the increasing breadth of vision and public spirit which makes them see all the community's problems as their own, to the solution of which they will willingly contribute their time, effort and their practical point of view.

JOHN J. O'ROURKE,
Secretary Willimantic Chamber of Commerce.

Willimantic Exchange Club Hopeful For New Year

The Willimantic Exchange club closes the year with the feeling that it has made a faithful attempt to carry out its motto, "Unity for Service."

To say it has been a complete success would be egotistical. To say it has failed in its purpose would be to belie the facts.

Were the purpose of Exchange merely social and educational it would fully justify its existence, as being both non-sectarian and non-political. It brings together for the exchange of ideas the varied business and social interests of the locality. I say locality because our Exchange reaches out to neighboring communities. But Exchange does more. It serves not only the individual but the community. Exchange has been and is interested in the progress of aviation and in conjunction with Rotary and the local lighting company has marked for day and night the city for the guidance of the aviator. It co-operates with the chamber of commerce as a part of its planning commission.

Exchange contributes to local charities and is now furnishing through the Welfare bureau, its second $100 milk fund for needy and undernourished children.

There is a need for the co-ordination of the various charitable organizations and Exchange may be of service in assisting to bring this about.

Its meetings have been well attended, the speakers adequately qualified and the subjects discussed timely and interesting. We were honored by a visit from Governor John H. Trumbull who spoke on Aviation. Joint meetings have been held with Rotary and Lions with which sister organizations the spirit is cordial and the relations helpful. The increase in membership has been normal and the personnel gratifying.

The Willimantic Exchange club enters upon the New Year with a feeling of hope and optimism, not only for itself but for our community, its growth and prosperity.

E. FRANK BUGBEE,
President, Willimantic Exchange club.

Anticipating Good Year In New London Business

Fundamentally business conditions in New London for the past year have been normal, and at the present time the business structure here is sound. The market inflation did not draw with it, sympathetically, inflated business conditions, the result being that when the market reacted it had little, if any, effect on business. To be sure at the present time there is some unemployment and merchants are curtailing their buying power. The curtailment is due to the supercaution on the part of the merchants and will continue perhaps for a few months until some of the uncertainties have been regulated.

January and February are usually dull months and it might be that these same months in 1930 will be somewhat less active than in the preceding year, but we in New London look forward to bright business conditions in the spring. An extensive building program is in the making and will be realized within the next few months and afford employment to a great number of people.

MORRIS LUBCHANSKY
President

New London has fared perhaps as well, if not better, than the great majority of the cities in Connecticut. There has been no abnormal business distress here, and such depression as may exist due to the season of the year, is not unusual. The chamber of commerce has done everything possible to find avenues of employment for those who are in need; it has assisted the business men in their relation with their charge customers and has done everything possible to stimulate better conditions.

The council of the City of New London has worked hand in hand with the chamber of commerce and is deserving of the gratitude of the people of New London. In New London we look forward towards good business conditions. With present prospects it is not unfair to say that they will be realized early.

MORRIS LUBCHANSKY,
President, New London Chamber of Commerce.

Rotary in Willimantic Exemplifies Service

As the year ends and we are at the beginning of another it is usual and customary for almost every business and organization to look back over the past twelve months and also to look forward to the year that is to come. We pause, so to speak, to see what has been done and to plan for the future. As a club, our chief aim and object is Service—Service with high ethical standards in business and profession—Service to the community and service to humanity and on the basis of good will and understanding between the 3,260 Rotary clubs throughout the civilized world, international peace is brought nearer to realization.

In community service members of our club, we are pleased to say, are active in business, civic and welfare organizations and partly through their efforts the city has grown industrially, and the general welfare has been made a little bit better.

It is not the function of Rotary to take over community problems but it is its function to bring its membership to a realization of their community responsibilities. The members of our club played their part when a few years ago the call was issued to raise funds for the Nathan Hale hotel, a project which a few years previous would have seemed impossible, the raising of $225,000 in a week's time. This accomplishment on the part of the community marked, it seems to me, a distinct milestone in our progress towards a better and bigger Willimantic, not necessarily the hotel itself, which it is needless to say we are very glad to have, but the psychological effect of the accomplishment. It proved that where there is a will there is a way and by all co-operating almost any worthwhile project can be made successful.

A year or so later we again saw another proof in the raising by the community of the largest amount ever raised at one time for our local chamber of commerce. By the hearty co-operation of the various service clubs, business organizations and other organizations in our city and with a worthy objective each year Willimantic would make a great step forward it seems to me in ten to fifteen years.

Our club took as an outside objective this year, the obtaining of an aviation field. This project, so necessary, according to Governor Trumbull and others who are in a position to know, was sponsored by the Willimantic chamber of commerce and also had the hearty approval of the Exchange and Lions' clubs of Willimantic as well as ourselves. It is to be hoped that the same spirit of co-operation that was shown in the projects above mentioned will be shown in the accomplishments for this year of obtaining for Willimantic what some day may be as valuable to our city as its railroad facilities.

One of our club activities goes by the name of boys' work—helping under-privileged boys. At least two boys during the past year or thereabouts have been sent to the Newington home by our club and it is pleasing to report that under its care the children are making good progress towards recovery.

Notwithstanding all the work that the various welfare associations, service clubs and others are doing there are many under-privileged boys in the state who need help who are not receiving it. It is unfortunate, in this land of plenty, that this should be so and let us hope that the new year will find many more who, if they are needing help, will be receiving it.

Each year, for the past few years, we have also been pleased to contribute to the local welfare bureau to help under-privileged boys.

It has also been our pleasure each year to entertain at dinner the football squad of the local high school.

Two prizes have been given each year for home project courses of vocational training.

Rotary clubs are also interested along similar lines in girls work.

While this past year it was not done we have in some years offered prizes for the collection of tent caterpillar egg clusters.

If it had not been for the idea of fellowship it is doubtful whether Rotary would be in existence today. Some of our pleasantest meetings have been those with other clubs, not only with other service organizations in this city, but also our interurban meetings.

When Edison says that no one knows a tenth of a millionth part about anything we all have a lot to learn and there are few pleasanter and better ways of learning than by the interchanging of ideas, so we welcome and enjoy our joint meetings with other clubs and also our rural urban meetings.

To all, we wish to express a hope that the New Year may be a happy one and may the Rotary motto of Service be a guiding star towards a better community in which we live.

LOUIS H ARNOLD,
President Willimantic Rotary Club

Norwich Rotary Gives Backing To Boys' Work

The Norwich Rotary club is only one of many local clubs, but it has always been interested in the welfare of the community, and particularly in its boy life. Rotary is constantly finding that there are many things that it can do to help boys in one way or another. This last year over 75 worthy boys were supplied with articles of clothing at Christmas time, such as shoes, stockings, rubbers, underwear, jackets and overcoats. The club also sponsored, equipped and maintained a boys' baseball team during the summer month, which played in the junior twilight league. The Norwich Rotary club also started agitation for establishing in Norwich a state trade school, believing that there is a real need for a school of that nature. Some 35 or 40 boys have been organized into a boys' band which the Rotary club believes will become a community asset before very long.

Rotary is not only interested in the local community but concerns itself with international relations. Rotary International is active in over 3,400 communities throughout 54 different countries. Rotary International's specific emphasis during this last year has been to bring about a finer relationship and understanding among nations. This can come about only by our knowing and appreciating the economic and political lives of each other. Rotary is doing this very thing by its social and educational contacts, one club with another, and by individual Rotarians meeting together as friends.

President Norwich Rotary Club.

they are away on their journey bearing with them the pleasant impressions of one of the most attractive inns of the Connecticut Path and vowing that they will return again.

Fate Wove Web To Bring Haggetts To Pompey Hollow Tavern

Perhaps it was not just the spinning of unhappy circumstances that brought "Bob" and "Spots" Haggett out of a princely life to the time-flavoured tavern that is now their home.

Fate seems to have been studiously weaving a web that was to draw ever closer these two gay children of European luxuries and the great lonesome house that stood in little old Pompey Hollow.

Reared in the comforts and dignity of a London house Robert B. Haggett, youngest son, little dreamed of the great adventures the pains and joys that life held in store for him. The name Haggett was traditional. Since the days of Sir Francis Drake, son had followed father in the service of old England at sea, and, t'is said, they were men of much courage in the defense of the maritime supremacy of the Royal navy.

But "Bob" was not for the confinements of even a giant ship of war. A gifted ability—the heritage from his father—led him to seek all forms of sports. His success as an athlete, especially in the game of tennis, was phenomenal. He played as an amateur as he later played in the leading professional ranks—because of his great love for the sport.

Then came the time when college days were over and he must embark upon a definite career after the way of all London gentlemen. No doubt it came as a keen disappointment to the elder Haggett when "Bob" broke the long chain of Haggetts in His Majesty's Royal navy by turning to professional tennis. Beginning his career at Queens, London, he enjoyed meteoric rise to success and in a few years we find him a tennis player and instructor of international note.

Sport lovers the world over remember his brilliant playing at Copenhagen in 1911, when he and his brother, representing England, easily won all the sets. They know him as the teacher of Henri Cochet, star of the Davis cup team players, as a coach of the great Suzanne Lenglen and others who followed him in the limelight of the tennis world. Glories were his and many will never be revealed, for "Bob" holds them sacredly as memories to be shared only with the one who had shared these glories with him and who remained staunchly by his side in later years of deprivation."

"Bob" and "Spots"

Yes, indeed, "Bob" has a partner in life. "Spots" was a bright-eyed, auburn-haired daughter of New York and in the social columns she was known as Miss Josephine Gertrude Wenige. "Bob" met this attractive maiden in his role as tennis instructor, but to his better judgment his fair pupil was wasting time on the court and so, in France, they were married. Their friends say that it was love at first sight, but that it was a true and enduring love, we shall see for ourselves. "Bob" played at tennis and she, as an accomplished musician, shared honors bestowed by the nobility, the rich and the poor of the continent. They lived in an entrancing world of wonders.

So we find "Bob" and "Spots" in the midst of the social whirl at Aix-Les-Bains, in France, when the World war started in 1914. "Bob" rushed to the nearest headquarters of the fashionable resort and enlisted in the Foreign Legion "Spots" signed up in Les Dames de France ambulance corps and they marched to the front. What horrors this play-boy and his young wife saw and endured need no telling here.

A life-long victim of the dreaded gas and with a shattered shoulder, "Bob" returned from the front lines in 1916, but not to quit the patriotic cause. He joined "Spots" on the operating staff with Dr. Whitling, a pupil of the great London surgeon. Dr. MacKenzie For several months they assisted in surgery work and spent what time they could in cheering the bed-ridden soldiers.

In 1917, "Bob", now a complete invalid, received an honorable discharge. He came to New York on a combined business trip and convalescing journey. "Spots," who had continued on with her work, later came to join him in this country. But they had hardly joined hands again when the United States became an ally against the Kaiser. Undaunted, "Bob" sought enlistment in the "Mosquito fleet." Uncle Sam did not want broken men in his ranks and "Bob" was rejected.

Out Of Tennis

"Bob" and "Spots" turned hopelessly about. The gas had done its deadly work and "Bob" was declared forever out of his favorite tennis. "Take your tennis racket to a little New England farmhouse," said a noted physician, "hang it on a nail and pick up a shovel. It is your only chance to live."

"Bob" and "Spots," bruised of mind and broken in body, came over the rolling hills of Connecticut and in Warrenville (formerly Pompey Hollow) settled in a modest little farmhouse.

There was much to be done and much to be learned. These pampered idols of European drawing rooms faced a difficult task and the hardships of the war were still bitterly poignant. They went to work. In "Bob" the beautiful form of a drive or a perfect serving over the net gave way to a painful lunge of the plow. The fine long fingers became knotty and cracked. "Spots" had no time or inclination for singing. She called to the cows and "hoo-hooed" to "Bob" that dinner was ready. There were days when their indominable spirit and keen sense of humor alone kept them alive. It was a steep, almost hopeless grade, but they climbed and they met with a measure of success. Probably there were those to whom they could have appealed. They had no need for shame. The war had taken its toll of a substantial fortune and of health, but they won through sheer grit. And who shall deny them worthy praise?

The Gray Old House

"Bob, dear," said "Spots", one day, "that gray old house reminds me of ourselves. It stares out as if it just needed a comforting hand to help it back into the quiet contentment that is the reward of an old happiness now long shattered." They were passing a large shabby building that gave ready evidence of having been neglected for many a year as it peered humbly from beneath a bower of great trees. It was the Old Coach Tavern that had offered hearty welcome to the weary traveler since 1691. The gilt of Revolutionary uniforms, possibly even that of the Father of the Nation, had glittered in the light of its blazing fireplaces. But the modern world of industry had left it alone—an abandoned relic, crying out its lonesomeness to an unheeding people.

Then out of the chaos came a Samaritan. He was a local dweller in the village. He understood the yearnings of these war-wrecked newcomers and in true altruism made it possible for "Bob" and "Spots" to gain ownership of the old inn.

The designs of fate were finished. As the old house regained once more its well-kept splendor and its yawning hearths once again cracked merrily in glowing blaze, a new peace and happiness came upon "Bob" and "Spots." Fate deftly made the last turn in its web. Two human souls and the spirit of a great house found salvation.

Willimantic Lions Club Works for Community Good

The Lions club of Willimantic faces the New Year with the enthusiasm and vigor of youth for it is hardly a half-year since a branch of the important service organization of Lionism came into being here. I say "important" because I have faith in service clubs, such as are found under any name, for their aims are mutual and they work for common good.

While due appreciation is given to Rotary and Exchange, sister service clubs already established in Willimantic, Lionism had little difficulty in bringing to its banner community builders, business and professional men seeking an avenue to service to others and co-operation of humanitarian efforts.

With its birth so recent the local Lion's club has not as yet found the opportunity to accomplish the work that it has adopted as its programme. Following an outstanding endeavor of Lionism, everything possible has been and will be done in assisting the blind of the city and vicinity to secure as many advantages in life as can be had without sight. There is much to be done in this worthy field and the Lion's club will leave no stone unturned to do whatever possible.

Contributions have been made to civic and charitable efforts and a general interest taken in all movements toward community progress and betterment. Lions look forward to the day when it will have matured in Willimantic and become a recognized power for good.

It is with this bright and unselfish outlook that the Lion's club of Willimantic faces 1930, and in this mood Lions extends to all most hearty wishes for a happy New Year!

JOHN H. WILCOX.
President Lions' Club of Willimantic.

GRADE CROSSING ELIMINATION AT JEWETT CITY IN HIGHWAY WORK

Big Project Under Norwich Division of State Highway Department—Work of the Year in New London and Windham Counties Has Covered 64.4 Miles of Road Improvement—Four Bridges in Completed Work.

In highway construction in the past year under the Norwich division of the state highway department, of which John Smith is division engineer, the work covered about double the mileage of the year before and represented a considerably larger sum expended. The total mileage covered was 64.4 miles at an expenditure of $1,916,497.80 in New London and Windham counties and a small section in Tolland county. In the preceding year the expenditure was $1,522,416.54 on about 31 miles of road work.

On New London county roads the mileage covered was 15.2 miles, in Windham county 28.9 miles and there was about 20 miles on roads that ran through New London, Windham and Tolland counties.

Included in the work were two bridges over the Mt. Hope river in the town of Ashford, a bridge over the railroad at Phelps' crossing in the town of Windham and a bridge over Beaver brook in the town of Sprague.

The work of the year has seen the beginning of the largest single project ever handled in this division of the state highway department, which is the grade crossing elimination on Main street, Jewett City, a piece of work that should be finished by the latter part of the summer and will be completed at a probable cost of $430,000.

The work has an overall length of about 2,150 feet, of which about 400 feeet is in a bridge over the Quinebaug river, 700 feet in a viaduct that twice crosses the Pachaug river and also the railroad track of the Norwich and Worcester branch of the New Haven road, and the balance of the distance in embankments. It also involves moving three houses and the erection of a new house to replace one of those moved.

The new layout to accomplish the grade crossing elimination abandons the present highway at a point in the Sylvandale section of the town of Lisbon, opposite the junction with the Newent road, taking a course to the east of the present highway and proceeding from there in a straight line, crossing the Quinebaug river, the Pachaug and the railroad tracks on the way, to come out on Main street at the junction of that street and the Voluntown road.

The bridge over the Quinebaug river will be of concrete encased steel girder construction, supported on concrete piers for the five 75 foot spans. The bridge roadway will be 28 feet in the clear, the legal width for trunk line bridges, the wearing surface will be of concrete and there will be a six foot walk on one side. It will be 18 feet above the water. At the present time the piers are all in and the steel can be placed during the winter if the season is not too severe.

From the Sylvandale and the bridge is reached by an earth embankment and at the other end of the bridge is to be another earth embankment from which a connecting road will run to East Main street, coming out between the Sharkey and the Leonard houses.

At the other end of this embankment the viaduct begins, making two crossing of the Pachaug river, which loops around at this point. After crossing the river the viaduct crosses the railroad tracks, where there will be a clearance of 18 feet over the tracks. At this point there will be a steel girder span encased in concrete, but all the rest of the viaduct will be a reinforced T-beam superstructure of 16 spans of 41 feet each. Where it crosses the Pachaug river it will be 39 feet above the river. At the northerly end of the viaduct a short earth embankment brings the work to its connection with Main street.

Through arrangements made to heat all materials used in concrete work, the contractor has made provision for carrying on the viaduct work through the winter.

Putnam Acquires New Industries In the Year

county, growers suffered losses by reason of the water shortage. The Windham County Farmer's association, under the active management of County Agent Raymond E. Wing, allied with the farmers in an effort to combat the ravages of the drought, its chief defensive being the introduction of new methods of cultivating.

Much of the credit for 1929 being a fruitful year for this city is due to the unfaltering efforts of the members of the Putnam chamber of commerce and the Putnam Rotary club. The new industries committee of the chamber of commerce after a year of unremitting work induced the M. Salzberg silk concern to locate within the borders of the city and the community welfare committees of both organizations accomplished other goals that contributed to Putnam's forward steps.

Mayor Charles A. Richard's statement of optimism for Putnam during the new year and his feeling that 1929 was a milestone in which a hitherto unequalled progress was made, all contribute to the general sentiment held, that Putnam is destined to take its old time position among eastern Connecticut's leading industrial and commercial centers.

Willimantic Manufacturing Held About The Average

The addition of a new silk industry in Willimantic and special activity in that line accounted for that city showing about the same volume in manufacturing in 1929 as in the year before. There were 2,352 hands employed in the industrial plants, receiving wages of $2,351,753 and turning out product of $8,688,173. This was an increase of 189 in the number employed.

In the silk lines the employes numbered 497, with wages of $632,000 and product of $3,147,000, while in machinery and foundry lines there was also a gain, showing 147 employes, $245,613 in wages and $571,173 in product value. In other miscellaneous industries, business for the year was at smaller figures, with 1,708 employes, $1,474,140 in wages and $4,970,000 in value of product.

The interest rate on loans was maintained at 5½ per cent. up to the first of August, but raised to 6 per cent. after that time. While the rate on loans on collateral was kept at 7 per cent. through the early part of the year, the banks got together and shut off collateral loans absolutely in time to avoid unpleasant consequences when the stock market ran into a disastrous and drastic decline.

Savings Deposits Increase

Savings banks have shown an increase in deposits and business though not so much as before. All three of the savings banks of the city went to a 5 per cent. rate with their fall dividends, the Chelsea Savings in September, the Norwich Savings society in October and the Dime Savings in November. There have been gains in the savings deposits, but short-time employment in the textile industries locally has operated to cut these down from the scale at which they increased in other years.

The Chelsea Savings bank distributed $116,470 to over 2,200 Christmas club members, an increase of about $32,000 over the preceding year. Its deposits at the close of the year are $16,121,351 in 19,637 accounts which which is an increase from $15,757,474.58 in 19,620 accounts a year ago.

The Norwich Savings society has continued its campaign to encourage thrift habits among school children by the use of the stamp system in which the pupils of the schools take great interest. At the close of the year is an increase from $15,757,474-accounts, which compared with 22,584 accounts for $22,621,698.68 at the close of 1928.

The Dime Savings bank recorded a gain for the year increasing its deposits to $5,583,367 in 8,241 accounts from the total of $5,369,480.83 in deposits and [illegible] accounts in the preceding year.

Changes in Bank Officers

The hand of death removed at least three prominent bank men during the year. Late in August occurred the death of Nathan A. Gibbs, long cashier and vice president of the Thames National bank. His position, until the merger with the Bankers Trust company, was filled by William T. Crandall. In September Angus Park, president of the Bankers Trust company, passed away and Timothy C. Murphy, vice president, was elected president, holding that position until the merger with the Thames bank. Oliver J. Johnson, a former president of the Thames National bank and a former vice president of the Chelsea Savings bank, died late in November. Subsequently Grosvenor Ely was elected first vice president of the Chelsea Savings bank, James C. Macpherson second vice president, Frank Hempstead third vice president, Arthur E. Story secretary, Kenneth W Fox assistant secretary and Aurin L. Payson was added to the board of directors.

Danielson Banks Make 1929 Their Banner Year

It is pleasant to record that Danielson's banking institutions have during 1929, kept up the tradition of more than a decade that each year shall be a better year than the preceding one, and that resources should stand at new high totals as the twelve months' period comes to an end.

Despite lagging activity in some lines, the Windham County National bank, the Danielson Trust company and the Brooklyn Savings bank, all Danielson institutions, have made 1929 a banner year. Earnings have been splendid and considerably ahead in some instances, of any year that has gone before.

Following an established policy, these banks have persistently gone after new business this year while admonishing their customers to build up their accounts by systematic saving and planning to save.

This effort to attract new business embraced all departments of the banks doing a commercial, saving and trust account business and was very successful. The banks closed the year in a stronger position than ever before.

1100 Per Cent. Stock Dividend

Of interest during the course of the year was the action of the Killingly Trust company, which is closely affiliated with the Windham County National bank, in declaring a dividend of 100 per cent. to its stockholders. This bank is largely concerned with handling trust accounts, and it is planned to locate it in quarters of its own in the Phoenix building, where the Brooklyn Savings bank formerly was. At present the trust company does business in the Windham County National bank building.

RALPH H. DUNBAR
President, Windham County National Bank.

Changes in Officials

An important change in the banking personnel in Danielson in December was that which takes Cashier Francis E Storer, of the Windham County National bank, to Norwich with the opening of 1930 to be president of the Thames Bank and Trust company Mr. Storer, who came to Danielson 15 years ago from the Shawmut National bank of Boston, has made an enviable record in Danielson and has been an incessant worker for the building up of the institution he has represented here.

Mr. Storer is to be succeeded in Danielson by Ralph H. Dunbar, who is a Maine man and has had an extensive banking experience with financial institutions in his native state. He will come to Danielson during January, after closing his duties with the Augusta Trust company, of Augusta, Me.

Still another change during 1929 took Assistant Treasurer Arthur F. Hughes from the Brooklyn Savings bank to be treasurer of the Putnam Savings bank, succeeding Treasurer Daniel J. Byrne, deceased. Mr. Hughes was so successful with his work here as to attract the attention of the trustees of the Putnam Savings bank while they were seeking a successor to Treasurer Byrne. The Brooklyn bank also lost from its staff Mrs. Arthur F. Hughes, head of the clerical department. Mrs. Hughes has left banking work and is now resident in [illegible]

Gain in Savings Departments

The local banks again show a gain in their savings departments. While much of this gain has been for old accounts, the banks have added the names of many new depositors to their lists. It so happens that a considerable number of what may be termed regular accounts start originally from Christmas club accounts. At least 25 per cent. of all the Christmas club money put out here in December of each year comes back to the banks for savings accounts. During the past December this has been the rule, as in other years.

New London Banking Shows No Great Gain

The past year has not been one of great financial activity in New London. Business during the year was fairly good but probably not up to the year previous. Several of the larger industries of the town have had a quiet year. This condition of course is reflected in the business of the banking institutions which will not show any great increase in deposits over the year previous.

The volume of banking business during the year is probably as great or greater than the year previous but the net result will not show great improvement. The distribution of nearly $350,000 during the first week in December by the Christmas clubs of the Mariners Savings bank, the Savings Bank of New London and the New London City National bank released a large amount at a time when it was needed and as a result the merchants will enjoy a good Christmas business.

There have been few changes in banking circles during the year. Benjamin A. Armstrong, for many years president of the National Bank of Commerce, died in November. Mr. Armstrong's career as a business man of New London has been worthy of note. The Corticelli Silk company, formerly the Brainard and Armstrong Silk company, one of New London's largest industries, was built up by the ability and persistence of Mr. Armstrong. The National Bank of Commerce under his presidency has maintained a steady growth and is the largest commercial banking institution in the city. Mr. Armstrong was succeeded as president of the National Bank of Commerce by William H. [illegible] who has been connected with the bank for more than 40 years and who had been for many years a vice president.

During the year the city has presented to the United States government a large tract of land near Connecticut College for Women, costing $100,000, to be used as the site for the United States Coast Guard Academy. It is expected that work on this project will be begun shortly after the first of January.

The Allyn Memorial Museum, the gift of the late widow of Captain Lyman Allyn, will begin the erection of one of its new buildings in the near future. This insures building activity during the spring and summer months. Building of dwelling houses has gone on steadily during the year, New London being perhaps more a residential than a manufacturing town.

The St. Andrew's society of Charleston, S. C., the oldest in the new world, recently celebrated its two hundredth anniversary.

Basketball Had Lean Year During 1929 Season

Basketball had only a mediocre time in Norwich during the year. The Academy had its most disastrous season while, although the Y Seniors made a gallant bid, they lost out to New London in the state Y championships.

The year at hand, however, promises to be a much better one for the court game. The Y Seniors have started off strong in the state Y league while the Academy will have a new gymnasium for next winter in which it will have its own playing surface for the game and hopes are, even this early, running high for a big year.

Plainfield Pros ruled the roost in semi-pro basketball. Taftville had no team for the first time in years. Danielson was the other semi-pro five and had a good year.

MANY SCHOOLS PLACED ON BULLETIN'S SCHOOL TEAMS

During the year the schools of the Eastern Connecticut-Western Rhode Island Interscholastic conference shared about equally on the All-school teams picked by The Bulletin. There were only two teams named, basketball and football, none being selected in baseball because of the runaway race that was put up by the Academy. The entire Wildcat team would probbaly have been as good as any other for an All-star nine.

The basketball team was picked as follows: Meikle, Windham, and Quinn, Chapman Tech, forwards; Shann, Putnam, center; Johns, Chapman and Bonnet, Windham, guards. The football team was Powers, Stonington, and Barrows, Bulkeley, ends; Hertz, N. F. A., and Fiori, Westerly, tackles; Sisson, Westerly, and Hanley, Stonington, guards; Sroka, Windham, center; Quinn, Chapman Tech, quarterback, Meikle, Windham, and Stenhouse, Westerly, halfbacks; Barber, N. F. A., fullback. Quinn and Meikle were the only boys picked on both outfits.

WERTH AND WRIGHT WIN 1929 TENNIS TITLES

Tennis, never a very popular sport in Norwich, had as successful a season as any experienced. Two major events were run off during the year the city championship on July Fourth and the Eastern Connecticut tournament on Labor day. William Werth won the city title beating Percy Harwood in the finals. The Eastern Connecticut title went to Arthur Wright of Hartford, captain of the Yale tennis team, who beat his fellow townsman, Samuel Snider, 6-2, 6-1, 6-1. In the doubles Wright and Snider won the title from G. C. Foster and A. C.

HORSE RACING NIL IN CITY DURING YEAR

Horse racing, which used to be one of Norwich's best sports, was dead as the proverbial door-nail in Norwich during 1929. The Bay State circuit meet had been shifted the previous year and, with the closing of the annual New London County fair, there was no activity for horse-lovers.

Eastern Connecticut fared just about as bad. The Bay State meet, which had been shifted from Norwich to Stafford Springs in 1928 was taken away from there in 1929, leaving the racing confined to a few races at Willimantic and small fairs in the northern part of the section.

SOCCER STARTS 1929-1930 SEASON SUCCESSFULLY

Soccer was carried on during the year by J. B. Martin at its field at Taftville station, where all leading teams of the section were tackled. While the season which ended last spring was not very successful the local booters have started off well this campaign and bid fair to keep up their good record.

SPORTS FACILITIES ADDED DURING 1929

The year of 1929 saw improvements in sports facilities in Norwich and the year, 1930, holds promise of more work along this line.

The new Hollyhock Island recreation center was offically opened and was the scene of many baseball games. Bleachers to seat over 1,000 have already been erected and the field was kept in shape by a caretaker during the summer months. This is a product of the recreation commission. At the Academy the new Hoyte field house was thrown open for the baseball season, a new flagpole was donated by Jeremiah J. Fitzgerald and the entire left field section of the campus was put into first-class shape. The Norton Memorial gym will be completed before 1930 ends, all these improvements making the Red and White one of the best equipped in New England.

Wildcat Nine Won League Title For Fifth Straight Year In Ten Straight Games—Team Won 17 And Lost 3—Track Team Won League Title For First Time—Cross Country Only Other Successful Team—Prospects Fairly Bright For 1930.

The 1929 Academy sports panorama was a picture pleasing to behold—looking at it from the baseball, track and cross country angles—but for the rest of Wildcat athletic endeavors the year was mighty close to a decided flop. This includes basketball, tennis and football.

Coach Earle E. Brigham, with material that was none too promising after the graduation of Lloyd Jarvis, Johnny Greene, Mace Goldblatt, Billy Tirrell and Eddie Hamil the previous June, continued his success as a baseball coach by moulding together a team that won 17 games and lost three to win the Interscholastic league title for the fifth straight year and establish a new record for the circuit by going through undefeated, winning its ten conference games. The team thrilled the fans of Norwich and startled the entire state by running up 16 straight victories before bowing to Warren Harding high of Bridgeport on Memorial day at the campus.

Coach Matthew J. Sheridan's track team finally scaled the heights after a steady rise from the time the young Holy Cross graduate took over the reins, winning the Interscholastic league title for the first time in the history of the school and also annexing the half-mile relay championship of New England in the Brown relays at Providence. Further honors came to the squad when Clinton Robinson was crowned broad jump champion of Connecticut high schools in the state meet at New Haven.

John P. Murphy, another Holy Cross alumnus, took over the running activities at the school in September after Mr. Sheridan had resigned to enter Law school and Coach Murphy, handling his first team, produced a winner for the Red and White in a first-class cross-country squad, that won four and lost four meets against some of the stiffest competition in the eastern states. In addition to this the harriers more than held their own in three other events, placing second in a tri-cornered event at Kingston, R. I., hauling down tenth place in the annual Tory Polytech meet at Troy, N. Y. with 37 schools entered, and finishing third in the Interscholastics.

Basketball, which entered its third year, ran into losing habits early in the year and never could shake them. The season was a failure not only in lack of victories but also in the money-box, so much so that the sport has been discontinued for one year until the new Norton Memorial gym is completed.

Football, while winning the annual game from Bulkeley, 6 to 0, still fell below expectations, the team winning but three in nine games. The Wildcat gridders finished in a second place tie in the conference, 'tis true, but this could just as easily have been a championship with good work in one or two more games and it was these losses—Westerly and Windham—that hurt the most.

BASEBALL

In going into the review in a little more detail, we must, in fairness, place baseball at the top of the list for it was this sport that drew the crowds, providing the biggest thrills and did the most for the school. The annual report of the baseball association, appearing elsewhere in today's New Year's review, gives proof of this statement.

The bright spots of the baseball year were the winning of the league championship, the long winning streak (longest ever made by an Academy team) and victories over Deep River, with the renowned Walter Linder, now with the New Haven team of the Eastern league, pitching, and West Hartford. The surprise of the year was the fine twirling of Butsy Weisgraber, who carried the team through its long streak with many brilliant bits of tossing until an unfortunate circumstance in late-season, that of four games in a week, forced him to weaken under the strain, and let Harding take the state title, which had rested here two years, back to Bridgeport, on Memorial Day. Two other games were lost after that, to Holy Cross freshmen, with Lloyd Jarvis pitching, and Naugatuck high, 4 to 2, in the closing game of the year. While the team didn't win the state title again, still it more than fulfilled expectations. The crowds during the year held up to the high level of the Jarvis-Greene regime.

The infield saw the two veterans, Alex Arico, first base and Chubby Gibbs, shortstop, at their regular positions, with Hal Cummings moved in from right field to do a real creditable job at third base, while second base was the only uncertain position, where several players were used, none seeming to stick. The outfield for the most of the year was composed of Anse Tombari in left, Buck LaCroix in center and Capt. Jack Marks in right. Marks, was out for part of the season with an injured ankle. Bud Fontaine did most of the catching and Weisgraber, Red Fagan and Louis Green the pitching. Fagan also filled in in the outfield when not in the box and was one of the heaviest hitters on the squad. Green produced the most brilliant bit of pitching with a one-hit victory over Westerly. Aime (Buck) LaCroix led the hitters with a mark of .456, followed by Hal Cummings with .413, Bud Fontaine, .367, Marks, .366 and Tombari .357.

TRACK

The track team, besides winning the league meet, defeated Chapman Tech and Putnam and lost to Bulkeley. The team captured four first places in the league meet, Frank Barber winning the shot put with 40 feet, 5 3-8 inches, a new record; Prokop taking the javelin throw with 128 feet, 10 1-4 inches; Robinson wining the broad jump with 19 feet, 9 1-8 inches and the relay team, Lyons, Harvey, Taylor and Robinson, which had previously won the New England title, winning the half-mile event in 1 min., 40 sec. Berkman, the 1930 captain of track, was an alternate on the relay team.

Eddie Lyons was the captain and he, with several other promising men, were lost by graduation but the foundation that has been laid is expected to carry this growing sport to the heights at the school in the very near future.

CROSS-COUNTRY

Cross country victories were scored over Bacon academy, Stonington, Conn. Aggies Frosh and Bulkeley Jr. Varsity while the harriers lost to Bacon, Chapman Tech, Suffield Prep and Bulkeley Varsity. All of the four meets that were lost were dropped by less than five points.

Two freshman sensations were uncovered during the season, Georgie Lambert and Johnny Lyons, brother of Eddie, track captain of 1929. Lambert turned in two firsts, in the Suffield and Stonington runs. The Stonington tilt was won by a perfect score, 15 to 40, the first time this ever happened with an Academy team.

FOOTBALL

The football team showed real power only twice during the season, first, in a 13-all tie with New Britain and secondly, in winning the Chapman Tech, 14 to 2, flashing from behind to do so. The team, in most of its games, lacked the goal-line punch and this probably robbed it of the league championship for the Westerly and Windham contests were lost by only one touchdown.

The team had no backfield stars around which to build its attack. Frank Barber, fullback worked like a Trojan to supply this punch but he was not quite equal to the task. Coach Whitney lost two stars by graduation, Jack Marks and Buck La Croix and their places could not be filled. The first seven games of the grid season were at home and of these the team won one tied one and lost five. The Wildcats then went on the road and won their final two games.

OTHER SPORTS

The old adage of "if you can't say anything good don't say anything at all," holds true in regard to basketball. The team won only four of the games on its regular schedule of about 20 tilts. Coach Whitney had lost several mainstays of his 1928 team, including Les Pingree, Lloyd Jarvis and Joe Viau and their positions were hard to fill. Chet Berghinzo was the outstanding player on the squad, jumping center while Fat Stevens and Frank Barber showed well at times in addition to Capt. Buck La Croix.

Tennis was handicapped by playing facilities and drew little interest from any but the active participants.

LEADERS

And now to the school The Bulletin wishes much success in the world of athletics for 1930, may the Wildcats claw their way to victory time and again and the Red and White wave supreme over the campus.

J. B. Martin Best of Local Nines During 1929 Season

Velvetmen Brought Leading Semi-Pro Aggregations of New England Here—Other Semi-Pros Had Only Fair Season—Smoke Shop and Taftville Legion Win League Titles—Dusty Loop Has Its Best Season.

Baseball was the leading sport in Norwich during 1929, holding complete sway from the first Academy game early in April until J. B. Martin closed up shop late in September. In between the Industrial and Junior leagues campaigned in successful seasons while Taftville A. A. had a rocky year and Riverview was successful in meeting fairly strong opposition. Two junior teams of Taftville, the Shyma club and the Taftville American Legion, provided the class among the younger fellows.

After the Academy had gone through a big year to win 17 and lost only three, J. B. Martin, Taftville and Riverview took over the scene and the Martins and Riverviews were successful, the former meeting most of the leading semi-pro clubs in New England and the latter the light semi-pro teams. Taftville started off strong but disbanded in mid-season.

The Industrial league had its biggest year in its third season, the Smoke Shop finally winning the title in a torrid race. Six teams were entered, two less than the previous year. The champions were the only new member of the circuit. The race was not decided until the final week with the Smokers finishing with 10 victories and four defeats for a mark of .714 and the Polish Citizens and Insilcos, the miracle team, tied for second. Lefty Lucier of the Smokers, was the leading pitcher and Meddie Dugas, of the Y. M. C. A., the leading batter. A mammoth banquet was held at the close of the season.

For the second straight year the Taftville American Legion team won the Junior league title, going through undefeated in its fourteen games and winning the trip to New York again to see the big leaguers play. The Elks who finished second, were the only team able to give the Legionaires any kind of a battle. Albie Matthews of the Elks was the leading batter of the circuit.

Three Schools Win League Championship

The Academy and Westerly each scored two victories in competition in the Eastern Connecticut - Western Rhode Island Interscholastic league during 1929. The Wildcats won the baseball and track titles while the football and cross-country honors went to the Rhode Islanders. Chapman Tech, once again, won the basketball title in the remaining sport sponsored by the conference.

Wildcats Won Ten Straight

The Academy's showing in baseball was by far the best work of the conference year. The Wildcats galloped sensationally through their ten games without a defeat, the first time this has ever been accomplished. Earle E. Brigham was the coach. Coch Matthew J. Sheridan's track team won the annual meet, held at Morgan park in May, the first time the Academy has ever come out first in this sport.

John Conway, better known as Jack, coached Chapman Tech's basketball champions and it was his first year at the school, too. Dwight Rogers was the mentor of the champion Westerly grid team and Mr. Patterson the cross-country leader.

First With Enlarged League

The year of 1929 was the first full one for the conference under the ten-team arrangement, six in Class A and four in Class B. Another innovation was the awarding of the football title by points instead of percentage but Westerly would have won with either system. N. F. A., Westerly, Chapman Tech, Stonington, Bulkeley and Windham are the Class A members and Putnam, Plainfield, Killingly and Tourtellotte the Class B teams. Robert Fitch high, the new school in Poquonnoc, which opened in September is expected into the league in active competition before 1930 ends.

The basketball season was marred by a controversy that prevented what might have been a thrilling finish. Windham and Putnam were the principals and the cause of the breach was a postponed game that Windham refused to play off. As a result of this, Windham and Putnam have temporarily broken off relations cancelling their football game this fall.

Boxing Has Checkered Year In Eastern Connecticut Rings

Clubs Found It Not So Profitable But Norwich Fighters Continue Good Work—Al Koziol and Johnny Kop Enter Pro Game and Get Good Start—Jimmy Quinn, Still an Amateur, Continues Remarkable Success—Some Local Punchers May Stage a Comeback During The Coming Year.

The cauliflower industry in Eastern Connecticut during the past year took a knockout punch on the button as far as financial returns were concerned. The year proved more or less of a financial flop in this part of the state although Commissioner Donohue's report for the entire state showed that it flourished in other sections.

The New London Arena Co., of New London, with Ernie Fagourey as matchmaker, after a successful open air season during the latter part of 1928 hit the toboggan early in 1929 and after one or two attempts at the open air game early in June the fistic plant closed its doors and accounts There was no summer activity in the boxing line in Norwich until the Shyma club in Taftville started to promote shows at Parish hall in November. The first show drew a packed house and a few dollars were put away in the treasury. The second show drew another capacity house and again there was a slight profit. The Shyma club is trying not to make the mistake of many other local promoters in giving the public too many shows and shows that are too expensive. They are running about one show in every four weeks and at the popular prices of $1.50 and $2 and getting boys who, although not top-notchers, certainly are fighters, and give the crowd plenty of action.

Quinn, Koziol, Kop Shine

Norwich, however, was well represented in the boxing circles of New England and perhaps as well as any other city. Three boys, Jimmy Quinn, amateur featherweight, Al Koziol, a pro lightweight and Johnny Kop, another pro lightweight, taking the name of Norwich into rings in all the principal cities of Connecticut, Rhode Island and Massachusetts. Quinn, state featherweight champion of 1928, did not defend his title last year but confined his work to Providence rings where he has become one of the most popular amateurs in that city. Quinn showed remarkable cleverness which appealed to the crowds. In the National amateurs he fought brilliantly but with bad breaks going against him in the selection of judges.

Johnny Kop, who started the year as an amateur, became a pro early in the year and his rise was meteoric. He started his professional career with a knockout and then followed nine straight wins by knockouts which made his services in demand. His winning streak was broken when he met Alex Tourain in Hartford and Tourain won the verdict after Kop had almost knocked him out in the third round. Kop's defeat was due in large measure to his being drawn to too fine a point for a bout at 135 pounds in New Haven a week previous which was called off. His bout with Tourain ended Kop's career for the time being as he broke a bone in his hand while training for a return match with the New Haven lad. The hand is not recovering as well as expected and it will be several months before Kop will be able to box.

Al Koziol, the other member of the trio of Norwich boxing stars, experienced an in and out season. After piling up an impressive record of knockouts in the amateurs Koziol went to the professional ring where he did not prove the sensation that he was in the simon pures. For a time he continued his knockout victories and then slipped and was taken over by a number of boys which sent his stock down. Appearing before a local crowd for the first time in several years, Koziol's fortunes started upward with a bound. Fighting Johnny Mack of New Haven, one of the toughest boys in the state, Koziol put the New Haven boy away in three rounds, a feat which ticketed Koziol as a real fighter. His next bout was with Leo Ledoux of Worcester whom he beat in eight rounds and although some disagreed with the decision no one could say that he didn't put up a good fight. Koziol is now on the upward trail and this year should see him knocking them over the same as he did in the amateurs.

Comebacks Are In Order

Other local boys who showed to advantage in the ring, both professionally and as amateurs, were Vic Darr, Freddie Besade, Benny Dempsey and Artie Gauvin. Mush Moriarty, who was one of the popular boys a year ago, did not box but will stage a comeback in 1930. One of the most popular boxers of the state several years ago fought one fight this year and won it. He is Johnny "Sheik" Leonard, who boxed in Buslo on a feature card and put up one of the best fights of his career. Whether Johnny will attempt to carry on in 1930 is not known but it would not surprise anyone if he did.

MEMORIAL DAY BEST FOR 1929 SPORTS

Memorial Day, once again, was Norwich's biggest day in the sport line during 1929. On that day close to 10,000 watched the annual Duwell ten-mile run and over 5,000 jammed the Academy campus to witness the Academy-Harding baseball game.

Other large crowds were at the Academy-Bulkeley, Academy-Deep River and Academy-Holy Cross Fresh baseball games, the Academy-Chapman Tech football game, the two fight shows conducted by the Shymas club at Parish hall, Taftville and several of the crucial Dusty league tilts.

ACADEMY BASEBALL WAS A SUCCESS FINANCIALLY

The financial report of the Academy baseball team for the season of 1929, shows total income of $4,540.78, without a doubt one of the best records in New England and due for the most part to the able work of Coach Earle E. Brigham. Total expenses for the baseball team exclusively were $2,977.25, leaving a surplus of $1,563.53 and of this amount $1,245.20 was spent for various improvements in athletic lines at the school. Among these are the formation of a new band, for which $500 was put aside, and $625 for improvements to the field. In addition. baseball carried track during the season, paying off $161.65 for this sport.

Clarence DeMar Won Ten-Mile Duwell Race

The third annual Duwell road race, of ten miles, held here Memorial day under the auspices of the Duwell A. A. was won by the celebrated marathoner, Clarence DeMar, of the Melrose (Mass.) American Legion. DeMar's time was 56 minutes, 14 seconds and the race was run on one of the hottest days of the season. Albert Michelson of the Millrose A. A., N. Y., was second with a time of 58 min., 27 sec., Max Lamp, also of the Millrose A. A., was third, Mel Porter, of Newark, fourth and Arthur Gavrin of the Millrose, fifth.

JOE FABER ONLY LOCAL BOY TO STICK IN LEAGUE BALL

Joe Faber, former Riverview player, was the only Norwich boy to play the season out in organized baseball, campaigning with success with the Omaha team of the Western league, where he batted .305, playing shortstop and ranking well up with the fielders in that position. Lefty Dugas had a tryout with York of the N. Y. league along with Nap Liberte, but both returned home. Dugas finished with East Douglas of the Blackstone Valley league in Massachusetts and his work was so impressive that he has been signed by the Pittsburgh Pirates for 1930.

1929 Was An Average One In Norwich Sports

The year, 1929, produced little out of the ordinary in Norwich's realm of sports. While it was not a poor year, it, likewise, was not exceptional and therefore must rate the title of an average 12 months.

Professional boxing sprang up again when the Shyma club of Taftville staged two successful shows but baseball, with three semi-pro teams, two leagues and the Academy operating, commanded the most attention. Soccer, which staged a comeback in 1928 continued to operate at J. B. Martin park while football was confined mainly to the Academy and one amateur team. Golf and tennis found their center of activity at the Norwich Golf club.

Local boys fared forth to win honors in both colleges, the prize ring and one professional baseball team.

Norwich Gains Golf Fame Through Miller

The name of Norwich, Conn., became known wherever golf is played as the city where Massie B. Miller was professional at the Norwich Golf club. This dimunitive little pro blazed across the golfing firmament like a shooting star, his big burst of brilliance coming when he tied for first place in the J. J. Lannin $5,000 memorial tournament at Salisbury Plains, L. I. However he was beaten in the play-off by none other than the well-known professional, Joe Turnesa.

Miller began to attract attention early in 1929 during the Florida winter tournaments where he placed in the money several times. Following his campaign in the south he returned to Norwich and then qualified for the National Open. Just before the national play he entered the New York state open where for his first two rounds he was well toward the top only to lose out in the last round. His play in this tournament attracted much attention and he was hailed as a coming golfer. Then came the National Open and here he continued his good play against the fastest field that has ever been entered. He finished in a tie with Long Jim Barnes for nineteenth place and by so doing has qualified for the open next year at Minneapolis.

Ties With Joe Turnesa

His next conquest of note was in the J. J. Lannin Memorial tournament at Salisbury Plains, L. I., in October, played under the most adverse of weather conditions. Here he went around the course with 303 for the 72 holes only to be tied by Joe Turnesa. His playing in this tournament attracted much attention and comment because of his size. In the playoff with Turnesa he lost by a large margin.

At the conclusion of the season at the Norwich Golf club Miller left for the coast tournaments having qualified for the National P. G. A. tourney. In this he failed to show. On the coast his play has not been up to the usual standard although in the San Bernardino pro-amateur he was only two strokes behind the leader. However, he did not finish in the money as there were seven ties for second place. He is entered in the Los Angeles $10,000 open and the Agua Caliente $25,000 open at Leo Deigel's club in Mexico.

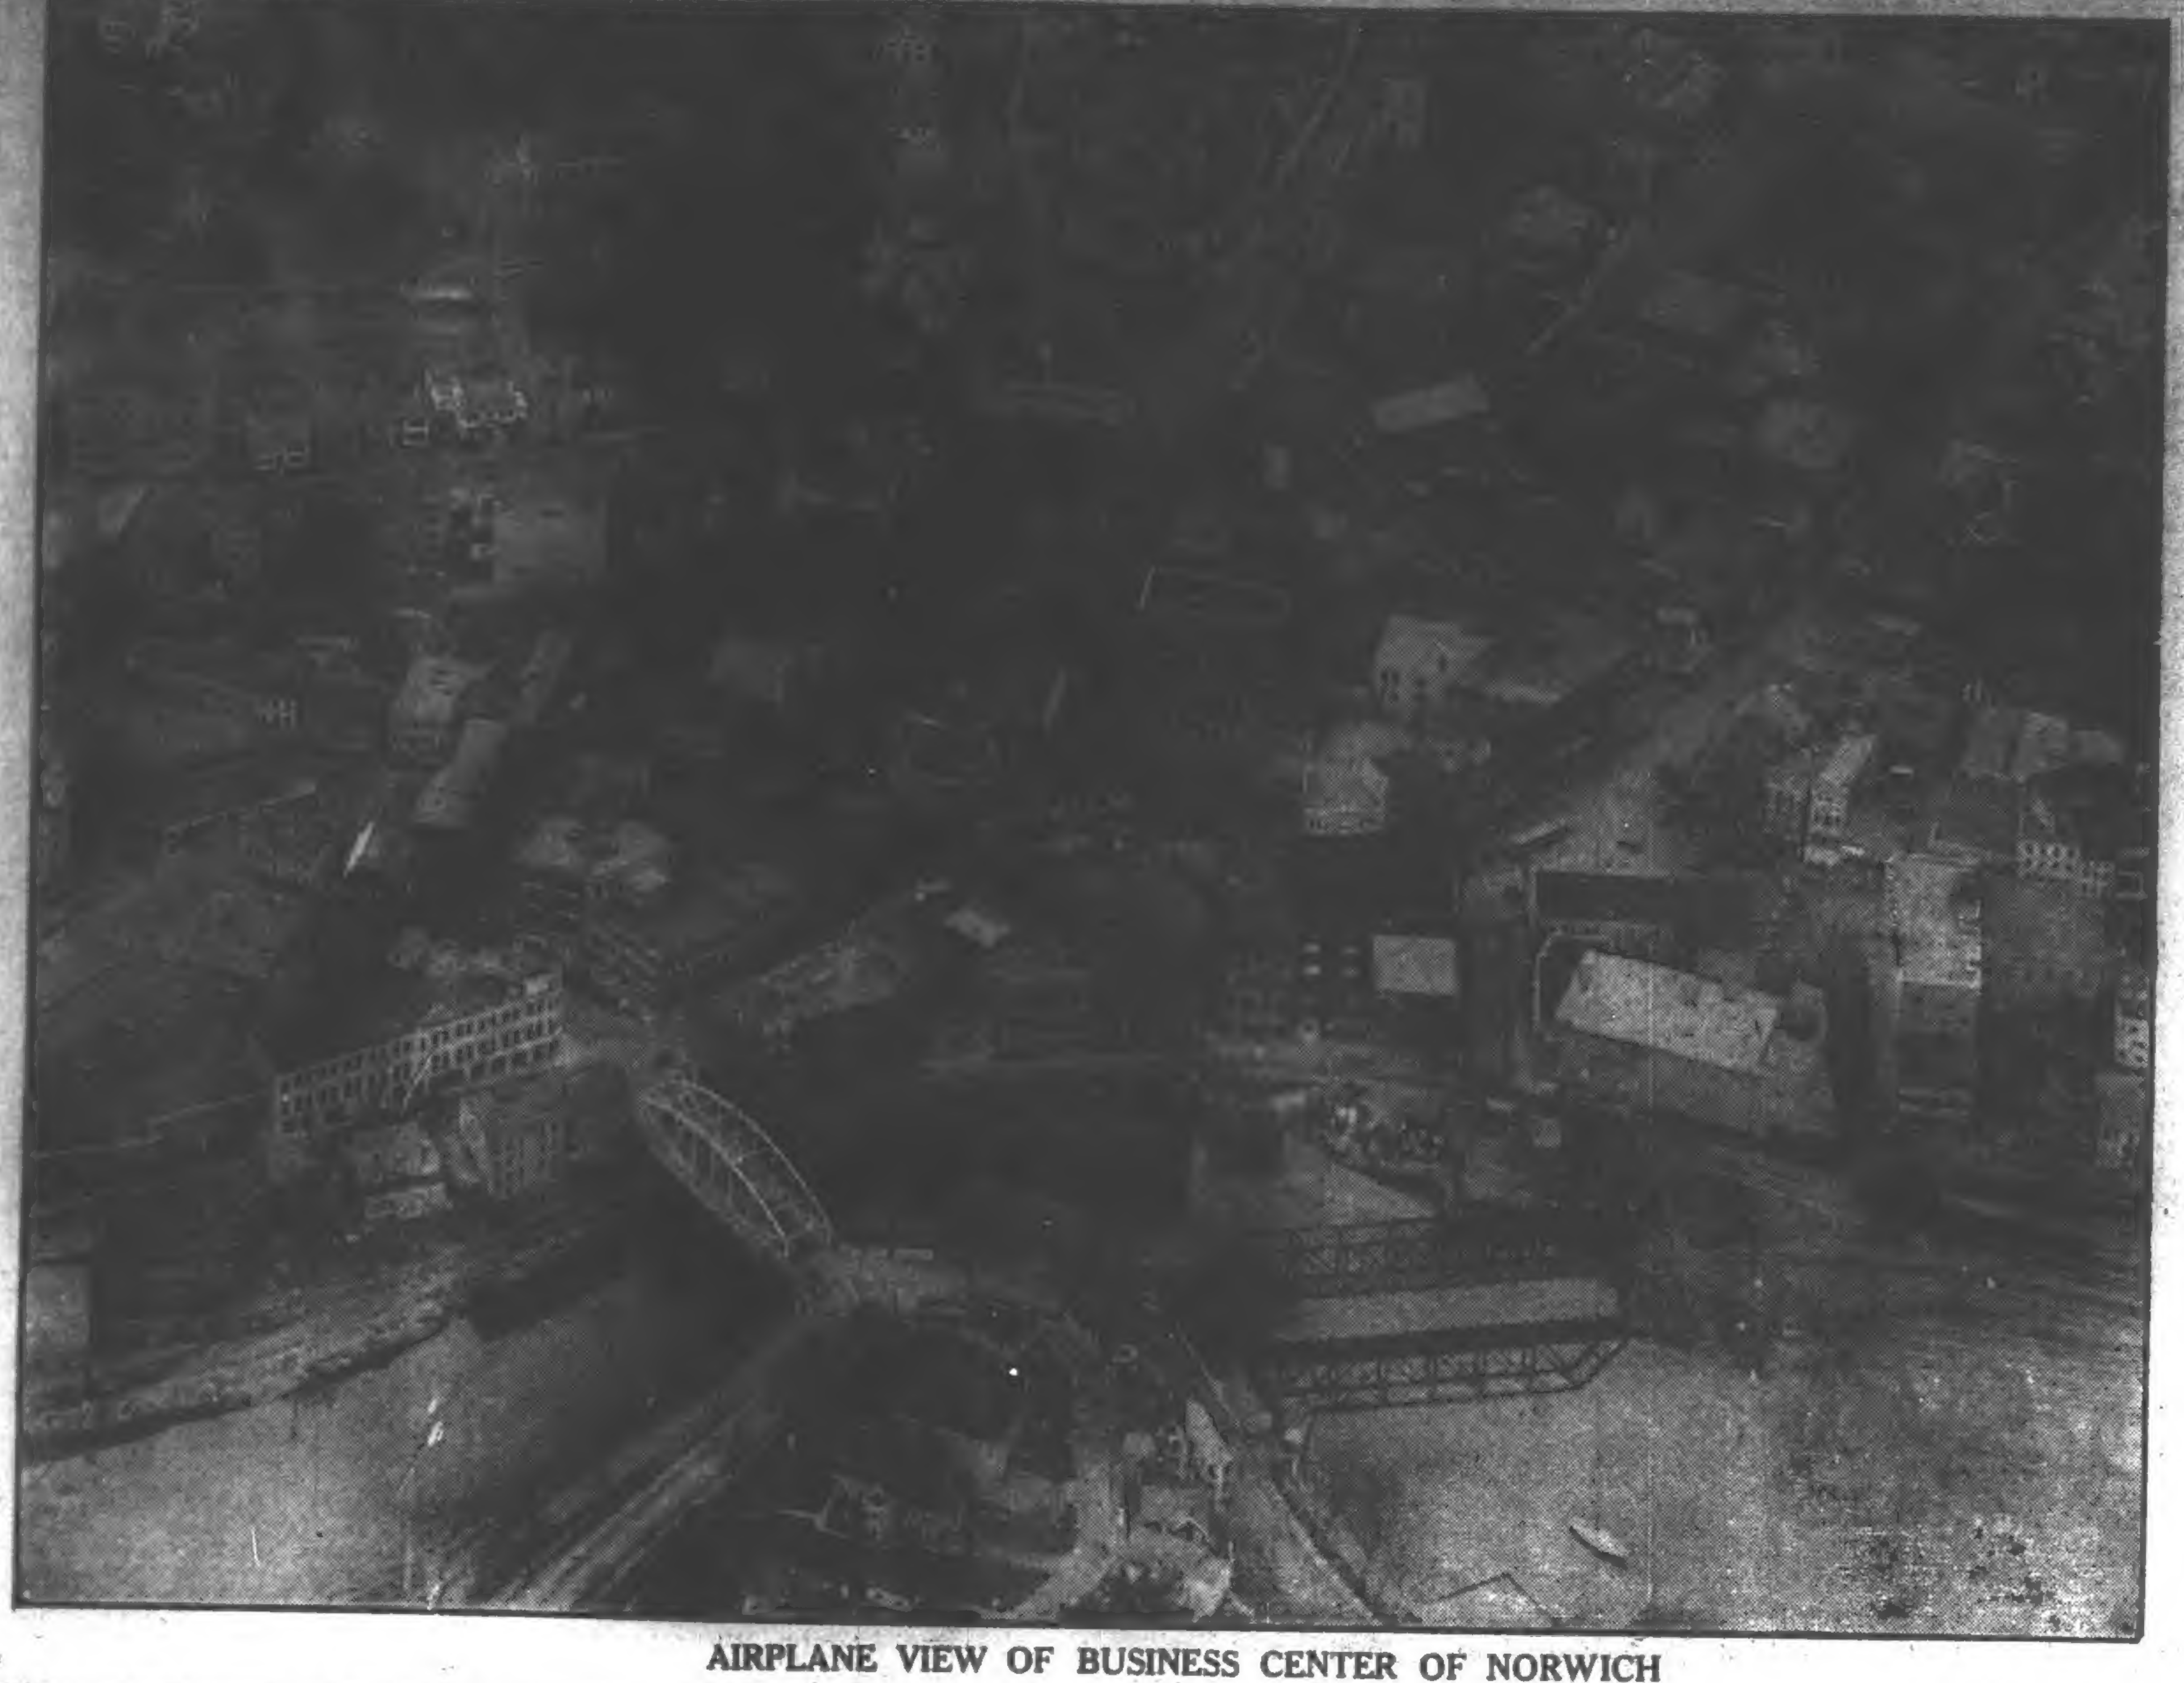
Club Had Big Year

The golfing season at the Norwich Golf club was the most successful in the history of the club and with the building of the Norwich Inn at the course it is expected that 1930 will be a much better season. Considerable money has been spent on changing the first green and in putting the fairways into condition.

The invitation tournament was a decided success with a large field of entries. The tournament was won by Max Kaesche of New Jersey who defeated William B. Lanman of Cleveland, O., in the finals. Dave Morton, club champion, got as far as the semi-finals to be beaten on the 19th hole by Kaesche.

The club championship was not played out owing to the lateness of the season, Dave Morton and John Fontaine reaching the finals. One match was played but was halved and then the weather prevented a final playoff.

Plans for the coming season are extensive and more golfing activities are expected during the 1930 season.



AIRPLANE VIEW OF BUSINESS CENTER OF NORWICH

AERO CLUB TO PUT NORWICH IN TOUCH WITH WORLD BY AVIATION FACILITIES

Air-Minded Group Forms Club to Further Interest in Service by Planes for This Community—Members Aim to Become Pilots—Ambitious to Build Up Strong Organization Through Large Membership and Public Support.

To be air-minded is a necessary attitude for every progressive city at the present day if it is to be prepared to meet conditions of a future that is already upon us. For that development a small group of Norwich aviation enthusiasts organized the Norwich Aero club last June, with the hope that the club will form a nucleus around which can be gathered all who are anxious to see Norwich take its place among the cities of the state that can offer aviation facilities to its citizens.

Those constituting the first membership of the club all have the ambition ultimately to become flyers and they chose as their first president, Clarence F. Lynds, prime mover in the organization, with the following as other officers: George H. Moore, vice president; Fred Seidel, secretary, and Luther G. Andrews, treasurer.

All the members have taken flights as passengers in planes and two have had flying experience. Morris Adelmen is on his way to becoming a pilot and is now taking lessons at Providence, having already finished his duo course and is now flying solo there.

Paul Theve is the other member with flying experience, having gained this in army service so that he will be an advanced pupil when he takes instruction in order to meet the rigid Connecticut regulations to get a flying license. The club has one woman member, Miss Beatrice Rau, whose enthusiasm is as great as that of any of the members of the club. She has the distinction of being the only one to make a parachute jump, which she filed recently at Worcester.

Besides those already named the membership includes William Murphy, R. Bazinet, Edward Beebe and Felix Pankiewicz.

Through the activity of the club the accompanying airplane picture of the center of the city has been taken and Norwich has been put on the aviation map by having the name of the city painted on the roof of the Shannon building in letters 15 feet high. The length of the sign is 90 feet, making a mark that can be easily picked out by the man in the air when he wishes to identify his location.

A flying field is available through the offer of Edward Beebe, one of the most enthusiastic members, whose farm on the Gallows hill road has been used successfully for flight the past year by "barnstorming" parties of aviators.

When the club was organized, it was with the idea that it might be possible to have a pilot here and get instruction through the use of his plane, but this is a pretty expensive proposition and it now seems more likely that the members will take their ground course and other instruction at Hartford.

It is the hope of the club to build up such a large membership and obtain such support as to buy a plane which would be available for commercial use, serving Norwich business concerns that wanted air transportation and taking up passengers for pleasure flights. The plane would be flown by qualified club members for such service, and when not in use in commercial service, could be used for flying by the club members.

The club meets every first and third Wednesday evening at the state armory and is hoping to make such strides in the coming year as will be a long step towards the accomplishment of its purpose in giving Norwich the facilities of air transport, which is indispensible in the present day to cities that would keep step with the march of progress.

judging team. This club has fifteen members.

The Franklin Dairy club of Franklin has been organized less than one year, nevertheless, they completed their first year's work. This club has thirteen members; all very active. Jason Kingsley is their leader and Arnold Manning is assisting him. Arnold is one of our older club boys. Eight members from this club went on the county dairy judging trip; one boy making the county team. Eleven of the boys submitted annual reports. This is our best dairy club at the present time and were winners of a beautiful loving cup for being the best dairy club in 1928 in New London county.

Poultry.

Poultry club work has been stressed this year more than any of the other agricultural projects. At the present time we have nine poultry clubs, two more than last year. Our total poultry enrollment for the year was 91 members.

Our poultry clubs are as follows: Wehava Poultry club of Lebanon, Red and White Poultry club of Stonington, Sunshine Poultry club of Voluntown, Progressive Poultry club of Preston, Norwich Junior Poultry club of Norwich, Niantic Poultry club of Niantic, Laymour Poultry club of Ledyard, Bettering the Best Poultry club of Waterford, Prospect Hill Poultry club of Colchester.

Judging.

There were eighteen boys from the above club who attended the judging contest held at the Norwich Poultry show. The high ten in this contest went to the state college for further training one week later. The four high in these contests represented our county in the state contest held at Durham. Two of our boys, Herbert Lowe and Leo Vollowitz, made the state team and went to Madison Square Garden. Our team placed first in the state contest.

We held another poultry judging trip and field day during the summer; there were seventeen boys on this trip. We picked the high four to represent our county in the state contest held at the state 4-H club exhibit. One member of our county team, Hollis Cummings, made the state team and will go to Madison Square Garden this next year.

We had more and better poultry demonstrations during the past year than ever before. We had first and second place demonstration teams in the state contest. The winners demonstraated caponizing, the second place team demonstrated making of a blood cut, killing and dry picking.

County Junior Egg Laying Contest.

During the year we had 67 members enrolled in our county junior egg laying contest. Forty-seven of these kept and submitted their records until the close of the contest or until they were forced to drop out because of selling birds to make room for pullets, etc. We also had our members enroll in the State Junior Egg Laying contest. Our enrollment in this contest was larger than any other county in the state.

Foods.

Although there are not very many food clubs in the county, there is a growing interest in foods work. There were seven food clubs in this past year against five clubs in 1927-28. Five groups of girls work on food projects, two groups carrying on both cooking and canning programs, making seven food clubs, including 63 projects and 51 individuals.

FRANCES LAMB,
of Franklin, outstanding Homemaking Girl of Connecticut.

A total of 970 1-2 quarts of fruits and vegetables, 240 jars of jelly and jam, and 96 1-2 quarts of pickles were canned.

The ABCDEF club of Lebanon and the Pachaug Kitchen Bees of Griswold carried on both canning and cooking work with 12 completions. The Do-Well Cooking club had both a canning and a cooking demonstration team in the county contest and a canning demonstration team in the state contest.

The Happiness Girls of Poquonock Bridge were well along on a milk project when unfortunately their leader was forced to give up the club on account of illness. Three girls have now joined a clothing club under a new leader.

The M Jar club of Franklin set a goal of 1,000 pints, and the nine members completing canned a total of 1,069 pints of fruits, vegetables and pickles and 150 jars of jelly and jam at a total saving of $353.-17.

At the county demonstration contest there were three canning teams and one cooking team. The county sent two of the canning teams to the state demonstration contest where they placed first and second for the state. Three New London county girls took the first, second and third places in the state canning judging contest. The county exhibit included approximately 120 jars, consisting of four twelve-jar entries, the remainder of individual jars.

Nutrition.

Our nutirtion work consists of three health clubs all located in the town of Franklin.

Three new health clubs with an enrollment of 70 members were organized in October and are carrying on the regular program as outlined for all health clubs of the state.

Clothing.

Sixteen clothing clubs with a total enrollment of 159 members and 84 completions carried out the prescribed program of work outlined for all clothing clubs of the state. A total of 663 garments and articles were made and 2377 articles mended.

The Franklin Thimble Wearers were the first clothing club of the county to complete the fourth year program. Frances Lamb, a member of this club and also of the M Jar Canning club was one of the four girls to represent the state at Camp Vail at Eastern States exposition where she won high honors in clothing judging. Frances represented Connecticut at the National club congress at Chicago as winner of the Montgomery Ward trip.

We had 66 boys, girls and leaders at the state club round-up. Our second annual county 4-H club field day found 300 boys and girls in attendance. We had 63 boys, girls and leaders at junior short course held at Connecticut Agricultural college this past year.

Summary for Year.

In summarizing the work in New London county I would say that in general, we have had a successful year; we have accomplished something. Much of what we have done is shown in this report either by statistics or narratively; but there are many things that have been done that cannot be shown by a report, nevertheless, they are of value in promoting club work in the county.

During the year we have had 54 local volunteer workers helping us to carry on club work.

Our membership was 465 different individuals; 274 of these completed their projects giving us a percentage of close to 60 completions.

There were three judging teams trained that placed first, second and of close to 60 per cent completions.

There were 22 demonstration teams trained inclding two firsts, two seconds, in state competition out of five teams entered.

Garden club work was carried on in five communities with fair results in production.

Poultry work was carried on in 12 communities. The high spots in our poultry work were the improving of 40 poultry houses. We scored the houses once, made suggestions as to improvements that could be made with practically no expense, came back to score the houses a second time and in nearly every instance they scored higher the second time than the first.

We also helped boys buy 5,000 tested chicks, as a result their mortality was lower, they are more interested because they have good pullets instead of scrubs and they should get better production this next year. We are able to help them get these chicks at the price of untested stock, thus we helped them save some money.

We ran a county egg laying contest of our own besides having the boys enroll in the state contest. During the year we had 61 enrolled in our contest, 47 of these completed their work for the year.

We also held a poultry field day and three county judging trips. Our team placed first in state contest and we placed two individuals on the state team. Our demonstration teams placed first and second in the state contest.

Dairy was carried on in eight communities with only fair results. We did not get the completions we hoped for. We held one dairy field day and judging trip. Our county team placed second in state competition; we had two members on the state dairy judging team. We carried out a dairy production contest with ten enrolled; this was quite successful but we necessarily had to have all breeds compete and this fact cut the interest in the contest to a certain extent.

Food work has been carried on in seven communities. There were four cooking clubs and three canning clubs. Our canning demonstration teams placed first and second in state contest and our canning judges placed first, second and third in state contest. One canning club canned over 1,000 jars in two months. We had a very high quality canning exhibit at our county fair.

Nutrition in the form of health clubs was carried on in two communities. These clubs all put on achievement programs.

Our clothing project was carried on in 16 communities. We had one fourth year club, four second year clubs and 11 first year clubs. I believe the quality of workmanship shown in these clubs was much better than a year ago due to subject matter help the girls received from Miss Myrtle Files, state club agent, and Miss E. Elisabeth Grover, assistant club agent. More clubs had demonstration teams this year than last. One of the high spots of the year for clothing club girls was their trip on which they had an opportunity to visit many places of interest.

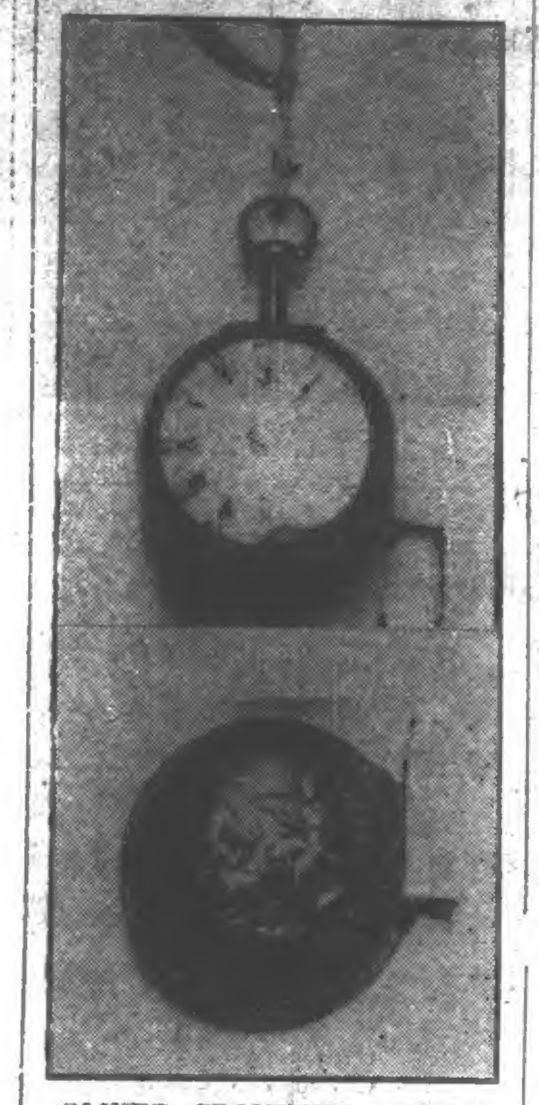
NORWICH MAN OWNS ANCIENT WATCH MADE OVER 400 YEARS AGO IN PARIS

Heirlooms and antiques that go back to the time of our grandparents are cherished objects of family possession in these days when a new value is given to that which has the mark of years upon it. But when the article in question goes back several centuries to the time when it was in use, it enters the field of the rare and unique with a distinction all its own.

Of such a character is an ancient watch in the possession of Dr. Daniel L. Jones, of East Great Plain, to whom it came through his grandfather, the first Daniel L. Jones, a rugged Welshman, who came to this country at the age of 17 and died in Brooklyn, N. Y., in his 93rd year.



OLIVER CROMWELL WATCH
With Embossed Silver Case

The old watch which Dr. Jones treasures so highly, was made in 1514, one of the earliest watches to be made, as the invention of portable timepieces dates from the end of the 15th century. It bears the mark of Hommet, Paris. When compared with modern timepieces, so thin as hardly to be noticed in the pocket, the old watch of Parisian make is a crude affair, bulky and unwieldy, so that it was carried suspended from the belt rather than in the pocket. The upright position was apparently necessary as it had a small pendulum swinging back and forth. Instead of a spring, a flexible cord was used and it was necessary to wind the watch twice a day. The dial is marked in the usual way with Roman numerals, there is only an hour hand to show the time. The case enclosing the works is of brass, with a thick, heavy crystal over the dial and another heavy crystal for the back cover.

WATCH, 400 YRS. OLD,
One of The Earliest Made

Oliver Cromwell Watch

Another old watch which Dr. Jones owns and which formerly belonged to his grandfather, has much interest attached to it because it formerly belonged to Oliver Cromwell, Lord Protector of England in the first half of the 17th century. As Mr. Jones was a distant relative of Cromwell, he was particularly interested in securing the watch, which he bought for a snug sum from some of the Cromwell relatives on one of his return visits to England. As compared with the timepiece of the first period, the Cromwell watch may be called fairly modern. It is considerably smaller, and is contained in a light silver case, with embossed pattern.

Revolutionary War Sword

Coming down about 100 years, and in another field for the antiquarian, is a third souvenir of unusual interest and value which is a sword that was used in the Revolutionary war and saw service even before that time, when it was carried by Francis Lewis, one of the signers of the Declaration of Independence. This is a fine example of the workmanship of that period and is contained in a brass scabbard that it elaborately ornamented.

THE MORGAN SWORD,
Carried Before The Revolution

The sword was made in France and was used by Francis Lewis when he was commissary agent to the British army in 1765, when he was taken prisoner by the French at Fort Oswego. Francis Lewis presented the sword to his son, Major General Morgan Lewis, a former governor of New York, who used it during the Revolutionary war and in later wars.

The old sword came into the possession of Grandfather Jones by gift, in 1840, from General Lewis, who was his warm friend, and he also gave Mr. Jones a handsome oil painting of himself for which he posed in his military uniform of colonial days, wearing the historic sword.

Both the sword and the painting are now in possession of the Norwich descendant of the Welsh ancestor, who lived for 60 years in the house in which he died in Brooklyn. He never forgot his native spot in Swansea, Wales, but made it his invariable custom to make a guest of any Welshman visiting Brooklyn and entertain him at his home with warm-hearted hospitality.

BASE INDUSTRIES SHOW OPTIMISM AS 1930 DAWNS

Gen. W. W. Atterbury, president of the Pennsylvania railroad—We have every intention of going ahead with our entire program of improvements as originally planned without slackening, retrenchment or postponement. We see nothing in the general business situation to warrant our deviating from this course.

E. B. Reeser, president of the Amer- by general economic indications, alican Petroleum institute—Conservation policies adopted a year or more ago are generally conceded to have gone far toward the stabilization of the petroleum industry. Under the cooperative movement through the various fields, at least 10,000,000 barrels of crude oil that otherwise would have been produced were kept in the ground the natural tankage and the proper place to store petroleum.

F. H. Frazer, chairman of the board of the General Baking corporation—The bread baking industry is one of the most fundamental and secure of all industries. Consequently the outlook for the next year is not restricted though a recent survey of baking executives revealed that 92 per cent found business conditions in their respective communities sound and healthy, with favorable prospects for 1930.

Gerard Swope president of the General Electric company—Progress in the electrical manufacturing industry during 1929 has been very satisfactory in every direction. Distinct progress has been made in the initiation of plans for the electrification of railroads, and we look forward to still greater development in this direction in the near future.

O. R. Seagraves, president of the United Gas company—At the outset of 1930 the natural gas industry shows no slackening of the high rate of activity and expansion that marked its progress in 1929. The coming 12 months should witness further significant improvement.

IODINE STUDY PLANNED BY MELLON INSTITUTE

PITTSBURGH, Jan. 1—(AP)—The effect of iodine in the food of cattle, sheep and swine is to be investigated through the Mellon Institute here noted research organization.

The investigation will be conducted at Pennsylvania State college under the direction of Prof. E. B. Forbes the institute announced.

At the same time, the institute will sponsor investigation in iodine preparations for external use, supplementing the common tincture of iodine now used in the external treatment of cuts, sprains and bruises.

Consideration is being given, it was said, to a proposal to found a research scholarship in a medical school for determining the usefulness of iodine in internal medicine

BERNARD SHAW GETS PLACE ON THE MAP

Snake's Poison Virile

LENOIR, N. C. Jan. 1—(AP)—When Levi Reed, noted snake-catcher, quit the business, he began using his "snake box" for other purposes only to find it a death trap. A cat placed in the box to catch a mouse was found dead next morning. Then Reed lost a possum in like fashion. When 46 young turkeys he was fattening for market died in the same manner he abandoned the box.

Southwestern university, at Georgetown, Tex., has a set of triplets in its student body for the first time in the school's 56 years.

Samuel Collins, who is employed in Arcadia, R. I., has been at his home for a few days.

Mr. and Mrs. Frank Thayer of Cranston, R. I., were guests Sunday of Mr. and Mrs. George Loring.

DANIELSON

Lieut. Albert S. Field, formerly commanding officer at the Danielson state police barracks, was here from department headquarters today on official business.

The freight service by truck that the N. Y., N. H. & H. R. R. inaugurated recently between Danielson and Putnam appears to be working out very well. It is understood that this service is to be extended later.

In maintaining his policy of declining to give a night's lodging to rounders, Chief John McFarland had occasion to turn down a swaggering and rather insolent applicant. The man later admitted that he had money. Turning down the chief's suggestion about getting a hotel room the man paid bus fare and headed south.

Henry Maden and Antoine Cote, two of the six Danielson young men hurt in an automobile accident in Foster on Sunday, were discharged from the Rhode Island hospital in Providence today and were brought to their homes here. Walter Liz remains at the hospital and faces the prospect of being a patient there for some time. He has a deep gash along the top of his scalp and some broken ribs, among other injuries he received when he was thrown out through the top of the sedan when the car was wrecked near Dolly Cole hill.

When Killingly grange holds its next meeting, Monday evening, Jan. 6, there is to be what is described as a beggars' assembly. Each granger is to come dressed as a beggar and those not being able to pass the beggar's test will be subject to a fine. A member remarked today that it is hoped that no one will get "pinched" going to or coming from the meeting. It is planned that each woman shall bring an old hat and trimming material and needle and thread. The men, it is suggested, will be asked to trim the hats. Those arranging the affair are certain the gathering will be a most enjoyable one.

Local and state officers will show no leniency to motorists who attempt to drive cars here New Year's day with 1929 registrations. The right to use these markers expired tonight at midnight. In the past it has happened regularly that delinquent motorists have sought permission from officers in numbers of cases to use old numbers until new ones could be obtained. These requests are invariably refused, as the officers have no authority to issue such permission.

That many car owners here will be without 1930 number plates was forecast today. Some have delayed too long in going about getting registrations, and others have not applied for new registrations as yet.

New Year's morning at :30 at the Sacred Heart church in Wauregan, Miss Eleanor M. Egan of that place and of Putnam and Chester E. Caouette of Danielson are to be united in marriage.

Francis McDonald and James Moran will be visitors on New Year's day with relatives of Mr. McDonald's in Taunton.

Rev. Charles A. Downs of Goodyear, a past master of Killingly grange, is to fill the chaplain's station at the state grange meeting to be held in Hartford, beginning Jan. 14. Dr. J. Howard Hoyt, the regular chaplain, will not be able to attend this year.

Upwards of a score of the Danielson members of Putnam lodge of Elks were in Putnam this evening to attend the annual New Year's eve party. There was entertainment by professional performers and a lunch was served.

New automobile numbers appeared on scores of cars owned here today. Other 1930 registrations noted were on cars from the following states: Ohio, New York, Rhode Island, Massachusetts, New Hampshire and North Carolina.

During the Fellowship hour at the Watch Night service at the Westfield Congregational church this evening an interesting program was furnished by the young people of the various churches.

Decorative strings of lights that have been in use in the business section since mid-December are to be used no more after the first of the year and will be taken down during the course of this week.

Mrs. James Monohan, Misses Alice, Barbara and Margaret Monohan and Katherine Daniels of Providence and formerly resident here were visitors with friends in Danielson today.

Sessions of the evening school will be resumed this week following the Christmas recess. This school will continue in session until spring, study periods being held three evenings each week.

PLAINFIELD

The annual meeting of the Lincoln club was held Monday evening in the vestry of the First Congregational church. An oyster supper was served from 6 to 7:30 by the committee, James Royle, Cecil Butler, Henry Betterman and George Babcock. There was music by Joseph Shippee, old-time fiddler, accompanied by his daughter, Mrs. Otto Opperman, at the piano, and a solo by Miss Hazel Edgerton, who was accompanied at the piano by Miss Ruth Potvin. Jason P. Lathrop addressed the club on his trip to the Pacific coast. At the election of officers the following officers were elected: President, Fred Lyon; vice-president, Nathan Exley; secretary, John Dodge; treasurer, [illegible]kins.

The class of 1930 of Plainfield high school has made a radical departure from the custom of previous years so that the committee for the senior play, in conference with the class adviser, Miss Whaley, and the play coach, Miss Violette, has selected an old stage favorite for presentation, Sheridan's "The Rivals." The cast comprises: Prologue, Edward Bellavance; Sir Anthony Absolute, Donald Collins; Captain Absolute, Louis Lafrance; Bob Acres, Walter Reese; Sir Lucius O'Trigger, John Lyons; Falkland, Wallace Burns; Fag, Stanley Malek; David, Ervin Paquist; Thomas, Thomas Hargreaves; Honest John, John Dodge; Dickie, John Marchessault; chairmen, Stanley Baldyga, William Pye, Edward Gallagher; Lydia, Helen Krauss; Julia, Ethel Selley; Mrs. Malaprop, Hazel Edgerton; Lucy, Elizabeth Wilde; Mistress Flint, Marion Safford; Mistress Lissener, Elsie Daley; Neighbor Patience, Mildred Kinne.

said this morning that the business outlook for 1930 for Putnam, considering the unprecedented heights attained in 1929, is for an even better year.

The sudden depressions in the value of stocks and the panic in the market during the months of October and November had little if any affect upon this city. Bank treasurers here said that in no instance were their clients forced to dispose of their holdings because of the demand for more collateral when stocks fell to unprecedented low marks. Only paper losses were sustained, it was said. Thus, from every angle, Putnam will begin its new year with golden opportunities for far greater advancements at its gateway.

The New Year was ushered in at 12 o'clock this morning with a number of gala affairs which were held throughout the city. An indoor sports treat for fans was held at the high school gymnasium Tuesday evening. Two basketball games were played, one between the Divisional Headquarters company team and the Celtic five, local professional court aggregations. The second game was played between the Putnam high net-men and the Alumni quintet made up of former high school players. At the close of the games dancing was held in the gymnasium until 12:30 this morning. The Putnam lodge of Elks held its annual New Year's eve party which was featured by a vaudeville show and supper. The fete was held in the Elks home on Main street and was largely attended. At midnight a special vaudeville and motion picture show was staged at the Bradley theatre before a capacity audience. A New Year's eve frolic was held in the rooms of the Knights of Columbus on Main street and was largely attended by the lodge members. Midnight to morning dances were held in many of the towns surrounding Putnam.

At an early hour this morning masses in honor of the feast of the circumcision were celebrated at St. Mary's church. Other masses were held at , 9:15 and 10:30 o'clock.

Mr. and Mrs. Aaron A. Sandelovitz of New Haven, formerly of Putnam, were visitors here Monday.

A Watch Night service was held last evening at the Methodist Episcopal church on Grove street, with a sermon by Rev. J. E. Duxbury and a special programme of music rendered by the church choir.

Acting Captain Liard of the police department has assigned Officer Joseph Page to night patrol duty in the north end of the city and Officer Benoi Durand to day duty in the business section; Supernumerary Officer Alphonse Dubrieul to night patrol duty in the business section. Officer Alpherie Sponcey is acting in the capacity of sergeant of police, this office being made vacant by Sergeant Liard's appointment by Mayor Richard to complete the remainder of the late Captain W. J. Jarvis' term of office.

Work on the Seder block on Main street is progressing rapidly. Masonry work on the west side, facing Canal street, is nearly completed and walls on the south and north sides are rising at a rapid pace. It is expected that the block will be completed on or about March 15.

DIVORCE PETITION OF MRS. BOSWORTH IS DENIED

(Special to The Bulletin)

PUTNAM, Dec. 31. — In superior court here today Judge E. M. Yeomans denied the petition of Mrs. Daisy P. Bosworth for divorce from her husband, Burton D. Bosworth, of Pomfret. In deciding the case, Judge Yeomans said that he failed to find where the counsel for the plaintiff had submitted evidence to substantiate charges of adultery, which Mrs. Bosworth named as grounds for her action. It was mentioned in Judge Yeoman's decision that Bosworth had undoubtedly lied during the course of his cross examination by counsel for the plaintiff and should have been charged with perjury. Six hours were required by the attorneys in introducing evidence in the case.

GREETINGS TO THE CITIZENS OF PUTNAM

—MAYOR RICHARD

The old year is passing and soon we will enter upon the new. To the citizens of Putnam I bring greetings and wish them all a happy and prosperous New Year.

In entering upon the New Year we do so in a feeling that this city is on the eve of a progressive era. Before another year rolls around several problems that have been confronting the city will have been satisfactorily solved. A new industry has been established in the city which will furnish employment to some of our citizens. There is employment for all who are willing to work. There is little or no distressed poverty in the city. The accumulation of savings the past year is evidence that the people are well and satisfactorily employed.

The city has been entirely free from epidemic and its health record is among the best of the cities in the state. There have been no disastrous fires. We have passed through the twelve months in a quite orderly manner and the city has been free from higher crimes.

The citizens have every cause to look to the new optimistically. There is nothing on the horizon to cause uneasiness or alarm. The outlook should engender courage and confidence for the future. The community is a large municipal family striving to coordinate its various activities that all may share in the blessings and prosperity that the weeks and months of the new 1930 hold in store. If we all cooperate to help one another as members of one great family, always striving for advancement, it seems unassuming to predict a prosperous new year just around the corner.

WESTERLY

Edward J. Purtill, 24 Lester avenue, Pawcatuck, clerk at the Westerly post office, sustained painful injuries about five a. m. Tuesday while at work in the office. In relief of the regular window clerk William Kerens, he had just opened the shutter and raised the heavy metal grating to reach through the stamp window to receive a parcel from a patron. The grating, insecurely hooked, slipped and crashed down on his left hand. The bone of the little finger was broken and the other fingers were badly bruised and lascerated. He was taken to the office of Dr. Michael H. Scanlon for treatment and then removed to his home.

Palmer chapter, No. 28, Royal Arch Masons of Pawcatuck, held a special convocation Monday night. The Most Excellent Master's degree was conferred on a class.

STATE POLICE GET GOODS BUT BURBACH IS FREED

(Special to The Bulletin)

WESTERLY, R. I., Dec. 31—Prosecutor Henry P. Hammacher, of Mystic, at the Tuesday morning session of Stonington town court before Judge William A. Wilcox asked for an absolute discharge without costs of Henry Burbach, whose place on the Westerly-Stonington state highway was raided Friday, Dec. 13th at 9 p. m. In the raiding party at the time were Connecticut State Police Officers Arthur Whitmarsh and Arthur P. Klathe from Groton barracks and Patrolman William Ostman of Stonington. Of the eight cases of home brew beer reported as found at the time of the raid with a ten-gallon still complete, one gallon of so-called moonshine and two 52-gallon barrels of apple mash, the gallon jug of moonshine and three bottles of samples of the wet goods, was in court as evidence. Prosecutor Hammacher presented a petition signed by fifteen neighbors and responsible citizens of the town declaring the accused without reputation of selling, as far as they knew. The prosecutor stated that the home brew had not shown sufficient alcoholic content and that there had been no evidence of any sale; that the evidence obtained was not sufficient to convict beyond a reasonable doubt. On the prosecutor's recommendation Judge Wilcox declared the accused absolutely discharged without the payment of costs and on a waivure presented for the vessels' and contents, an order was issued by the court for their destruction. Attorney John F. Gallagher, who appeared for the accused had nothing to say in behalf of the defendant. State Police Officer Whitmarsh and Patrolman Ostman did not go on the witness stand. Prosecutor Hammacher declared that this was a second time that he had come into court with a case where the state was not in a position to prosecute for lack of sufficient evidence.

Last Transfers of 1929

In the office of Westerly town clerk Tuesday for the 1929 year of business Town Clerk Whipple received nearly a dozen documents for record. Among transfers were the following deeds:

Dec. 31. James A. Dunn to Daisy R. Opie, land on the east side of Elm street.

Dec. 31. Shelter Harbor Corporation to Ada C. Fisher of New York city, Lots Nos. 13 and 14, Section 21, Shelter Harbor.

Dec. 31. Easement deed, Westerly Industrial and Improvement association to South County Public Service Co. right of way for electric light and power lines in strip of land 15 feet wide of approximately 100 by 103 feet, bounded northerly by land of Rossi and Matarese, easterly by Friendship street and southerly by other lands of grantors.

Dec. 31. George R. and Ida M. Brown to Helen Raithel, land on the westerly side of Boston Post road.

Dec. 31. Thomas Perry to Margaret W. Perry, his wife, an undivided one-half interest in land with dwelling, known as "Thomas Perry Homestead" deeded the grantor by Charles Perry, April 30, 1913.

As is the annual custom, the People's Mission of Pawcatuck, held Watch Night services at the West Broad street mission rooms Tuesday night, beginning at 10 o'clock.

To greet the advent of the New Year many road houses and hotels in neighboring towns and cities had their quotas of Westerly people. Unlike previous years, Westerly theatres omitted their special all-night programs of vaudeville entertainments.

Services will be held today (New Year's day) at the Church of the Immaculate Conception in observance of the Feast of the Circumcision. NEW LONDON PATROL BOAT BRINGS IN MONTAUK CRAFT WITH LIQUOR CARGO

(Special to The Bulletin)

NEW LONDON, Dec. 31. — The United States Coast Guard rum chasers are continuing their drive to put a stop to the transporting of New Year's liquor through the sound. Early today the patrol boat 138, in command of Boatswain's Mate William J. Lynch, captured the fishing boat Leona M. Sproul, hailing from Montauk, with 600 cases of liquor, mostly Scotch and rye. The Sproul and her crew of three men were brought into port. The rum-runner was tied up at the state pier. The capture of the Sproul was an easy task and gun-fire was not needed to make the capture, as was the case Sunday when three of the crew of the Black Duck, now moored here, were instantly killed and another was seriously wounded when a machine gun was turned on the speed boat. When the Sproul was sighted, she was headed for Montauk Point and it is presumed that it was intended to land the cargo at that point which has long been a delivery depot for rum-runners. The patrol boat headed for the schooner and when a signal was given the schooner to stop, the order was obeyed. Members of the crew of the patrol boat searched the Sproul and had little difficulty in locating the cargo of wet goods.

Since the bringing into port of the Black Duck and the Flor Del Mar Sunday, following the terrible loss of life in effecting the capture of the former boat and her cargo, the sailors at the state pier, where the boats and their hundreds of cases of whiskey and champagne were landed, have apparently had more liquor than they ever did before, for it is an open fact that the sailors stole hundreds of bottles of the New Year's drinks. This was admitted by the gang caught in the raid at the home of Mrs. Ruth Cummings, 34 Cottage street, yesterday. The three sailors found there admitted having stolen the liquor from the Flor Del Mar. Yesterday, sailors were about the street offering to sell whiskey, principally that which was labeled "Golden Wedding." It is known that they sought to sell the contraband liquor at speakeasies and to bootleggers, to say nothing of such individuals as the gobs believed to be prospective customers. The price exacted of the bootleggers would not be paid, while speakeasy proprietors refused to purchase, presumably because they realized that they would be purchasing property of the federal government.

To individuals, the liquor was offered for sale as low as $3 per pint. At the state pier, it is understood that 16 sailors are confined in the brig on charges of having stolen some of the liquor. To prevent any additional thefts of the contraband, last night a strong guard was maintained to watch the seized rum runners and their cargoes and throughout the night, search lights were played on the boats so as to detect any suspicious acts.

Automobile Patrol Officer Clarence Martin is ill.

There is no improvement in the condition of Letter Carrier John Blake, who has been a patient at Lawrence-Memorial hospital for over 10 days as a result of a shock.

Commissioner of Motor Vehicles Robbins B. Stoeckel today ordered the driver's license of Frank Delaporta, 9 Archer court, suspended.

Stole Church Nails

Francis DeGange, Ocean avenue, reported to the police today that during last night two kegs of nails intended for use in connection with the construction of the Syrian church, corner of West Colt street and Connecticut avenue, were stolen.

Fern and Grillo Not Tried

Max Fern, 110 Ocean avenue and Rosario Grillo, 63 Truman street, were arrested last midnight by Sergeant James D. Gaffney, each charged by the other with reckless driving. Fern and Grillo were not in court today for they were ordered discharged by Prosecuting Attorney Max Boyer. The men complained against each other, following a slight collision of their automobiles at the corner of State and Huntington streets.

The estate of Margaret Flanagan has been settled in the probate court and by the settlement, the house and lot on Broad street is bequeathed in equal parts to Mrs. Flanagan's husband, John Flanagan and her children, Misses Margaret and Abbie Flanagan and James S. and John Flanagan, Jr. A certificate of the settlement of the estate as been filed for record at the office of the city clerk.

M. Grann has brought suit for $225 against Samuel Turello and property of the defendant corner of Jefferson avenue and McDonald street has been attached. The suit is returnable before the next term of the court of common pleas.

Much Ado About Nothing

Mae Barnes, colored, and who has been presented in the police court many times, mostly for conducting a disorderly house, was there again this morning and on the same charge. Although the police raided her home, 25 Douglas street, last midnight, and the occupants found there were arrested, Prosecuting Attorney Max Boyer did not consider that the evidence in his possession warranted a prosecution and requested a nolle, both of the accused and the three sailors, white, who were in the house when the raid was made and who were charged with frequenting. The request of the prosecutor was granted. Had females other than the Barnes woman been found in the house the prosecution would undoubtedly have sought to obtain a conviction. The raid was the result of the sailors having been seen to enter the house. Sergeant John Courtney and Patrolmen Arthur Fee's and Dennis Murphy, went to the house and when the officers entered they found the Barnes woman and the sailors seated in one of the living rooms. No liquor was found there. All were taken to police headquarters where they were liberated after obtaining sureties on their respective bonds.

Peter Palmisana, 31, a laborer, residing at 18 Shaw street, was charged with theft and was fined $15 and costs. Palmisana was arrested yesterday by State Police Officers Charles Hill and John Smith for the theft of two automobile robes from the car of Deputy Fire Chief Calvin Edmunds.

One case of intoxication was tried and the man was fined $10 and costs. He was arrested last midnight on Moore avenue by Automobile Patrol Officer Elwood Bailey and Patrolman William Manice.

ANNOUNCEMENTS

Oratorio "Creation" at Slater Hall

The presentation, next Friday, at the Slater hall, of Hydn's Sacred Oratorio "Creation," by the Norwich Choral society, under the direction of Allen B. Lambdin of Connecticut college, will begin the new musical year in Norwich with a splendid musical treat to the music lovers of the city. Mr. Lambdin took great pains during the numerous rehearsals held at Slater hall to perfect the members of the Choral society into a very able musical organization. The Oratorio lends itself to beautiful musical effects and charming thrills and under Mr. Lambdin's very able rehearsing all the effective musical figures have been mastered by the Norwich singers.

The soloists who will sing at the concert are of national repute: Lucia Chagnon, soprano, was born in Rhode Island, and combines the charm, personality, gift of language and persistency of a real American girl. Miss Chagnon studied four years in Europe with the famous Lilli Lehman, after which she appeared in the music centers of Europe and America and received unanimous praise as well as distinction.

Judson House, tenor, was born in Brooklyn, N. Y., and is entirely an American product, having received all his vocal training in this country. At the age of 20 Mr. House appeared as soloist with the New York Symphony orchestra under Walter Damrosch. His success with the famous orchestra brought him a steady stream of concert and opera engagements. Besides being an exceptionally fine singer, Mr. House is also a proficient pianist and organist.

Alexander Kisselburgh, baritone, possesses a rich voice of great dynamic range by which he holds his audience under a spell. In addition to his rich and powerful voice Mr. Kisselburgh possesses wonderful power of interpretation and a remarkable personality

To listen to the three great artists in one evening will be worth many times the price of admission to the concert. This musical treat is made possible by the associate memberships who joined the Norwich Choral society to enable them to offer an excellent musical program to the people of Norwich.

Palace Theatre

Two topnotch first run talking and singing pictures are included on the Palace theatre program, which opens here today and which will be continued through Friday evening. They are "So Long, Letty," a Vitaphone comedy farce starring Charlotte Greenwood, Grant Withers, Bert Roach, Claude Gillingwater, Harry Gribbon and others, and "Oh, Yeah," a riotous railroading picture featuring Robert Armstrong and James Gleason, the man whose name is linked with two of Broadway's greatest successes, "Is Zat So" and the "Shannons of Broadway."

In "So Long, Letty," Uncle Claude Davis, an eccentric millionaire, brings his two flapper daughters to a fashionable beach hotel. The girls are out for a big time but all Uncle Claude desires is a place to rest. From this situation develops a series of laughs that keeps the audience constantly in hysterics. For instance there is Tom Robbins who is bored because his wife is never at home, and there is Harry Miller who is bored because his wife will never go out. They get together and talk over the advisability of exchanging wives. The wives hear about this and decide to go them one better. Oh, it is riotous stuff, and entertaining to the last foot of film.

Miss Greenwood who is starred in "So Long, Letty" is world famous for her ability to clown, but critics are disagreed as to whether she is better at such fooling or at singing. Other points of interest about Miss Greenwood are her agility and strength and her ability to step over chairs and sofas without difficulty. But when she sings "So Long, Letty," one of the great song hits of the last generation, she seems to top all performances. At any rate nobody should miss watching her and hearing her. She is a show in herself.

In "Oh, Yeah," we have two tough brakemen, quaint characters who go around from railroad to railroad, getting a job, working awhile and then hopping a freight to some other part of the country. They like to gamble and they like to quarrel, but best of all they like to fight. If one gets into trouble the other is right with him, and when they meet two such young ladies as Patricia Caron and Zasu Pitts, what is more natural than that Robert Armstrong should fall for the former and James Gleason get tangled up with the latter.

Comedy, pathos and melody are inextricably mingled in the wonderful bill at the Palace theatre this week. If anyone misses it, it's just a shame.

At last we have coming Saturday, Jan. 4th for four days only our own Mary Pickford and Doug. Fairbanks in "Taming of the Shrew," all talking, all laughing comedy hit. It's a sensation, don't miss this picture, see Mary at her best, Saturday.

Broadway Theatre

"A Happy New Year to Each and All, With Fullest Measure of Health, Wealth and Happiness" is the sincere wish of the Broadway management, on entering a new twelvemonth of service and entertainment. Delighted crowds noisily welcomed Baby 1930 in the early hours today, and then settled down to enjoy the beauty and thrills of Flo Ziegfeld's personally directed miracle show "Glorifying the American Girl." This magnificent all-talking picture continues through today, tomorrow and Friday, with a new program of short featurettes, nothing but the feature being carried over from the midnite show.

The story of "Glorifying the American Girl" is as human and appealing as life itself, depicting the life and struggle for recognition of a little department store song plugger, with talent and looks, lacking only the opportunity to make good. This comes to her by a queer twist of fortune, and her story moves rapidly to a stirring and again unexpected climax. Mary Eaton is the little songster, and she has the support of three famous stage stars, Eddie Cantor, funnier than ever in white-face, Helen Morgan with her weepy voice, and Rudy Vallee, the despair of sheiks and their shebas alike. The revue scenes, all in technicolor, can only be described by one word—magnificent. The surrounding bill includes the Fox Movietone News, "Put On Your Old Gray Bonnet," a Paramount song-cartoon, and Buster & Johnnie West in "Marching to Georgia," a side-splitting comedy of two salty gobs adrift in a girls' boarding school.

Breed Theatre

That is the work of William Haines, Karl Dane and Tully Marshall in Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer's famous picture of laughter and tears, "Alias Jimmy Valentine," which talking sequences is now playing at the Breed theatre.

The screen has brought many famous comedians and several famous comedy teams to the attention of picture-goers but it has never before brought together a screen trio that make light the heart of America as do these three laugh-getters.

Haines, of course, plays the role of the smart sophisticated bank burglar who twits the police of half a dozen cities and escapes unharmed from their attempts to convict him. As associates he has Dane as the dumb co-worker, the "outside" man who watches the approach of danger and Marshall as the inside man who handles the tools and generally makes himself useful.

However the greatest part of the picture is not concerned with crime but with the efforts of the three criminals to turn themselves into irreproachable members of society in the small town where they "hide out" after pulling a big job.

The scenes where they attend church, visit the police chief, and are invited to dinner by the banker they intend robbing, touch new highlights of comedy.

A lemon tree with blossoms and fruit is being exhibited by Miss Henrietta Taylor, of Norway, Me. While the blooms are passing, a few blossoms remain to show their peculiar form and waxlike petals. Two green lemons have made a good start. One is now about the average size familiar in the markets, but the second has attained a circumference of twelve inches and may be compared to a grapefruit in size.

When Vicks VapoRub was originated, mothers especially were quick to appreciate it because there is nothing to swallow, and, of course, nothing to upset children's delicate stomachs, as "dosing" is so apt to do.

Just rubbed on throat and chest, Vicks acts through the skin like a plaster; and, at the same time, its medicated vapors, released by the body heat, are inhaled direct to the inflamed air-passages.

Today, the whole trend of medical practice is away from needless "dosing," and Vicks is the standby for colds—adults' as well as children's—in over 60 countries.

To keep step with this ever-increasing demand, the famous Vick slogan has again been changed. There are now "Over 26 Million Jars Used Yearly" in the United States alone.

NORWICH POST OFFICE RECEIPTS WERE $126,585.50 FOR THE YEAR

The business of the Norwich post office has shown an increase for the year ended December 31, 1929. In common with other offices the increase is not large, but still shows a steady growth. The receipts for 1928 were $124,865.24, while those for 1929 amounted to $126,585.50.

There has been a decided increase in the number of parcels sent C. O. D., which means an increase in the number of money orders issued. There has been a loss in the amount of money deposited in the postal savings account, presumably for the reason that the interest paid is so small.

Only necessary repairs to the building and grounds have been made during the year but in general the government property in Norwich compares most favorable with other cities.

Louise Feraco, two-year-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Frank Feraco of No. 120 Talman street, died late Monday afternoon at the W. W. Backus hospital, as the result of severe burns received last Saturday morning at her home when she fell into a tub of boiling water. Her 12-year-old sister, Rose, left the tub of water on the floor preparatory to scrubbing the kitchen floor and, in playing about the room, the younger sister backed into it.

The child was immediately taken to the hospital, where she died about 4:15 o'clock Monday afternoon, death being caused, it is understood, from internal effects of the burns. At the time of the accident the child's parents were not in the house. Members of Wauregan lodge, No. 6, Knights of Pythias, and their friends, attended a very enjoyable New Year's eve banquet, dance and entertainment at the Wauregan hotel. It was one of the most successful events of its kind ever held by the organization. About 250 covers were laid, the ballroom being arranged in cabaret style, typical of the popular night clubs, and seasonal decorations, effectively arranged, provided a beautiful setting for the event.

The festivities began at 8:30 o'clock with a banquet followed by a delightful entertainment provided by Frank Montgomery and his troupe of professional entertainers from New York. The troupe consisted of eight girls and four men. Mr. Montgomery is well known to radio fans, having appeared as master of ceremonies in many events broadcast by Station WEAF, New York. ELIMINATION OF INFECTIONS AT SWIMMING POOLS

There occasionally come to the attention of health authorities cases of foot infection where a swimming pool or other bathing place appears to be the likely source of trouble, says the weekly bulletin of the Connecticut state department of health.

By precautionary measures, authorities in charge of swimming pools can do much to reduce the possibility of spread of foot infections. In this connection, the following portion of a recent report of a joint committee on bathing places presented to the conference of state sanitary engineers and the American Public Health association is of interest.

"Before proceeding with the discussion of the two topics assigned to us for special consideration at the 1928 meetings of the conference of state sanitary engineers, and of the public health engineering section, your committee wish to call attention to the need for special precautions to prevent the spread of infectious skin diseases of the feet at swimming pools and other public bathing places. Although such diseases are not reportable, and their prevalence is not a matter of official record, unofficial reports of the occurrence of ring worm, toe itch, toe scald, fungus foot, papilloma, and similar infections at pools and beaches in various parts of the country are becoming more and more frequent.

"Most, if not all, of these foot diseases are caused by a fungus which is spread by infection of the floors of dressing rooms, etc., at pools, bath houses, gymnasia, and other places where persons go barefoot. While control methods have not been completely worked out, it is believed that the following preventive measures will prove seful in checking the spread of these diseases at swimming pools.

"1. The feet, and especially the toes of all bathers should be inspected regularly and those persons showing infection should be excluded from the pool and dressing rooms and advised to consult a skin specialist. The disease may show around the base of the nails or between the toes as a raw open sore, the sodden type, as small or large blisters, the vesicular type, or it may resemble eczema, i. e, the eczema type. The type which the disease resembles may change from time to time with the same patient, depending on various circumstances.

"2. Wash all floors, benches, and stools in dressing rooms, diving boards, out-of-water portions of ladders or steps, rubber mats, etc., daily with a strong solution of chlorinated lime or chlorinated soda. It is known that the fungus will grow readily on silk and cotton goods and on leather, and it is believed that it will also grow on damp wood. Hence special attention should be paid to disinfection of any woodwork with which the feet of bathers may come in contact. Canvas amts or pads should be abolished.

"3. Take precautions to ensure that there is no exchange of unsterilized towels, suits, bathing slippers, etc., among bathers. All suits and towels should be thoroughly sterilized by boiling before being dried for re-issue, as recommended in the last report of this committee."

NEW LONDON POSTS NEW SANITARY RULES

Although the new rules and regulations, recently adopted by the Public Health council, governing sanitation of public eating places—Regulation 128 of Chapter 11 of the state sanitary code—will not become effective until January first, the health department of New London has shown forehandedness by printing these regulations in full on a substantial yellow card to be posted in public places throughout the city.

BATTERY B HELD NEW YEAR'S DANCE

With a large attendance a midnight dance was held New Year's eve by Battery B., 192nd Artillery, C. N. G., at the local armory. The dance started at midnight and continued until 4 o'clock this (Wednesday) morning. The, Rhode Island Collegians provided the dance programme.

Appreciate Cooperation

An expression of appreciation was voiced Tuesday by the Norwich Undergraduate club of Holy Cross college for the splendid cooperation of their friends and patrons in making the dance Monday night at the Wauregan hotel such a success. Courtesies, extended by the following, were also acknowledged: Silberman Furniture Co., Fiaut-Cadden Co., M. H. Hourigan, Interstate Furniture Co., Schwartz Bros., Gilbert Furniture Co. and the hotel management.

1861 THE GILBERT STORE 1930

The Founder

In the year of Eighteen Hundred Thirty-two, the founder of the Gilbert Furniture Co.—

Nathan S. Gilbert

came to Norwich, with all the ambition of youth, to be instructed in the "art and mystery" of the cabinet-making trade. He was associated with skilled workmen and the product of the factory, situated corner of Chestnut and Willow streets, was sold to dealers in Charleston, Mobile and New Orleans. In the book describing the Bi-centennial of Norwich, mention is made of a float from this factory, bearing a chamber set marked "For the Governor of Alabama," and it was stated that when received at the governor's mansion, workmen were obliged to remove part of the ceiling of the bedroom to accommodate the tall posts of the bedstead.

Mr. Gilbert's early partners in the business were Deacon Horace Colton, James Lane and the Hon. Henry Ruggles, men of high standing in the community.

In the late fifties he acquired the business in his own name, and employed as many as thirty men in the manufacture of high grade cabinet woods. Occasional trips were made to New York city to select choice veneers, mahogany and walnut which came to Norwich in log form.

Some of our older citizens recall the piles of walnut and mahogany in the shopyard where the stock was kept a year for air drying before using. The southern patronage at the time of the Civil war was lost and divested Mr. Gilbert of all his capital, but not of his energy or reputation. He then turned his attention to local trade. Mayor Jas. Lloyd Greene gave him a carte blanc order to furnish the new city hall. Senator William A. Buckingham entrusted him with the furnishing of his Washington residence. He counted as generous patrons and friends Lorenzo L. Blackstone, Dr. Chas. Osgood, Amos W. Prentice, Alvah F. Smith, Jas. S. Carew, Hugh W. Osgood, John L. Mitchell, Henry Bill and many others who were important business men and active in our city government.

Mr. Gilbert served the city as councilman and alderman for sixteen years, and was an important member of the original board of water commissioners.

A large retail store was opened on Main street for the sale of furniture and carpets, under the firm name of Gilbert & Lane. This was at the time when cord bedsteads and slats with springs attached, were displaced by the woven wire mattress and upholstered spring bed—also the window shade fixtures with cord and pulley on the side were replaced by the modern spring shade rollers. After the death of Mr. Lane Mr. Gilbert admitted his sons as partners in the business which was continued there for more than a half century under the name of N. S. Gilbert & Sons.

The present firm of the Gilbert Furniture Co., successors of the above, recently purchased a fine brick block at 68 Broadway, where they have assembled a fine stock of modern furniture, carpets and wall paper for the local trade, and reaching out to the adjacent states. Competent workmen are in the upholstering, finishing and repairing departments, where many pieces of antique furniture receive careful attention. The members of the firm—S. Alpheus Gilbert and Walter E. Gilbert—are in attendance and pleased to give personal attendance to their patrons.

DEATH BOMB WAS WRAPPED IN CHRISTMAS TRIMMINGS

Mrs. Naomi Hall Brady of Seat Pleasant, Md., a Bride of a Few Weeks, Was Killed as the Bomb Exploded in Kitchen—Seven Other Persons Were Injured—Police Are Virtually Without Clues as to the Sender—Bomb Exploded as the Family Gathered to See Mrs. Brady Open the Supposed Holiday Greeting.

SEAT PLEASANT, Md., Jan. 1—(AP)—A crudely-designed bomb wrapped in Christmas trimmings killed Mrs. Naomi Hall Brady, a bride of a few weeks, and injured seven other persons today as it exploded in the kitchen of John S. Hall.

Police were left virtually without clues to the sender of the dynamite package, which was addressed to Mrs. Brady. It discharged while the family gathered to see her open the supposed holiday greeting. The family had lived here only a few weeks and little information on which to work was available to investigators. Police hoped to develop something tangible at the inquest to be held probably early tomorrow.

Mrs. Brady died on the operating table.

Those injured were:

Mrs. Nora Hall, 46, wife of John Hall, deep cuts about the face, and shock. Expected to recover.

Thomas Hall, 8, thought to be blinded and condition grave.

Dorothy Hall, 4, believed blinded and near death from loss of blood.

Stuart Carneal, 12, who helped deliver the package, cuts on the cheeks.

The bomb was left on the front porch of Mrs. John Buckley, a neighbor. She found it Sunday morning. Not recognizing the name of Mrs. Brady, she kept the package in her home with her children playing about it until this morning she learned its intended destination and called Leslie Hall as he passed with the Carneal boy to deliver it. They did and as Mrs. Brady tore off the wrappings it exploded.

The face and body of Mrs. Brady were heavily torn in the blast and she was thrown across the room.

The others were tossed about, furniture was broken, the plaster stripped from the walls and a large hole drilled in the floor. The room was wrecked. The grandmother, in bed in a room above, was thrown to the floor. The Carneal child, waiting outside a window, was cut by flying glass and debris.

The young husband of Mrs. Brady hurried here from his home in Mitchellville and continued on to the hospital in Washington only to find that his wife already was dead. He could throw no light on the affair, police said. The Halls had lived on the farm of the Bradys before coming to Seat Pleasant a few months ago, it was said, and the young couple had been married a few weeks ago.

Mr. Hall was at work when the explosion occurred. He returned to find his home badly damaged and no member of his family there to greet him. All had been taken to the hospital except one older brother, Roger, who also was at work.

FUNERAL SERVICES FOR CHARLES P. TAFT TODAY

CINCINNATI, Jan. 1—(AP)—Charles P. Taft, 86, one of the world's most liberal philanthropists, who died last night from pneumonia, will be buried tomorrow afternoon. Mr. Taft, who donated almost $10,000,000 here to arts, music, education and charity, and whose financial interests included ownership of baseball clubs, newspapers, cotton plantations, hotels and mines, was ill a year and a half.

His body rested tonight in his downtown residence, one of the show places of the city. The Taft mansion is surrounded by factories, apartments, commission merchant clearing houses and store rooms. He was one of the few wealthy persons here who refused to move from the old financial district. His home houses the greatest art treasure collection in the middle west, paintings and porcelains being valued at $5,000,000, all of which he has donated to the city of Cincinnati.

As publisher of the Times-Star, which he made one of the strongest republican newspapers in the Ohio valley, Mr. Taft was interested actively in politics, his father having been in President Grant's cabinet. In his late political life he supported the presidential candidacy of his half-brother, William Howard Taft, who was en route here tonight from Washington.

Funeral services will be at 2 o'clock tomorrow in Christ church here. Burial will be in Spring Grove cemetery. Mr. Taft married Annie Sinton, daughter of David Sinton, wealthy iron manufacturer. Mrs. Taft, two daughters, Chief Justice Taft, several brothers and nephews survive him.

Charles P. Taft purchased the controlling interest in the Chicago National league baseball club in 1905. He promoted a championship team, the Cubs winning the pennant in 1906, 1907, 1908 and 1910, in addition to capturing the world's series in 1908. Later he bought an interest in the Philadelphia Nationals.

His philanthropies were not confined to Cincinnati. He made substantial gifts to Yale, Princeton, Johns Hopkins and Harvard. Local benefactions included $1,000,000 endowment for the Cincinnati Symphony orchestra; $200,000 toward erection of a Masonic temple, Mr. Taft being a 33rd degree Mason; $500,000 to the University of Cincinnati, and donations to many other civic, cultural and social organizations.

GENERAL COLE'S FINAL MESSAGE TO TROOPS

HARTFORD, Jan. 1—(AP)—Retiring after more than 45 years of service in the Connecticut National guard, during 21 of which he has been adjutant general, Major General George M. Cole made public his final message to the troops in an order dictated shortly before the retirement became effective. The order will be sent to all units within the next few days.

"After long service in the National guard of this state and other states since 1875, I hereby relinquish my duties as the adjutant general and chief of staff and turn over the pleasures and responsibilities of that office to my successor, Brigadier General William F. Ladd, asking that you give to him the same loyal support that you have always given to me.

"The Connecticut National guard, both in peace and war, has always stood high in the estimation of those who are competent to so rate it in the war department. This has been accomplished by the intelligent teamwork and close attention to duty of the officers and men that have given to it so freely of their time and support, and it is with much pleasure that I now take this opportunity to acknowledge to you and all of you my most sincere appreciation and thanks for all that you have accomplished for that National guard which we all love and work for as a patriotic duty to our state and the nation, believing as we do in preparedness as the best and only safeguard."

THEATRE TRAGEDY CASTS GLOOM OVER PAISLEY

PAISLEY, Scotland, Jan. 1—(AP)—New Year's day was one of gloom and sorrow for the city of Paisley with the shadow of Tuesday's motion picture panic tragedy affecting everyone.

There were few cheery New Year greetings, the people for the most part restricting themselves to quiet observance of the day, weighed down by the tragedy which had overtaken so many poor homes. In the narrow streets, where most of the victims lived, last night and tonight were ones of anguish and sorrow and lights glimmered fitfully through drawn blinds telling of sleepless inhabitants.

With the death list definitely fixed at 72, 37 children still were confined to the hospital, three of them being in a critical condition.

SECRETARY MELLON WAS IN PALM BEACH YESTERDAY

Soon after "The Vagabondia" entered port, Mr. Mellon left on a sightseeing tour. He has a private railroad car in waiting here and is expected to leave tonight for Washington.

THREE PERSONS INJURED IN COLLISION OF DUTY

MERIDEN, Jan. 1—(AP)—Three persons were injured, one seriously, in a head-on collision of two new automobiles on the Meriden-Berlin road this afternoon.

The most seriously hurt is William C. Gould, 24, whose address was given as Hotel Bond, Hartford, an airplane pilot and engineer, connected with the Pratt and Whitney Aircraft company, Hartford. He sustained a fractured jaw, a possible fracture of the skull and minor lacerations. Gould was riding alone in his car.

Ernest Kuhn, 29, of Hartford, and Mrs. Holly Young Frank, this city, were the occupants of the second car. Kuhn received an injury to his left leg and minor lacerations; while Mrs. Frank received lacerations and abrasions of the left elbow and a bad shaking up. The accident occurred, according to police, when Gould's car skidded as he was passing another, crossed to the left of the road and crashed head-on in Kuhn's machine.

BANGOR, ME., CITY TREASURER SHORT FROM $20,000 TO $25,000

BANGOR, Me., Jan. 1—(AP)—An alleged confession today by City Treasurer Thomas G. Donovan, 65, that he had appropriated $20,000 to $25,000 of the city's funds over a period of years, was followed by his arrest on a warrant charging embezzlement.

Donovan, who has been city treasurer for more than 10 years and assistant treasurer before that, immediately was arraigned and held for the January term of the new circuit court, under $10,000 bond. He pleaded not guilty and was released after bail was furnished.

The alleged confession, made in the presence of Mayor John Wilson and Mayor-elect Benjamin Blanchard, was unexpected. Officials said they had no indication a shortage existed. Mayor Wilson said Donovan sought him out today and disclosed he had taken the money in small amounts for a number of years.

Donovan is the father of four daughters.

FIRE DESTROYED HOME OF ARTIST BERNARD GUTMAN

NEW CANAAN, Jan. 1—(AP)—The combination home and studio of Bernard Gutman, well known artist, located in Silvermine, local artist colony, and its contents, including many paintings and several hundred dollars in cash, were destroyed by fire tonight. The damage was given by a maid as at least $10,000.

The fire followed an explosion of an oil cook stove. Only servants were in the house at the time, the Gutmans having gone to New York to spend the holiday.

Local and Norwalk firemen were summoned, but were able to do very little toward putting out the flames, since no water was available. Efforts to pump water from a nearby brook were unsuccessful.

BERLIN, Jan. 1—(AP) — President Von Hindenburg has entered suit for defamation against the editor of the fascist periodical "Angriff" conducted by Paul Goebbels, a member of the reichstag. On December 29 this periodical published an article captioned "Is Hindenburg Still Alive" alleging that the president had not voted against the Young plan because "he always does what his Jewish and Marxist advisors tell him to do." And that "Nobody should be under any delusions concerning him."

BRILLIANT NEW YEAR'S RECEPTION AT WHITE HOUSE

WASHINGTON, Jan. 1—(AP)— High public officials, diplomats and just plain citizens greeted the President and Mrs. Hoover today at one of the most brilliant New Year's receptions in the history of the white house.

As automobiles carrying resplendently garbed ambassadors and ministers rolled into the grounds just before 11 o'clock in the morning, a long line of citizens was forming along Pennsylvania avenue. Before 3 p. m. 6,348 persons had been greeted personally by the chief executive and the first lady of the land.

After the first thousand had passed, the line was halted and the President and Mrs. Hoover sat down for about two minutes. Four more rest intervals were taken before the end of the line was reached, and during one of them Mr. Hoover went out on the south portico, accompanied by his military and naval aides, where all smoked cigars.

As the second rest was taken Mrs. Hoover turned to talk with Dr. Joel Boone, the white house physician. She has not been out of the white house for four days on account of a severe cold, but the strain of the handshaking apparently did not affect her.

Today's reception, with the exception of one given by President and Mrs. Harding in 1921, was the largest since the one on January 1, 1904, when Theodore Roosevelt and Mrs. Roosevelt held open house. The day was warm and pleasant.

WOMAN ACCIDENTALLY SHOT DEAD BY BOY

SEEKONK, Mass., Jan. 1—(AP)—Miss Margaret A. Ahearn, 40, a servant, was accidentally shot and killed here today by 13-year-old Milton J. Budlong, Jr., son of Milton J. Budlong of Newport, whose marital difficulties have been in the courts for several years. The shooting occurred in the yard of the home of Claude R. Branch, recently appointed an assistant attorney general in the department of justice.

According to police, the child and the domestic were in the yard when the latter pointed an air rifle in her direction and accidentally pulled the trigger. The shot lodged in Miss Ahearn's neck and she died within ten minutes. The rifle had been a Christmas gift to the child.

Medical Examiner Jesse W. Battershall said death was due to accidental causes and the district attorney's office said there would be no legal action against the boy.

FOUR MEN ACCUSED OF SHOOTING DEPUTY SHERIFF

WHITEVILLE, N. C., Jan. 1—(AP)—Four men accused of shooting Deputy Sheriff Hoke B. Smith of Columbus county, in retaliation for a raid he led on a whiskey still, were held in jail here tonight while officers awaited the outcome of Smith's wounds before lodging formal charges against them.

The deputy was paralyzed by two bullets which struck his spine. He also was wounded in the hip and arm.

Accused of the shooting are Pope Floyd, Hubert Floyd, Woodell Milligan and Seals Hill. Smith said they called him from his home last night and asked him to accompany them on a search for a stolen automobile. Suspicious of a plot, he refused, he said, and three of the men grabbed him while the fourth emptied a revolver at him.

NEW KIND OF SUGAR MAY BE CURE FOR TUBERCULOSIS

DES MOINES, Jan. 1—(AP)—An amazing new kind of sugar was described as a hope for finding a cure for tuberculosis at a joint session today of the American Association for the Advancement of Science and the Iowa State Medical association.

The sugar is produced by tuberculosis germs. It is a sweet, dusty-white substance, highly complex but capable of being reduced to ordinary glucose.

Its discovery is one of the things that sale of Christmas health seals has helped to make possible. It was found at one of the 30 nationally famous scientific organizations cooperating in search for a tuberculosis cure. The director of this far-flung laboratory attack, Dr. William Charles White of the United States public health service, Washington, reported the discovery to the medical profession recently, and today told of developments since then and of numerous other lines of investigation.

35,000,000 Employed In Eight Industries

There Are 69,580,000 [illegible]sons Working in Manufacturing Plants in the U. S.

NEW YORK, Jan. 1—(AP)—Manufacturing leads in the employment of the 64,580,000 working men and women in the United States, statistics released today by the national bureau of economic research reveals.

Agriculture employs the second largest number of persons among the country's eight greatest industries and mercantile, transportation, government, construction, banking, and mining, quarries and oil wells follow in order named.

There are 35,000,000 men and women engaged in these eight industries alone, the bureau's report states. The occupations of the other 11 million workers are unclassified but collectively contribute a large income.

Employment gained in all of the principal industries except agriculture from 1909 to 1927, the report discloses. The number of workers on the farms decreased 301,000 during the 18 years. Although manufacturing showed a tremendous gain in employes from 1909 to 1919, there was a shrinkage of about 750,000 in the next eight years.

NEARLY 10,000 MUMMERS PARADE IN PHILADELPHIA

PHILADELPHIA, Jan. 1—(AP)—A fairy-like procession made up of nearly 10,000 Mummers, bedecked in a myriad of colors, pranced on Broad street today in carrying out their New Year's day custom. Three hours elapsed before the final marchers had passed the judges' stand at city hall.

Gem-studded trains of royalty and a galaxy of elaborately-clad figures which ran from the ridiculous to the sublime in mimicry made up the fancy section of the parade.

There were brilliant capes 100 or more feet long, with towering headdress, borne by squads of pages.

By the hundreds, the capering clowns came jesting and lending an uproarious touch to the spectacle. Numerous floats depicting city and national affairs and personalities of the year gave a touch of the burlesque.

The stock market slump, "talking movies, radio entertainers, and long skirt styles came in for their share of gibes.

The paraders competed for $30,000 in prizes offered by the city and additional prizes of $1,000 to $1,200 offered by business organizations. Seventeen New Year's clubs participated, in addition to six fancy, four comic, and seven string bands.

First prize of $2,000 in the fancy division went to the William J. Funston association. The League Island association won the $2,000 first prize for the comic division. The Joseph A. Ferko Bank took first prize of $1,600 for the best string band.

FIGHT BETWEEN FACTIONS OF POLISH CATHOLIC PARISH

MANCHESTER, N. H., Jan. 1—(AP)—One man was under arrest and three others were nursing injuries here tonight, as a result of a disturbance early today between factions of the Holy Cross Polish Catholic parish. The disturbance occurred while police patrolled the vicinity of the church, padlocked by a group which claimed possession after a recent sale under a court order

The man under arrest charged with simple assault, was Jozef Flis. The injured were Albert and Stanley Gladyss and Frank Komisarik. They claimed they were waylaid while returning from church and exhibited wounds they said had been inflicted by a screw driver in the hands of their assailants.

Bishop Roman Slocinski, head of the church, said he was prevented from entering the edifice today by men he said he recognized. He said the church had been padlocked and the men said said they represented the new owners. Fearing trouble, the bishop asked his followers to disperse and was assisted by the police.

Bishop Slocinski questioned the legality of the sale notice, saying it applied only to the second mortgage and that the new owners must await foreclosure on the first moragage which is held by a local bank. A conference will be held at the bank next Monday, he said.

COUPLE SHOT AS THEY LEFT NIGHT CLUB IN DETROIT

DETROIT, Jan. 1—(AP)—Murray Parr, 25, and his wife, Mary, started the new year in a rather lively night club, but thought the place was getting a little too rough when somebody started an argument soon after the arrival of 1930.

Therefore, as became staid and peaceful married folks, they started for home. As they reached the sidewalk, an automobile passed and several shots were fired from it. One bullet hit Parr in the body, and two others wounded Mrs. Parr in the arm and leg.

Both were in receiving hospital tonight. Police had no clue to the identity of the occupants of the automobile, but were inclined to regard them as careless celebrants.

LONDON, Jan. 1—(AP)—A dispatch to the Daily Mail from Jerusalem today said a delegation of Arabs headed by Emir Adel Rraslm will leave on Friday for the United States to persuade Arabs who have achieved success there to return to Palestine and to employ their money and their western training and experience in building up an Arab nation.

Ma[illegible]secute Road [illegible]ouse Proprietors

HARTFORD, Jan. 1—(AP)—That proprietors of a number of roadhouses visited by federal prohibition agents Tuesday night and early this morning, face possible arrests on conspiracy charges for serving cracked ice and ginger ale to New Year's eve patrons, was admitted today by Chief Prohibition Enforcement Agent Stanton L. Briggs.

Evidence of sales of ingredients for liquor consumed by parties in hilarious celebrations of the advent of 1930, was included in the findings of prohibition officers who visited amusement centers in roadhouses near Hartford and New Haven, and will be presented to Deputy Prohibition Administrator Robert L. Sengle, upon his return to Hartford, Friday morning.

Upon the decision of the administrator for Connecticut will rest the future course of action to be pursued, Mr. Briggs said. "We must go slowly on this matter," he declared, "as we are not exactly certain of our powers."

The federal force of 15 men concentrated on night clubs and roadhouses of the smaller towns in its New Year's eve activities, the chief enforcement agent revealed. In the cities, enforcement was left in the hands of local police liquor squads, although a raid on the Italian-American restaurant at 106 Bank street, New London, provided the one exception.

In addition to the two arrests made in eight raids Tuesday night, the federal agents gathered a considerable amount of evidence in other localities which may lead to future arrests, Mr. Briggs said. All data which marks the enforcement authorities' cognizance of the New Year's arrival will be placed in the hands of Mr., Sengle, now between the West Indies and New York on the return from his annual vacation.

The roadhouses of Connecticut presented a drier aspect than on New Year's eve one year ago, according to the chief enforcement agent. "We feel quite encouraged by the fact that less liquor was in evidence this year," he said. "It shows that we are cutting down the supply noticeably."

FORMER SERVANT NOW MISTRESS OF $20,000,000 FORTUNE

NEW YORK, Jan. 1—(AP)—The Daily News tomorrow will say a former immigrant servant in the Port Chester, N. Y., home of Frank W. Savin, New York broker, has become mistress of his $20,000,000 fortune as the result of his death yesterday from an appendicitis operation.

Mrs. Savin, the fourth wife of the 79 year old broker, was until her marriage in 1927, a hou[illegible]eper in the Savin home. She was born on a small farm in what is now Czecho-Slovakia.

Now, the Daily News will say, she has at her command ten expensive automobiles, a staff of twenty servants; and the large Port Chester residence.

BREAK IN THE RANKS OF INDIA NATIONAL CONGRESS

LAHORE, India, Jan. 1—(AP)—The India National congress broke up today with a minority rump meeting under the leadership of Sprinivasa Aiyengar, who formed what he termed a "democratic party" within the ranks of the congress.

The minority leader compared his new party with the independent labor party in England, which forms the left wing of the regular labor party. He said the party was prepared to carry on with the program of the Lahore congress. Subash Bose, member of the new group, affirmed this only meant that it would carry out the principles of the program but might differ on many details.

The rump session followed a walkout of 30 members from congress when the minority failed to obtain representation on the new working committee of the congress, whose membership was dictated by Mahatma Gandhi, nationalist leader.

NOT TO TOUCH ON MERITS OF PROHIBITION AMENDMENT

Hoover's Law Enforcement Commission Will Refrain From Passing Judgment—Members Find the Industrial Alcohol Situation the Most Difficult Problem to Solve—Senator Jones Says an Important Report Has Been Given to President Hoover.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 1—(AP)—After conference with President Hoover's law enforcement commission, Senator Jones of Washington divulged tonight that it had decided unanimously to refrain from passing judgment on the merits of the prohibition amendment.

The Washington senator, who is assistant republican floor leader, and author of the stringent Jones act, heavily penalizing Volstead violators, said in a statement that the commission would conclude its work before July first.

He termed the industrial alcohol situation the "most difficult" problem confronting prohibition enforcement in the eyes of the commission. He passed the word today to the commission to "shield no individual and no line of business" in solving this situation.

The statement of Senator Jones, who has been conferring with the commission and with President Hoover during the holiday outburst among prohibitionists over the Hoover enforcement machinery, was eagerly awaited in the capitol.

"I find that an important report already has been given to the president," said the senator. It will be submitted to the congressional committee sought by he president as soon as created and ready for work. Other reports will be ready soon.

"All seem to view the industrial alcohol situation as the most difficult one to solve properly, as well as one of the most important phases of prohibition enforcement. In working this out the commission should shield no individual and no line of business.

"I am glad to learn that the commission is unanimous that the wisdom or unwisdom of the eighteenth amendment is not involved in their work; that it is a part of the constitution and that the function of the commission is to devise the best means possible for its enforcement."

Meanwhile President Hoover and Senator Borah of Idaho, who has demanded a cleanup of the enforcement personnel from "top to bottom," continued to be silent on the situation. If they were writing any more letters it was not known, nor were the details disclosed of their recent exchange of correspondence concerning enforcement conditions.

The president is on record in a statement by Senator Jones that he will remove any government officer unfaithful to his trust of enforcing the law. Senator Borah is on record as believing the administration of industrial alcohol permits to be a "scandal" and that "open saloons" are running in the realm of many district attorneys throughout the country.

Senator Jones in his New Year's day statement said the commission had divided its work into two phases—prohibition enforcement and law enforcement generally, "with several problems in each phase."

"Prohibition enforcement," said Senator Jones, "is of vital and immediate concern to the people. It was stated on the floor of the senate a short time ago that a member of the commission had intimated it would take three or four years to work this out. I could not believe it. In my judgment the president would not tolerate such delay on so pressing and important a matter, nor did it seem to me to be warranted at all.

"I have conferred with several members of the commission. Some think that the prohibition phase of their work can be done within three or four months and all whom I have seen agree that it can be completed by July first at the latest. This should be done.

"Much of the remainder of the commission's work should be done by then too, and I want to say now that if more money is sought, a clear and convincing showing of its needs will have to be made before such money is provided. A full showing as to employes and their compensation will be called for.

"Every member of the commission knows the general phases of the problems to be solved. They will confer with the men and women most familiar with these problems. Many of the commissioners are lawyers and judges personally familiar with law violations and the needs of our courts and procedure. Their aggregate judgment as to what should be done will meet the situation as well as it can be met except as time and experience may dictate.

"Some expert studies may be desirable to bring out certain facts but these investigations should not be too prolonged or detailed. If carried too far into detail, the work will die of its own weight.

"We want the judgment of the commission and not that of experts whose opinion would likely be contradicted by other experts. In my judgment, if the commission can devise a method by which punishment for law violations can be made more swift and sure, it will have fully justified its creation."

OPPOSED TO REPEAL OF STATE ENFORCEMENT ACT

BOSTON, Jan. 1—(AP)—Gov. Frank G. Allen convened the general court, as the Massachusetts legislature is officially called, with an address today in which he declared that the proposed repeal of the state enforcement act, "would be an open invitation and incentive to violate the law."

Massachusetts voted decisively wet in a prohibition referendum in 1928, but the governor told the assembled legislators that "so long as the 18th amendment to the constitution is law, our duty is clear-cut and well defined."

Turning to the business situation, the governor revealed that a public works program involving the expense of more than $110,000,000 was in prospect for 1930 and that private industry had given an encouraging answer to an appeal to maintain wage levels.

A. F. OF L. READY TO HELP NEGRO TO RAISE STANDARDS

WASHINGTON, Jan. 1—(AP)—The American Federation of Labor was described tonight as standing ready to help the Negro to organize and raise his standards.

An editorial to be published in the January issue of the American Federationist, of which William Green, president of the organization, is editor, said the first attack upon the industrial problem of Negroes was by organization and the second by vocational training.

Discussing a national Negro labor conference, sponsored by the Sleeping Car Porters' union, to be held in Chicago this month, the editorial said:

"Organization is the way to status in industry, higher wages, just and honest working conditions, shorter hours of work. These things are essential to higher social and political standing.

"Trade union membership is open to all Negroes. The majority of trade unions accept Negroes as members, but when regulations are interposed the rules of the American Federation of Labor provide that Negro workers may apply for a charter direct from the American Federation of Labor."

GENERAL NOTE OF SOBRIETY MARKS ENTRY OF NEW YEAR

(Special to The Bulletin)

WILLIMANTIC, Jan. 1—General sobriety was the dominating note today as the populace, fagged and somewhat impoverished of both wealth and gay spirits prepared to return to the business grind. The last of the days of the holiday season resembled a spring day in many respects. The mercury was well up and the atmosphere murky. Shouted greetings of "Happy New Year" on the streets, no matter how well meant, failed to ring true because there was a decided failing of proper background. Without the aid of additional police and dry agents, the people behaved well and New Year's morning dawned with a clean "blotter" at police headquarters. The entertainment programs for the day were shows at the Capitol theater and a dance at the Al-Pierre Tabarin in the evening, both of which were well attened.

For the first time in town history, the public schools were in session on New Year's day. The schools reopened Tuesday and were open today in order not to interfere with the eight-week vacation schedule now being used in Windham schools.

All forms of business and manufacturing were suspended for the day, however, including banking, city and town offices, postoffice, retail and wholesale houses and mills. The Willimantic Silk, Inc., where day and night shifts are in operation, reopened at 6 o'clock this evening, both shifts having been allowed time off for the holiday. The American Thread company plant will reopen its finishing department Thursday morning but the manufacturing department will remain closed until next Monday. With the exception of a few divisions of the finishing department which will resume operations Thursday, the Holland Manufacturing company is closed for the balance of this week. The Windham Silk company will open Thursday morning as will the Rossie Velvet company and the Uncas Silk plant.

TWO HURT WHEN CAR PLUNGES DOWN EMBANKMENT

(Special to The Bulletin)

WILLIMANTIC, Jan. 1—Plunging with sickening speed down a 35-foot embankment, some 600 feet north of the A. R. Micha garage on the Eagleville road about 7:30 o'clock Tuesday evening, a Pontiac sedan, driven by Frank H. Naughton, 40, of 3 Holcomb street, Hartford, with Miss Jule Marion, 29, R. N., of 12 Groton street, Hartford, crashed in a total wreck on a pile of rocks. The occupants were injured quite severely, but nothing serious in their condition had been noted at St. Joseph's hospital up to this afternoon. Naughton's machine, which was headed northerly, had figured in a collision with a Pontiac coupe operated by Walter Costello, 25, of Mansfield, before taking its headlong dive through the state highway fence. The machine somersaulted through a mass of small timber and landed in a partially overturned position on the rocks. The collision, which sprung the left rear wheel of the coupe besides inflicting severe damage to the body, caused Costello to lose control of the machine. The coupe zig-zagged 165 feet down the highway and ran up the left embankment where it overturned. Costello escaped with a slight injury to one foot. The Mansfield youth was coming toward Willimantic at the time.

Miss Marion, bleeding profusely from a deep cut on the head and several other cuts, had freed herself from the sedan but Naughton was pinned in the wreckage. Mr. Micha, who operates a garage in the vicinity, with the assistance of other men forced a hole through the top of the car and extricated the driver. Besides the lacerations and cuts the young woman sustained a fractured rib. An X-ray is expected to be taken to ascertain if there are further injuries. Naughton suffered a dislocated left shoulder and bad laceration on the nose. Both are patients at the hospital, where they are under treatment by Dr. Edward J. Ottenheimer.

LOCAL COUPLE START NEW YEAR WITH WEDDING

(Special to The Bulletin)

DANIELSON, Jan. 1—A pretty wedding at the Sacred Heart in Wauregan this morning was that of Miss Eleanor M. Egan, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. W. J. Egan of that place, and Chester Caouette, son of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Caouette of Maple street, Danielson. Rev. J. H. Quinn, the pastor, performed the marriage ceremony and was celebrant of the nuptial mass. Relatives and friends of the bridal couple were in attendance in numbers and were representative of a number of places in eastern Connecticut and more distant places.

Miss Loretta M. Shea, classmate of the bride when they were students at Bay Path institute in Springfield, was the bridesmaid, and Sheldon Caouette, brother of the groom, was best man.

The bride's silhouette gown was of ivory colored satin and her veil of all-over lace also was in ivory shade. She wore slippers to match and her bouquet was of calla lilies.

The double ring service was used.

Following the marriage there was a reception at the home of the groom's parents, at 44 Maple street, Danielson. The occasion also was the 30th anniversary of the marriage of the parents of the groom. The many guests were splendidly entertained.

The bride's gift to the groom was a leather billfold, the groom's gift to the bride, a pearl necklace. The bride presented her bridesmaid with a crystal necklace, and the groom his best man with a gold piece.

This afternoon, the annual musicale of the Killingly Woman's club at the Westfield Congregational church was attended by many of the members. The varied concert of the afternoon was delightfully given by the Flagg instrumental quartet, with Miss Gladys Wilber, harpist, assisting artist. The members of the Flagg quartet are: Henry Flagg, cellist; Mrs. Sidney H. Perry, viola; Bernard Millstein, Wauregan, violinist, and Mrs. Cecil R. Garcin, pianist. There was a tea following the concert.

The concert program was as follows: Moderato from Quartet Op. 31 (Schmidt); Reverie Op. 24, violin, 'cello, harp, (Sodero); Gypsy Serenade, violin solo (Valdez); No. 5 from Faust Ballet (Gounod); Venetian Love Song, violin, viola, 'cello, harp, (Nevin); English Morris Dance (German); Norweigan Dance (Greig); Nubian Dance (Greenwald) violin, viola, 'cello, harp; Wooden Shoe dance, harp solo, (Rogers); Carry Me Back to Old Virginny, violin, 'cello, harp, (Blacd); Andante Sostenuto, from Ballet Egyptien, violin, viola, 'cello, harp, piano, (Luigini).

A point that the Danielson Building and Loan association, the chamber of commerce and allied organizations and workers are stressing relative to the undertaking of placing 5,000 shares of the Building and Loan association in the hands of interested persons within the next few weeks is that the effort offers an opporunity for a considerable number of persons to have homes of their own, and to pay for them month by month, much the same as one pays rent.

Such persons may learn in detail what it is proposed to do by inquiring of members of the general committee or officials of the organization mentioned.

Now that the holidays are over, there is to be an active campaign to interest prospective home builders in an enterprise that, if it attains the success predicted for it will relieve Danielson's housing shortage in large degree.

A further increase in the scholarship fund of the Killingly Woman's club is confidently expected during the present month, following the carrying out of plans the organization has formulated for a rummage sale, to continue through three days. It has been said on behalf of the club that the members will appreciate any contributions of articles that may be used at this sale.

The committee of arrangements is made up of Mrs. Alfred L. Reed, chairman; Miss Helen M. Kelley, Mrs. Marjorie J. Waller, Miss Helen P. Perkins, Mrs. Charles F. Alexander, Mrs. Richard D. Banigan, Miss Doris Brooke, Mrs. A. P. Burns, Mrs. A. L. Cundall, Miss M. J. Mendell, Miss Bernice Cogswell, Mrs. William K. Litch, Miss Dorothy Atwood.

The scholarship fund referred to is one created by the Killingly Woman's club and which is being gradually built up. At the present time it has attained such proportions that the income is sufficient each year to make a substantial presentation of money each commencement time to some graduate of Killingly high school planning to pursue a collegiate course and who, during the course of years of study at the high school, has shown exceptional capability and merit.

The ambition of the Killingly Woman's club is to materially increase this fund, that the income therefrom may be larger each year. Many persons may share in the good work by donations of articles that may be disposed of as has been set forth herein at a time shortly after mid-January.

So many citizens have suggested that "something should be said about it in the paper" that mention may be made today of laxity that is being shown in clearing sidewalks of accumulations of snow and ice. This applies not alone to the residential sections of Danielson, but also in some degree to the business section.

There are some building prospects ahead for Danielson that are of special interest. Reticence marks the comment of those who know, or likely know, about the plans. It may be said with very considerable confidence, however, that Danielson is scheduled for a new central office telephone building. Effort has been underway, and with no little success for some time past to obtain a new postoffice building. Danielson is now listed among the towns due to be provided with one by the government. There is also the prospect of Powdrell and Alexander building a bleachery here this year. This concern now does its bleaching in its No. 2, or Main street plant, but greater facilities are required.

Up to late this afternoon there had not been one arrest in Danielson over the New Year's period. State and local officers observing conditions found nothing to attract their special attention. The day was quietly observed here.

While this was a holiday for pupils of the schools of Killingly, Thursday will find the hundreds of young people back at their studies again, and there will be no more special holidays for them until February.

The majority of the members of St. James' parish attended the masses today in observance of the feast of the Circumcision.

The police were not called upon today to bother with motorists operating cars with last year's numbers. In this respect the best record yet was made by the automobilists as to having the new registrations.

Vaudeville shows at the theatre this afternoon were attended by large numbers of persons. There were three shows, one this afternoon, two this evening.

JEWETT CITY

WEIGHT OF KILLED HOG BREAKS A MAN'S LEG

(Special to The Bulletin)

JEWETT CITY, Jan. 1—Jesse Phillips of Lisbon has received word of a peculiar accident which befell his brother George in Attleboro. He with his brother Fred had butchered a hog and hung it up. As they stood looking at the animal, congratulating themselves on the good job they had done, the gambrel broke and let the hog down, striking George Phillips on the shoulder. He was not knocked down, but must have been bent double, for one leg was broken just below the knee, the bone being broken completely off. The knee was terribly injured, the leg being so swollen by the time he reached Sturdy Memorial hospital in Attleboro that the surgeons were unable to set it. How much the knee is injured has not been determined. Mr. Phillips lived in Lisbon until ten years ago, when he went to his brother Fred's home in Attleboro.

PUTNAM

LACK OF EVIDENCE CAUSES DENIAL OF DIVORCE SUIT

(Special to The Bulletin)

PUTNAM, Jan. 1.—The application of Mrs. Burton D. Bosworth of Pomfret for a divorce from her husband on grounds of adultery, which has occupied a prominent spot in the docket of the superior court here, has been removed from the list of cases, ungranted. Judge Yeomans denied the application of Mrs. Bosworth in a brief address, the text of which follows: "This is a petition for divorce on the ground of adultery, and I do feel that where so serious a charge is made, the evidence ought to be pretty plain and clear—not much doubt about it. It is true that the attitude of the defendant was not ideal. I naturally do not believe, when he says that he does not remember about what he drew out, and some of his other statements. He undoubtedly was lying on the stand, and perhaps ought to be sent to state prison for perjury. However, I have so far made it a rule not to grant any divorce on the statement of the plaintiff alone, without some corroboration, and about the only corroboration here is the attitude of the defendant, which does not seem to me sufficient.

"The petition is denied."

During the lengthy testimony brought out in Bosworth's direct examination by his attorneys and the cross-examination by Attroney Riley of New Haven, counsel for Mrs. Bosworth, it was intimated that Bosworth perjured himself when answering questions in regard to the amount of money he withdrew from Willimantic, Danielson and Putnam banks, after learning that Mrs. Bosworth was contemplating divorce proceedings. Bosworth repeatedly answered, "I forgot the amount of money that I withdrew."

Mrs. Bosworth charged that her husband was the father of a child born to Miss Catherine Hackett of this city last summer. Bosworth denied having sexual relations with Miss Hackett, but did testify to the fact that he had given a check for $300 to Mrs. Minnie Morris of Walnut street, mother of Miss Hackett, shortly after the baby was born. Bosworth added, "I gave her the check in a friendly way to help out, but I never gave a nickel to support that baby." When asked by Attorney Riley, during cross-examination, what he thought the money he had given was expended for, Bosworth replied, "I suppose it was used to to buy some clothes for the baby."

Miss Hackett in her testimony told of the birth of her baby but did not name Bosworth as its parent. She told of her friendship with Bosworth and of the visits she made to the Fayette Wright farm in Pomfret where the defendant and his wife and family resided during the period of his foremanship of the premises. She said she was a cousin of Mrs. Bosworth.

Other witnesses who testified were Mrs. Minnie Hackett, Dr. Frederick A. Wilcox of Willimantic, who attended Miss Hackett at the birth of the baby; Mrs. Pearl M. Coffran, William A. King, prominent Willimantic lawyer to whom Mrs. Morris resorted for legal advice after her daughter had given birth to an illegitimate baby; Burton Bosworth, William Bennett, Albert Aldrich, the latter two witnesses being employed by Bosworth as farm helpers, testified as to his character during Miss Hackett's visits to the Bosworth home.

One child, Robert Bosworth, aged 4, is in custody of Mrs. Bosworth. In her allegations, Mrs. Bosworth petitioned for custody of their son and an alimony settlement, claiming that her husband is reputed to possess resources to the amount of $100,000.

In accordance with the time-honored custom, all stores and business houses in the city and a number of the textile plants suspended operations New Year's day.

The dimly-lighted shopping district of the city is going to be transformed into a white way which will surpass the lighting conditions existing in any other of the smaller cities of the state if the efforts of the Putnam chamber of commerce are successful, a member of the organization's lighting committee said yesterday during a discussion on this subject. The present lighting system in the trading center, while on par with street illuminating ideas in communities hereabouts, is not in accordance with the city's progressive ideas. A few weeks ago when the lighting problem was given an airing before a directors' meeting of the chamber of commerce and presented to the street lighting committee of the common council, Ralph E. Thurston, manager of the Putnam district of the Connecticut Light & Power Co., procured a modern street fixture, and erected it on a pole on Main street directly in front of the superior court block, that section regarded as the most poorly lighted part of the city's business center. The result was gratifying in lending a more citified aspect to that district, besides adding determination and vigor to the efforts of the chamber of commerce plan for the converting of Main street into a real white way after dusk. It was said that the city government will be asked to cooperate in seeking support of the voters, at a special city meeting to be held in March, for assistance to further the lighting improvement plan.

Unconfirmed reports have it that several new names have been added to the number seeking the appointment of captain of police. The 1930-31 administration of city government is to meet for the first time Monday evening, Jan. 6, for the purpose of appointing city department officials for the ensuing two years, and with only four days remaining before the new council takes office, Sergeant George H. Liard is still the favored contender for the office made vacant by the death of Captain William J. Jarvis. Mayor Charles A. Richard and Police Commissioner John M. Dean have remained silent throughout the period of speculation in regard to this matter, refusing to comment in any way.

In the event of Sergeant Liard's promotion to the captaincy, undoubtedly there will be an equal volume of speculation in the matter of appointing a new sergeant. Three officers, Benoni Durand with a service record of seven years, Alpheris Sponcey with a record of six years' continuous service, and Joseph Page, an officer for nearly four years, are eligible for the berth, should it be vacated by Sergeant Liard for the more responsible position. Unquestionably any of the three patrolmen will accept the sergeantcy should the council call on them. Officer Durand is perhaps one of the most popular policemen in the department. He possesses an unblemished record and is of a genial and affable disposition. Officer Sponcey has proven himself a capable officer. His considerate attitude towards all with whom he is in contact in the performance of his duties has contributed to the building up of his excellent record. Officer Page is the youngest member of the police department but like his brother officers holds a record that would be difficult to surpass. Officer Page many times during his four years of service to the city, was called upon by the late Captain Jarvis to shoulder the responsibilities of the department during brief absences of the deceased captain, managing police affairs to the full satisfaction of all concerned. Every officer has received ideal training in law enforcement under the guiding hand.

1929 has been tossed to the ages and accompanying the old year on its flight into oblivion was the Connecticut Co.'s privilege to operate a bus line between this city and North Grosvenordale. The well-known "peanut line" is no more and today the Short Line service, a subsidiary of the Vanderbilt interests of Rhode Island, assumed control of the rights forfeited by the Connecticut Co. and began transporting passengers between the two points. The new concern is operating on the same schedule as the former line of busses, using the Putnam Inn stop as a terminal instead of the railroad station.

The Putnam high school gymnasium was filled to capacity Tuesday evening by an enthusiastic group of fans who witnessed the Celtic quintet take a fast professional contest from the Divisional Headquarters five by a score of 24 to 16. Putnam high school courtmen received a second trouncing from the Alumni boys, who wore the school's colors last season. The game came to an end with the old-time Noyesmen on the long end of a 36-29 score. Jack Cronin, versatile athlete and backfield ace of the Providence Steamroller gridiron eleven, was slated to appear in the military line-up but his engagement was canceled because of a previous one. To the delight of the hundreds of fans, Coach L. F. Noyes, mentor of the high school quintet and three-letter man of the University of Maine, volunteered to fill in for the illustrious Cronin. Coach Noyes displayed remarkable passing and scoring ability on the floor, but his efforts failed to overcome the safe lead of the Celtic players.

The basketball followers remained in the gym until the New Year was 30 minutes old, during which time they danced to the music of Leo Nichels and his Blue and White band. Proceeds of the sports frolic will be donated to the gym bleacher fund.

Acting Captain of Police George H. Liard officially closed the 1929 records of the police department Tuesday evening. Tony Raymond and Wilfred Bernier, local youths who were committed to the county jail a week ago for their part in the theft of automobile accessories and tires taken from local garages and parked cars, were the final prisoners to be entered in the big book. Both were arrested on the same date, but Bernier's name occupied the last line in the 1929 account of crime in the city. Captain Liard said today that no arrests took place during the New Year's celebration and from indications late this afternoon the "blotter" of Jan. 1 would be filed away unblemished.

This Man Puzzled--Lost 19 Pounds of Fat In 22 Days

Wants to Know Where the Fat Went to man was fat—60 pounds overweight—wanted to stay home every night and nurse the old arm chair—getting in and out of his auto was all the exercise he cared for—his desire for any form of activity had died years ago.

Then one night as he read the evening paper cheering news broke for him—he read the story of Kruschen Salts—what it was doing for the fat folks of America—tens of thousands of them—they were losing fat—and plenty of it.

The next morning he started—one generous half teaspoon of Kruschen in a glass of hot water before breakfast—every morning the same—in a week he wanted to walk to business—he didn't know why—but the urge for activity seemed to flood his whole being and he followed the urge.

His wife was astonished—delighted—and when one evening he said with eagerness—"Let's go to a show tonight, dear,"—her joy was unbounded.

That virile Kruschen feeling that means more energy—more vigor—more ambition took possession of him—he took long walks every day—and enjoyed them.

He got on the scales one evening and came home with sprightly step—"eleven pounds of fat gone" he almost hollered—he danced a few steps with the activeness of youth—and his wife danced with him.

In 22 days 19 pounds of unneeded and unwanted fat had left him and he marveled—and his friends marveled with him.

"Where did it all go to?" he asked and no-one could answer.

Kruschen Salts drives poisonous waste from the system—it acts on liver, kidneys and stomach and keeps them in tip-top condition—it keeps you feeling fit and fine all the time. Lee and Osgood and leading druggists America over sell Kruschen Salts for 85c a bottle which lasts 4 weeks.

HEADING OFF THE CRIMINALS

In these days of speed the criminal takes full advantage of it. In order to interrupt his flight greater speed than he can attain is needed.

In the past much reliance has been placed upon the telegraph and the telephone for giving information to other cities in efforts to apprehend those who have committed crimes and fled. They are, of course, valuable, but it takes time when such services are employed and time is one of the most important factors in heading off those wanted. In order to better meet the requirements of the situation automatic typing machines, known as teletypes, have been established in many cities. Through the use of these it is possible to automatically telegraph such information as is desired from the police headquarters of the particular city where the crime is committed to all points on the circuit in one operation, it being a system connecting only police stations.

Recently there have been three new stations added to the circuit in Connecticut, making 17 in all, and the Meriden Journal remarks that "Norwich and Torrington are needed to complete the circuit of 'strategic' cities and then about every part of the state will be covered."

It is quite evident that the more cities connected with such a circuit the more efficient it is bound to be and it is not too much to expect that Norwich will some day obtain such equipment that it may join with the others in getting and giving the benefit of better police service.

The Journal declares that the teletype "long ago proved its worth in keeping the police in constant touch with other departments." That indicates that it has passed the experimental stage and is a real asset in police work. In these days it is necessary not only to keep up with the criminals, but to keep ahead of them.

CARE WILL DO THE TRICK

Out in the state of Michigan attention is being called to the fact that the sum of $41,000,000 was spent in the past year for the construction of good road and about 300 miles of new hard-surfaced road were constructed. But along with it comes the announcement that on the improved roads of that state there was an increase of 25 per cent in the fatalities from motor vehicle accidents.

Because of this state of affairs, the state department of highways has declared its intention to devote more attention to safety precautions, such as eliminating dangerous curves and deadly grade crossings.

There is need for the creation of safer highway conditions in many instances but it should be realized that it doesn't rest so much with the character of the road as far as curves and crossings are concerned as it does with the care with which the highways are used by the motorists. Better roads, greater speed and a decreasing amount of care have operated to carry the highway fatality record to a steadily advancing figure. Instead of the horror of the needless highway slaughter serving to lower the number in successive years it seems to be passed over as nonchalantly as statistics concerning most any subject.

What increased care on the part of highway users will do, without the changing of the layout of highways or the removal of crossings, is interestingly revealed in the state of Rhode Island. There, it was pointed out last November, the fatality record had been steadily mounting each year and from previous records it was predicted that 24 more deaths from auto accidents were faced before the end of the year. Plainly it was in the power of the auto owners to stop that slaughter and it was presented to them in such a manner that they rose to the occasion and instead of the auto deaths increasing in accord with the estimate there were but 17 and the year ended with but 126 for the year instead of 145 in 1928.

But what seems to be the more important revelation is the fact that the reduction in the death list was attributed to greater care on the part of the motorists. Perhaps there should be included in the statement all highway users but it emphasizes the point that if more care was used by the highway users, which include pedestrians as well as motorists, there would be fewer accidents and it wouldn't require the spending of millions and millions for curve and crossing elimination.

It is the lack of proper care which is responsible for too many of the needless highway fatalities.

RUNNERS AND THE RUM

No one likes to see or hear about the killing of other people in cold blood. No one sanctions the killing of a criminal who may be fleeing unless his crime was of the character to justify it, and yet when those who are preying upon the public and defying the law get warning to the effect that they can expect such treatment unless they stop, they know that prevention lies entirely in their own hands.

It is perfectly evident that the business of rum smuggling does not carry a death penalty, but those who engage in it know that they are violating the law and that there are those who are engaged in the business of enforcing that law. Thus if the rum runners, who were shot off Newport, received such warning as the coast guard authorities claim was given them, such a warning as they are expected to give and have a right to give, and they failed to heed it they were simply inviting those shots at the vessel which resulted fatally to three men.

Admiral Billard of the coast guard upholds the treatment that was given those who tried to run away. He regards it as an effort to defy the command of the coast guard craft operating strictly within the law and he serves notice that the coast guard means business and intimates that others may expect nothing different.

There was nothing about that rum running that would have resulted in death had the runners halted. They were not novices in the game. They knew what they were doing but their scheme failed. They played with grave danger and lost.

But when the triple killing of rum runners is followed by a brawl among sailors and coast guardsmen who had been drinking liquor that had been stolen from a seized rum runner, it indicates that, while the coast guard may be doing its duty in regard to enforcement, there is a deplorable situation when any part of seized liquor is permitted to get into the hands of and be consumed by those engaged in enforcing the law.

SENATOR-AMBASSADORS

Within a few days the senate will be called upon to act upon the nomination of Senator Sackett as ambassador from this country to Germany. He is the second senator to be picked by President Hoover for such service and it is to be expected that the senate will act promptly and favorably upon it.

As in the case of Senator Edge of New Jersey, who was selected for the post at Paris, Senator Sackett is a man who has made a success in business and in the senate. He has the qualifications for such work as he will be required to perform and it is apparent that he has been selected for that reason.

The ambassadorship at Berlin is an important one. This country has been fortunate in its representatives there and it is apparent that it is the purpose to continue at that post men of the highest type, who will not only be able to deal with any questions which may develop, but do so in a manner that will be creditable to this government and themselves.

Going into the senate for men to fill these posts attracts attention because it may be unusual, but it has to be admitted that it displays a recognition of fitness that makes its appeal to the country and most certainly the senate has full knowledge of the ability of the men.

With the approval of Senator Sackett as ambassador, and his arrival in Berlin, it will mean that the three most important diplomatic posts in Europe will be filled by three men who have figured prominently in the senate, since former Vice-President Dawes, ambassador to Great Britain, was for years in very close touch with if not actually a member of the senate. They are three men in whom not only the president but the country is certain to have full confidence.

SOMEONE CRIED "FIRE"

How not to conduct yourself in case of a fire in a public hall or theatre was demonstrated at the picture theatre in Paisley, Scotland. Whether it will ever be so that instructions will prevent the cry of "fire" when signs of a blaze appear is a question, but there have been so many illustrations of the fatal effect of such an alarm that anyone should hesitate to utter it.

According to the reports, it is quite certain that there would have been no loss of lives in the picture house had there been a prompt but orderly retirement of the crowd. It was because of the panic conditions, the rush to outdistance the other fellow, the lack of a cool consideration of what was happening and the apparent absence of any leader to prevent the stampede.

It can be fully appreciated that a theatre is a place where no crowd can be expected to sit calmly by while it knows the building is afire. Old and young are going to get away from the uncertainty as soon as possible, which is no more than could be expected, except that it ought to be done with such restraint as will insure safety. If the children of Paisley had been accustomed to a school fire drill and those in the theatre had complied with it that needless and frightful loss of life would have been prevented.

There are reasons to believe that that appalling affair will be the means of establishing greater safety provisions in the picture houses of Scotland, where conditions require it, and that might also be extended to the use of fireproof films and projection rooms as well as a recognition of the need of cool leadership under such circumstances.

EDITORIAL NOTES

Some defer their good resolutions until after they have time to reflect upon New Year experiences.

The man on the corner says: What a year this'll be if all the wishes expressed concerning it materialize!

There is not much excuse for the motorist who forgot that new markers were required on the first of January.

It would be a happy idea if the automobile owners would keep their markers as clean and good looking as they are today.

Just because the diamond cutters are out of employment in Belgium doesn't mean that the wearers are going to decrease in number or experience unprecedented hardships.

From the response that was made to the holiday lighting idea and the expressions of approval that have resulted, there should be an even greater display at the proper time this year.

TOO SLOW

Out in the severe marble hall, standing before the imposing door leading into the Prescott offices there was naught but peace and an atmosphere of dignified repose. But one foot over the threshold and the visitor instinctively grabbed for his hat, such was the breezy turmoil.

Everybody seated at desks was poised as for instant flight. Faces were tense. Typewriters rattled unbelievably. Buzzed, buzzed waspishly. Doors shot open and banged shut and the office boys dashed about after the fashion of the zigzag lines artists use to represent lightning. Mr. Prescott was tall and thin and the muscles of his face worked when he was in so-called repose. He seemed eternally wound up, giving the impression that if whatever wound him up ever forgot to do it he would simply untie and collapse into a jangling ruin.

The other partner, Archer Whane, weighed more, but his nerves expressed themselves in a driving hurry. Stenographers in the Prescott offices had nervous prostration regularly after one year and the man clerks felt that they comprehended bolshevism.

Because he was in such a hurry to get away, Archer Whane hired the new stenographer at 4:45 one afternoon without giving her a chance to say anything. He scarcely looked at her after he had glanced over her recommendations.

And "9 o'clock," he shot back from the [illegible] as he sped out, "means 9 o'clock, Miss—er— grrrruummmpp!"

Two seconds of 9 the next morning Whane rang his bell and scowled expectantly and at 9 Miss Raymond was seated waiting at his side, pencil poised.

"Herumfff!" Whane said because he was startled. He stared at her, placid and calm and serene and comfortable. Not flapperishly pretty but beautiful. She radiated calm. It was as though a hand had pressed Mr. Whane back into his chair and some one had murmured, "Now, now, what's the rush? There's plenty of time!"

He slowed down his dictation six times of his own volition during the next hour. He watched Miss Raymond's stately progress out of the room. Any one who moved as slowly as that, he told himself viciously, would take all day—

The letters were back for him to sign before he could wink. There was no question that Dorothy Raymond completely upset the Prescott offices and regime. She never hurried or rushed or grew excited.

"Confound that girl!" Whane exploded to Tom Prescott. "I'm always dead sure she's going to be late with things and ball everything up and I stew my head off and walk holes in the rug—and she never flicks an eyelash. She's a feminine Rock of Gibraltar! And when I turn around there's everything on my desk all ready and waiting for me. She's uncanny. I believe she does it on purpose!"

Prescott stopped in his own rush long enough to laugh and his partner stared. Nobody in those offices took time to breathe, let alone laugh.

Archer Whane's entrancement was rapid. From amazement, irritation and awe he slid rapidly into admiration and mad devotion. He stuttered when he dictated, he gave mistaken orders and roared their rescinding, he felt the force of Dorothy Raymond's eternal poise and calm and tried to slow down. The result was a progress of jerks, mentally and physically.

"Something sure ails the old man," said the clerks. Whane was all of 36. "He's headed for a breakdown. And he's got it coming!"

Dorothy had been with the firm a year and was as fresh as when she began. She snapped her notebook firmly shut one morning in the middle of Whane's stammering dictation.

"Mr. Whane!" she said distinctly. He blinked at her bewildered.

"Mr. Whane," she went on, "somebody ought to tell you that you are rushing yourself beyond safety. I see you every day and I know. You—why, you're ill now. Do take a day off—a week—something dreadful will happen to you if you don't."

"It has happened," Whane got out. He felt limp, sagged back in his chair. His eyes were hollow. "I'm crazy about you, Dorothy, and you're the only thing that can save me. I want you to marry me. You—you're wonderful!" Dorothy Raymond regarded him thoughtfully, maybe a bit pityingly and the pink rose in her cheeks.

"I—I'm so sorry," she breathed. "I never dreamed—I expect he'll tell you so I might as well. I'm going to marry Tom Prescott." There was a long silence.

"Well," said Archer Whane, rather feebly, "I guess I'm just too slow!"

A Washington Bystander

By KIRKE L. SIMPSON
Associated Press Staff Writer

WASHINGTON, Jan. 1—Announcement by former Premier Wakatsuki of Japan that his government favored extension of the capital building event.

There never had been much doubt about Japan's attitude since the extended holiday proposal was included in the British invitations for the five power meeting.

The Japanese statement, however, leaves it as much in doubt as ever just what the proposal will be in detail.

Does it mean that battleships reaching the age of obsolescence provided by the Washington treaty are to be scrapped and not replaced; or that they are to be kept in the fleets beyond their previous active life dates?

As the Bystander understands it, the Japanese idea is to keep the old ships, not to scrap them. That would leave the battleship fleets in 1936 just as they are now so far as Great Britain, the United States and Japan are concerned.

Lengthened Life

It would mean, for instance, that the American Florida, Utah and Wyoming would be 28 years old when scrapped instead of 22 and 23 years old as they will be in 1934, the present treaty date for their scrapheap cruise.

Obviously, to retain the old ships instead of scrapping them and merely defer replacement building would be the easy thing to do.

It would also defer that much longer realization of an actual 5-5-3 battleship ratio status between Great Britain, the United States and Japan.

The United States—15 pre-Jutland and three post-Jutland ships.

Japan—eight pre-Jutland and two post-Jutland ships.

Under the Washington treaty replacement tables as they stand, the 5-5-3 ratio would not be reached until 1941, when Great Britain and the United States would have 15 ships each and Japan would have nine, all built since the battle of Jutland.

Heavy Maintenance

Keeping the old ships a few more years in harness, however, means a heavy outlay for maintenance if they are to be kept fit for service.

Each added year of life for a warship increases her upkeep cost due to wearing out of her equipment and even her hull.

It seems quite likely that the American position at London will favor an added holiday in building, but no scrapping lay-off. President Hoover already has declared that his administration will match any fleet reduction the other naval powers can agree on, adding,

"They cannot go too low for us."

One thing about both the Hoover-MacDonald naval conversations in Washington, and the brief preliminary exchanges between the Japanese and American delegation members as the Japanese delegation passed through, has been the vagueness of official announcements on results.

If the art of implying a lot yet saying little is a test of diplomacy, all hands are already proven diplomats.

Gall Stone Disease.

(By Roland Hill, M. D., St. Louis.)
(From Gorgas Memorial Institute)

Diseases of the gall bladder and liver ducts are among the most important lesions of the upper abdomen. The gall bladder is a small sac lying high up on the right side of the ribs, where it serves as a reservoir for the bile on the under surface of the liver. As a result of the loose connections of the gall bladder and the liver there is more or less tendency for the bile to stagnate. This stagnation, coupled with infection coming from the bowels and other sources, plays a most important role in the formation of gall stones.

The great tendency to this formation is most important to the welfare of the patient and results from many different causes such as indiscreet or over eating, lack of exercise, or as the sequel of certain diseases, especially typhoid fever. Gall stones are more common in women than in men. They occur most frequently about the middle period of life but are found much earlier than this.

Gall stones are simply a symptom of disease of the gall bladder and ducts. They are sometimes found as a single stone though usually a number are present. In some cases, several thousand have been found. They vary in size from a pin head to an egg—very small ones often giving more trouble than large ones as they can get into the small duct and give rise to very great pain of the crampy type. This pain usually runs back under the shoulder.

When gall stones occur in the large duct that goes directly from the liver to the bowel they are apt to enlarge and obstruct the channel, forming a real menace to life. In this case we have bile in the urine. The skin and whites of the eyes become a deep yellow and the patient is said to be jaundiced.

Gall stone disease is attended with many dangers. Among these you may have perforation with peritonitis and death. You may have abscesses of the liver and cancer may develop either in the gall bladder, the ducts or the liver as a result of the prolonged irritation.

It is a well known fact among medical men that when gall stones once form they are never dissolved and can only be gotten rid of when they pass into the bowel, or by surgical removal.

The importance of this disease is so great that everyone should try to prevent it. The avoidance of stimulating foods and large quantities of meat and the drinking of lots of water are great aids in preventing its occurrence. There is no question that active exercise is one of the best preventive measures we have. All of us who are constantly operating in these cases realize how much more common it is in women who lead an indoor and sedentary life than it is among men who work actively for a living. All persons affected with distress in the upper abdomen should seek the aid of their family doctor and have systematic and regular examinations made in order to avoid any of the dire consequence that result from gall stone formation.

BURGESS BEDTIME STORY

Chatterer Finds a Way

Somehow, sometime, I'll find a way;
There always is another day.
—Chatterer the Red Squirrel

There is very little around Farmer Brown's that Chatterer the Red Squirrel does not know about. Chatterer is naturally inquisitive. He is naturally filled with curiosity. Being such a small, spry person, he usually manages to gratify his curiosity. Chatterer is, as you know, a very clever small person. He is one of the smartest of the small people in the Green Forest. So when he sets out to do a thing he usually finds a way. It may take him some time but sooner or later he finds a way.

Chatterer likes corn. Always he manages to lay in a pretty good supply before the corn is husked and put in the corn crib. That corn crib has always been a source of temptation to Chatterer. There have been times when he envied Sammy Jay his wings. You know that corn crib stands on stone posts. Chatterer cannot climb those stone posts. There is a short flight of steps up to the door but even there there is no place for a Squirrel to get in unless the door happens to be left open. Many times Chatterer has sat and studied that corn crib, trying to see a way of getting into it. Many times he has seen Sammy Jay fly over and pick out a few grains of corn from between the cracks and has ground his teeth because there was no way for him to get a share.

One day in early winter, very early in the morning, Chatterer had gone over to Farmer Brown's dooryard to see what he could find there. Black Pussy had surprised him and to escape her Chatterer had scampered up a clothes post, in the top of which he had sat and scolded as only Chatterer can scold. Black Pussy pretended she was going to climb up, and Chatterer scolded so fast that it is a wonder he didn't lose his breath. At last Black Pussy gave up and went off under the back porch.

Chatterer was just preparing to run down to the ground and scamper to the nearest tree, when those bright, beady little eyes of his made a discovery. He stopped scolding. He sat still and stared to make sure that his new discovery was just what it seemed to be. You see, he had just discovered that a clothes line had been stretched from that clothes post to a corner of the corn crib, and that was the nicest kind of a bridge for a mutual born tightrope walker like Chatterer.

He looked hastily all about to see that no one was watching him. Not even Black Pussy was in sight. Chatterer crept out a little way on the clothes line. Everything seemed all right. He crept farther. This was too good to be true. He looked back once, then he fairly ran the rest of the way across. From the clothesline he could reach the edge of the roof of the corn crib. In a jiffy he was on the roof. How he did long to get that tongue of his free. He wanted to chatter for joy. But he was too wise to do this. It would be just as well if no one knew that he was there. Surely, there must be some way of getting into that corn crib from the roof. If necessary he could gnaw a hole and get in that way. The first thing to do was to look that corn crib all over as well as he could from the roof. This he proceeded to do.

Patricia, age six, is very fond of stuffed olives. One day for dinner olives stuffed with red pimientos were served. Patricia said: "Mother, please give me one of the olives with the tail light."

Descending Scale

When little Jimmy was asked what he wanted for Christmas he promptly said, "A dog."

"Oh, no," said They, "wait until spring. A puppy would do so much better in the springtime. Think of something else you want."

"Well, then, a horse," suggested the youngster.

"Again" They demurred, "wait until we move to the country and you may surely have a pony. But think of something else, now. What else do you want?"

Jimmy was visibly reluctant to give up his requests, but he finally proposed a substitute, "Aw, well, then, I guess I'll take a baby brother."

DOCTOR FINDS LUGHTER IS GOOD HEART MEDICINE

PORTLAND, Cal., Jan. 1— (AP) — Laughter, from the loudest guffaw to the gentlest tickling giggle, is beneficial to the human heart.

So states Dr. Frederick D. Stricker, secretary of the Oregon state board of health, in a resume of the physiological background of mirthful ejaculations.

"The uncomfortable feeling about the heart may in some cases be controlled to a great extent by the mind," his paper states. "Probably one of the most favorable influences exerted on the heart when there is a depression is that produced by laughter.

"Attendance at the theatre and other enjoyments of good hearty laughter have brought relief more than in any other way."

BIG DECLINE INDICATED IN AUTOMOTIVE EXPORTS

WASHINGTON Jan. 1—(AP)—A decided downward tendency in the export of automotive products has been shown the last few months according to the automotive division of the department of commerce.

Estimates that the exports would exceed last year's by $100,000,000 have been revised to between $50,000,000 and $60,000,000.

The decline is regarded as "astonishing" by the department, which said the monthly average value for the period from January to September was $10,000,000 below the average of the first three months of the year.

The value of automotive exports for the third quarter of this year was $7,000,000 below that of the same period a year ago.

AIR COMPANY'S MILEAGE TOPS EIGHT COUNTRIES

OAKLAND, Cal., Jan. 1— (AP) —Air transport mileage of one United States company exceeds that flown in eight European nations combined.

S. A. Stimpson, traffic agent for the Boeing system, operators of the transcontinental mail system from here to Chicago and the coast route from Seattle to Los Angeles, says 8,600,000 miles will be flown by his company's planes in 1929.

That is greater than the scheduled air transport operations listed last year for Austria, Belgium, Denmark, Finland, Poland, Sweden, Russia and Czecho-Slovakia. It approximates the air mileage of Italy, Great Britain and Russia; exceeds by 750,000 miles the total of France, and equals half that of Germany.

NICHOLS DEATH BLAMED TO HIT AND RUN DRIVER

A hit and run driver whose identity has not so far been discovered is blamed for the death of Frank M. Nichols, 56, of Groton, according to a finding by Coroner Edward G. McKay. Nichols was hit by an automobile as he was walking along a road in Groton on Nov. 11. He died three days later in the hospital at New London.

Coroner McKay in his finding states:

At about 5:45 p. m., on Nov. 11, 1929, the said Frank M. Nichols left his work at the Max Pollock & Company mill in the town of Groton. The mill is located on the northerly side of the main highway in Groton known as the Boston Post road. The highway at this point runs generally east and west and goes up a grade toward the west. It is concrete with tarvia top dressing about 18 feet wide, with a two-foot shoulder on the north side. At the scene of the collision there is a regular wooden highway fence on the northerly side running parallel with the road and about two feet distant therefrom.

When the said Frank Nichols left the mill, he started for his home which was located some little distance west of the mill. He was accompanied by two friends who went in the same direction. As the trio came to the highway, Mr. Nichols dropped behind the other two, and followed close to them up the north side of the road. This was done to avoid motor traffic passing in the road. There are no sidewalks and pedestrians must of necessity walk along the road or on the side of it. As they neared the end of the highway fence, the two in front heard a noise behind, like the breaking of glass. Immediately after an automobile passed close by them going in a westerly direction with the rear light out. They turned about and saw Mr. Nichols lying on the ground in an unconscious and injured state. They administered to him and brought him to a hospital.

Efforts were made to locate the car and the driver but they were of no avail. Considering the fact that the collision occurred in the night season, and the car passed before it was realized that Mr. Nichols was struck, ample opportunity was presented to the driver to make good his escape. It is regretted that such a cowardly act must pass unpunished by law, but apprehension of such a scourge is sometimes impossible.

I am satisfied and find that the death of Frank M. Nichols was caused by his being struck by a motor vehicle proceeding westerly on the Boston Post road in Groton, Conn., and operated by some person whose identity I have not been able to ascertain and whether this death was caused by the criminal act, omission or carelessness of any other person or persons it is impossible now to determine.

WOMEN WORKING TO AROUSE PUBLIC OPINION FOR U. S. IN WORLD COURT

During the year ending December 31st, the local fire department responded to 271 calls, bell, telephone and oral, as compared with 295 calls for the preceding year. Last year there were 36 more calls than during 1928.

At the fires during the year 20 three gallon chemical extinguishers were used, nine 25 gallon tanks of chemical and five 40 gallon tanks of chemical. The total number of gallons of chemical used during the year was 995. Sixty-two hose lines were laid, the total length of hose, 2 1-2 inch and 1 1-2 inch, was 20,850 feet. The number of feet of ladder raised was 1,508.

The apparatus, during the year, covered 832 1-4 miles and was in service 331 1-4 hours. The loss for the year was $66,856, a trifle over $2 per capita. The loss was exceptionally small considering the value of the property, buildings and contents, involving $4,122,867. The largest loss for a single month was in July, $14,468.76. The smallest loss for a single month was that during the month of March when the loss was but $10. During the entire year the department responded to 271 alarms, 36 more than were turned in during the previous year.

Tables showing property at risk and the loss for each individual month of the year follow:

Value of property at risk, buildings and contents—January, 229,851; February, $167,000; March, $3,800; April, $27,900; May, $65,700; June, $77,400; July, $264,411; August, $13,300; September, $37,600; October, $2,505,700; November, $327,826; December, $52,500; total, $4,122,867.

Fire loss — January, $12,464.26; February, $4,695.68; March, $10.00; April, $220.73; May, $932.26; June, $3,832.50; July, $14,468.76; August, $3,269.26; September, $7,523.00; October, $1,741.00; November, $4,467.54; December, $470.00; total, $66,856.05.

There were a number of changes in the department during the last year, the outstanding change being the retirement of Chief Howard L. Stanton and the appointment of Henry R. Taft as his successor. After acting in a temporary capacity for about six months, Chief Taft officially took over the duties as head of the department on July 1, the date of Chief Stanton's retirement. At the time Deputy Dennis J. Brennan was appointed deputy chief, after acting in a temporary capacity for several months. Both the new chief and deputy served as deputy chief and captain, respectively, for several years prior to their advancement.

The two platoon system was also inaugurated during the year. After discussion, both for and against, extending over a period of nearly a year, this system was placed into effect on April 8. As a result of the new arrangement the men of the department work in shifts of 10 and 14 hours where in the past they were on duty for 24 hours.

The system has worked out splendidly the department being run in the same ship-shape order as in years past With the new system there are three men to each piece of apparatus but the others who are off duty are subject to call on all alarms during the entire 24 hours of the day. Members of the department, off duty, cannot leave town without first notifying the head of the department.

During the year traffic sirens were installed in various sections of the city and already on numerous occasions have proven their worth in helping to regulate traffic while the apparatus is traveling to fires.

The department lost by death during November Lieut. Charles Culver, a member of the department for 35 years.

POLLUTION THREATENS RAISING OF FLATFISH

The Connecticut state water commission has requested the selectmen of the town of Groton to co-operate with them in abating the pollution which is threatening a project of the state board of fisheries and game to raise flatfish at Noank where a state lobster hatchery is now established. As the result of a conference in Hartford, the Groton selectmen learned that the greatest objection was to oil scum on the water and that Superintendent John W. Titcomb of the state board of fisheries and game had expressed the hope that the condition be eliminated so that extension of the board's activities could be effectively carried on.

The report of the water commission is that much of the oil comes from the bilges of motor boats which are pumped out at Noank. Fishing craft and pleasure boats are said to be equal offenders, and the oily conditions exist greatest in the summer and fall when marine activities are more extensive.

Selectman Whaley and Selectman Henry J. Latham of Groton when commenting on the matter said that the main objection to the oil is that it kills young fish and would thus greatly interfere with any hatchery work as applied to flatfish.

According to the selectmen, the condition of garbage in the waters at Noank has been done away with by the establishment of a dump.

The selectmen, in making public the complaint of the water commission, hope that the unfavorable conditions will be minimized by the co-operation of marine men who become acquainted with the objections. Boat operators have been asked to pump out the bilges of their boats when in the sound instead of waiting until they tie up in Noank harbor, which is the mouth of Mystic river.

ORGAN RECITAL FOLLOWED BY CHURCH MEETING

The First Congregational church held "Open House" New Year's afternoon and evening, when a large congregation at 5 o'clock, greeted Herbert L. Yerrington for his 49th annual organ recital, in the church auditorium. He was ably assisted by Herbert W. Cooley, baritone, of Springfield, Mass. Mrs. Cooley, the former Miss Alice Ray, of Norwich Town, played the accompaniments for her husband's selections.

As in past years, Organist Yerrington displayed the same enthusiasm in entertaining his audience, executing his numbers with dignity and pride. Since the remodelling of the church organ about two years ago, he has had unbounded pleasure in manipulating the keys. At the close of the recital upon invitation of the pastor, Rev. Gurdon F. Bailey, the company assembled in the chapel for the annual parish supper, served at 6 o'clock, under the direction of Mrs. John L. Browning, chairman of the supper committee of the woman's department of the League of Service.

Mr. and Mrs. Cooley and the latter's parents, Mr. and Mrs. G. Avery Ray and daughter, Miss Ruth Ray, also of Springfield, were included among the supper guests, as well as several from other places. There was an audience of about 150 for the recital.

Mr. Yerrington's opening number was a strong massive composition with a contrasting middle section, by George Henry Day, a composer and organist of New York state. Meditation, an appealing number was as characteristic as the name indicates, also by a popular composer J. Frank Frysinger. This was followed by Mr. Cooley's introductory number, "Consider and Hear Me," by Alfred Wooler. Organist Yerrington's next number was Scherzo-Caprice, by William E. Ashmall, who died about three years ago. He was publisher of a large number of organ compositions. The Bells of St. Amede Beaupre with chimes, by Alex Russell; was a beautiful number. The chimes of St. Anne church Beaupre, Canada, were actual notes gathering of the faithful chanting of the choir Bonne St. Anne. The procession—the Miracle—Benediction—bells in distance. After three exceptionally good Negro spirituals by James R. Gillette, another organist of New York state, Mr. Cooley gave his second number, "If God So Clothe The Grass," by J. W. Bischoff.

The spirituals by Organist Yerrington were, Deep River, The Angels Done Changed My Name and Nobody Knows The Trouble I See.

Evening Shadows with chimes, by De Launay-McKinley and Marche de Fete, Op. 81, by Rene L. Becker, the two concluding numbers on the programme needed no comment, because of their familiarity.

Preceding the supper, Rev. Charles H. Ricketts said grace. On the several long tables arranged in the chapel auditorium were pink sweet peas mingled with a spray of white arranged in bud vases. The same decorations were also carried out on the tables arranged in the ladies parlor that adjoins the auditorium. There were about 200 present for the tempting menu of cold ham and tongue, mashed potato, peas and carrots combined, pickles, rolls, coffee, ice cream and lady fingers.

On the committee with Mrs. Browning, were Mrs. Walter G. Hitchon, Jr., Mrs. Charles Barber, Mrs. Ernest Washington, Miss Bernice Underwood and Miss Margaret Chapin, and Mrs. Harriet Barber. The committee was assisted by Mrs. Donald Brigham, Miss Louise Bailey, Miss Charlotte Barbour, and Mrs. Charles Nylen, also Mrs. Bessie Pierce. Those who poured coffee were Donald Brigham, Walter G. Hitchon Jr., Charles Barber, Reginald Avery, Luther Whaley and Carl and Ernest Nylen.

At the close of the supper and at intervals throughout the annual church meeting which followed, G. Avery Ray, tenor, a former soloist in the choir of this church, gave several numbers with his eldest daughter, Mrs. Cooley, accompanying him at the piano. A soprano solo by Miss Ruth Ray, another daughter entitled "Star," by James Rogers, and a vocal duet, Would That My Love, by Miss Ray and her father, with Mrs. Cooley at the piano, were entertaining features intermingled with business. Mrs. Cooley is an accomplished pianist and her sister Miss Ray, is not only a beautiful vocalist but also is a skilled violinist, and has frequently entertained members of this parish with her talent.

As a closing number Mr. Ray sang "Of Thee I Am Thinking," Mrs. Cooley accompanying. The church motto for 1930, as suggested by Rev. Bailey is "Trust In the Lord and Do Good." Psalm 37, first part of third verse. Blest Be the Tie That Binds was the hymn in closing, followed by benediction by Rev. Charles E. Reeves. There were several clergymen present, at the festivities of this church.

The officers elected to serve during 1930 are: Clerk, Herbert L. Yerrington; treasurer, Henry T. Frazier. Both succeed themselves. The League of Service officers comprise: President, Henry T. Frazier; vice president, Arthur W. Avery; secretary, Miss Mary Wattles; treasurer, Mrs. Sarah W. Chapin. Various chairman in the several departments of the League of Service were also elected.

SCOUT WINTER CAMP THRILLING ADVENTURE

Scouts of Norwich who attended the winter camp with Scout Chief Sellman at Camp Pioneer, the Hartford Council Scout camp, near Winsted, during the past week had an unusual character-building experience, declares the executive.

"What summer camp does to break down idiosyncrasies and bring out tolerance and fair play in a scout, winter camp does also in a far greater degree. In the winter camp just completed the scouts, some 20 in number, ate, played and slept together and were interdependent upon each other practically every moment of the time.

"From the unpacking of the first auto to the 'last final look' at camp," the elementary things of life such as eating, drinking, sleeping, playing, breathing, etc., became important—something to appreciate and reckon with. The mere getting of a drink of water required that someone break the ice in the lake. Every bit of heat had to come from wood gathered by the scouts. The food had to be cooked; if the firewood was wet and smoked, the master scout had to devise means of keeping it dry; if the food was burnt, he had to try to do better next time.

But what fun! The wonderful hours of hockey, sail skating, hiking, Siberian man hunting, the mock trial, the camp moving pictures, evening entertainments, inspections, handicraft and leathercraft periods, the big feeds, and the cold nights with the bright stars shining over the glass-like surface of the lake—moments never to be forgotten. Every camper declared that winter camp "beat summer camp all hollow!"

According to the scout executive, a very full program of activities engaged the attention of the campers all of the time. Time never dragged. There was never enough time to do all the things the scouts wanted to do.

One evening was spent at the New Haven camp and New Haven, Hartford and Norwich scouts mingled and made friendships.

Moving pictures were taken by Chief Hill of Hartford of hockey, sail skating, Siberian man hunt, mock trial, skiing, hiking, bridge and raft building, and they will be shown at the next court of honor in Norwich. Norwich scouts are featured in this film in several activities.

New Year's eve the scouts watched the new year in and as the clock struck 12, the "gang" one by one told what camp, friendships, etc., meant. The quiet talks were characterized by seriousness and resolves to go back to school and home and tackle the "job" with new effort.

At New Year's dinner, the last "feast," every scout voluntarily marked himself on a scale with every other scout on such character traits as personality, perseverance, loyalty, team play, courage, sociability, adaptability, poise, etc. It was a revelation to many of the scouts how the week's experiences had revealed habits and weaknesses which the master scout was not aware he possessed and which, coming from his "buddies" as a criticism, made him the more resolved to change himself; to become a better sport, and a doer instead of a talker.

NEW YEAR'S RECEPTION HAD LARGE ATTENDANCE

Between 150 and 200 persons attended the annual New Year's reception of the Young Men's Christian association held Wednesday evening from 8 to 10 o'clock at the Y building on Main street. It was one of the largest attended social events of its kind conducted by the organization in several years. General Secretary Edwin Hill welcomed the gathering on behalf of the board of trustees.

Swahn's orchestra consisting of Walter Lang, violin, Richard Sanders, clarinet, Joseph Adams, piano, and John Swahn, cornet, furnished a pleasing programme throughout the reception. A group of eight young women under the leadership of Mrs. A. P. Streeter, women's physical instructor, presented a number of gymnastic dances, which were heartily applauded. A feature was a basketball game between the Gammas and Baltic teams, which was won by the latter club 19 to 16.

Another feature was two reels of Grantland Rice's sports pictures entitled Nervous Moments in Sports. This was followed by the serving of refreshments in the lobby, which was prettily decorated in seasonal colors.

EXPECTING SILK INDUSTRY TO HAVE BETTER YEAR

J. P. Taylor Armstrong of New London, president of the Corticelli Silk company, which gives employment to between 700 and 800 at each of its two mills in this city and New London, is quoted as predicting that 1930 should be a better year for the industry than 1929 has been.

"The silk industry has not shared in the prosperity that has generally prevailed, and several other major industries have also failed to feel the effects of prosperity." Mr. Armstrong said in discussing the present situation of his business. "The cotton, wool, coal, oil and possibly others are in the same fix, but indications are that the year 1930 will prove more successful for most of these laggards even though some other lines do not do so well.

"In the silk trade there are few excessive inventories at the present time and the base price of our important raw material, raw silk, is nearly down to pre-war levels.

"We expect lower interest rates than have prevailed recently and the styles call for more yards per dress and may increase home sewing which is of importance to this company.

"We believe our business will be active during 1930 and that our payroll which approximates a million dollars in this vicinity, will continue to be an important factor in the prosperity of New London."

FINDS NO CRIMINAL BLAME AGAINST TRUCK DRIVER

The accident in which Francis G. Perkins, a 12 year old Waterford boy, was fatally injured by being struck by a motor truck, was without criminal negligence on the part of Thomas G. Connell of New London, driver of the truck, according to a finding made in the case by Coroner Edward G. McKay. The accident happened Dec. 23 in the midst of a snow storm and the boy was run over. He died while he was being taken to the hospital.

In his finding Coroner McKay states:

This collision occurred on what is known as the Shore road, leading from Niantic to New London, about one thousand feet westerly of Mossbroker's Corner, and about one hundred and fifty feet westerly of the entrance to the Jordan school. The highway at this point runs over level ground in an east and west direction. It is covered with bituminous macadam about nineteen feet wide with about a foot shoulder on either side. The ground adjacent to the road is raised about four inches north of the traveled portion of the road, and averaging about three feet therefrom runs a footpath parallel to the road.

On the 23rd day of December, 1929, between the hours of five and six in the afternoon, the section in which the collision occurred was experiencing a severe snow storm. The surface of the highway was covered with snow and was unsafe for fast driving. Snow was falling fast and was being blown by a heavy wind from the northeast.

At the above time the said Thomas G. Connell was driving his motor vehicle easterly on the Shore road, toward New London. He had been to Niantic, had finished his work there, and had started for home. When he came to the vicinity of the Jordan school he came upon an automobile, a sedan, going also in an easterly direction. This latter car was proceeding at a speed of between 20 and 25 miles per hour on account of the storm. Connell followed the said car for a little distance until they had passed over a knoll in the road onto the level stretch, Connell up to that time had not been going fast.

When the two cars came onto the level stretch, Connell started to go around the leading car after first making sure the way was clear of west bound motor traffic. He sounded his horn, pulled his car to the left and proceeded to pass. As he drew abreast of the leading car, the form of a boy appeared in front of his car and about five feet away. The boy was walking in an easterly direction along the road and about five feet in from the notherly side thereof. There was no time to stop or pull aside and the result was that the boy was struck and thrown down. The Connell car came to a stop on the south side of the road, about fifty feet away from the injured boy. Assistance was given to the boy and he was taken immediately to the hospital. His injuries were fatal and he expired before reaching the hospital.

In reviewing the evidence in this matter I do not find any element that would substantiate criminal negligence. The striking motor vehicle was not being operated by the driver in a grossly negligent manner. The condition of the weather made the presence of pedestrians on the highway difficult to ascertain even at close range.

I am satisfied and find that the death of Francis G. Perkins was not caused by the criminal act, omission, or carelessness of any other person or persons.

CRACK EASTERN TEAM TRIUMPHS OVER PICK OF WESTERN GRIDIRONS

By HERBERT A. YOCOM
(Associated Press Sports Writer)

KEZAR STADIUM, San Francisco, Jan. 1. —(AP)—In as smashing a triumph as has ever featured this annual New Year's day charity game between elevens comprising the pick of eastern and western football stars, the East rode roughshod to a 19 to 7 victory over the West here today.

More than 55,000 spectators banked around the stadium's edge, saw a great collection of eastern players smash and crash their way through the western line for huge gains and take to the air for long advances time and again.

Only once during the contest did the West, which entered the game as favorite, show any semblance of the form expected. That was at the start of the second half, when brilliant dashes by Benny Lom of California and Sloan of Nebraska, brought the ball to the two yard line. From there Sloan crashed over guard for a touchdown and Clark of Colorado college kicked the goal to give the West its only points.

A nonchalant young man known to his Illinois classmates as Frosty Peters, played an impressive part in the Eastern victory.

Twice during the game he booted the pigskin between the uprights for field goals. Standing on the West 35 yard line in the second period he calmly lifted the ball to a score. Rushed into the battle again in the final period, when the West had fought the Easterners to a standstill, he repeated to chalk up the final tally for his team.

Jack Cannon, Notre Dame's unanimous All-American selection, closed his college career with as outstanding an exhibition at guard of all around playing as was ever seen here. He was here, there and everywhere time and again breaking through the Western line to throw ball carriers for losses. His team mate, Twomey, and Booma of Dartmouth, Glassgow of Iowa, and practically all the other Eastern players, turned in performances that compared favorably with that of Cannon.

The East made its first score with a forward pass from Peters to Booma, the Dartmouth end romping 25 yards to a touchdown. Bronco Nagurski, Minnesota's versatile line and backfield star, had placed the East in scoring position on a smashing play through guard for 21 yards.

Shortly after the second period opened the East got the ball on the West 24 yard line as the result of an intercepted pass by Peters and line plunges by Nagurski and Glassgow. Peters, whose trusty toe on several occasions has brought victory to Illinois, then booted the team from the East to its second score with a drop-kick.

Long dashes through the line by Nagurski and Glassgow with Cannon and Twomey clearing the way led to the East's second touchdown, Glassgow crashing over right tackle from the six yard line to score and Peters kicked the goal.

Coming back in sensational fashion, the West scored in a hurry to start the third period. Lom made nine yards on the first play and Waldorf of Missouri packed the ball for a first down. Two more plays failed to gain, however, and the East got Lom's hurried punt on its opponent's 40 yard line. Waldorf recovered an Eastern fumble, and the West started a drive which was not halted until the goal line was reached. Clark kicked the extra point for the West.

Score by periods:

East	6	10	0	3—19
West	0	0	7	0— 7

Scoring West: Touchdown, Sloan, (Nebraska) sub for Pomeroy. Point from try after touchdown, Clark (dropkick).

NORTH CENTRAL TEAM BEATS ROCKY MT. ELEVEN

DENVER, Colo., Jan. 1—(AP)—Combining its speed and power on reverse plays and lateral passes, a picked team of all-star football talent from the North Central conference, representing the Dakotas and Iowa defeated a Rocky Mountain eleven today, 13 to 6.

The Rocky Mountain team was thoroughly outplayed. It never functioned as a team until a few minutes before the final gun when a sustained march battered down the left side of the North Central line, Thorn, Brigham Young university halfback, smashing across for a touchdown from the two yard mark.

The visitors scored their first touchdown in the second period after a 75 yard march down the field, immediately after the entrance of "Red Rabbitt" Jarrett, North Dakota halfback, into the lineup. Jarrett's first contribution was a 20 yard dash around end. The scoring play came on a triple pass, the first of many worked successfully. Kahl passed to Berg, who passed to Jarrett, swinging wide at end. The North Central flash crossed the goal untouched. The Rocky Mountain team was offside on the try for the extra point and Kahl's kick, although wide, was allowed.

Lawrence Smith, Morningside halfback, was the motivating force behind the visitor's second touchdown which came in the third period. Smith bucked through the Rocky Mountain forwards time and again until he had worked the ball to the five yard line. From here he crashed through his right guard for the touchdown.

The try for the extra point was wide.

HANK MORIN RETURNS FROM WILDS OF MAINE

Hank Morin, the well known local umpire, returned home this week from a seven-weeks' stay in the wilds at Waterville, Me., where he visited his daughter and son-in-law. For the last two weeks Mrs. Morin joined the local arbiter.

Hank reports the recent storms very severe in that section, in one section 27 telephone poles being laid low. The fishing through the ice and hunting were very good, so says Mr. Morin. Although it is still a matter of months until the baseball season gets underway, Hank reports himself as ready to go for another big year. Hank has now been calling them for many, many years and is rated by practically everyone who has seen him perform as without a peer in this section.

Georgetown Beats N. Y. U.

NEW HAVEN, Jan. 1—(AP)—Georgetown defeated New York university by a 33 to 27 score here tonight, in the first game of the annual Yale vacation basketball tournament.

The New Yorkers, winners of last year's tournament, trailing 23 to 11, rallied early in the second half to tie the score at 25 to 25. A few minutes later the teams were again playing on even terms after each had caged a goal.

DARTMOUTH WINS HARDING TROPHY BY A HALF POINT

LAKE PLACID CLUB, N. Y., Jan. 1.—(AP)— Dartmouth easing ahead of the defender, New Hampshire, by a bare half point today won the President Harding trophy from a field of 11 American and Canadian colleges entered for the eight events of the annual college week winter sports contests here.

The events tested skill on skis, skates and snow shoes. Dartmouth piled up 20 1-2 points and New Hampshire, winner of the trophy for the past four years, had 20. Two Canadian colleges came next, McGill with 16, and Ottawa with 10 1-2, while Wisconsin scored 10, Bates 7, St. Olaf college of Minnesota 5, Williams 2, and Vermont 1. Maine and Bowdoin, the former represented by three men and the latter by one, failed to score.

The final event, ski jumping, was held this afternoon, Ernest Pederson was picked for the winner as he has won this event the last three years, but a newcomer, Ellingson, of St. Olaf college, beat him. Ellingson jumped 38 meters then 42 1-2 meters, or 139 feet. The snow was slow. Pederson tried too hard and fell on his second jump, thereby losing his chance to place. Landry, of Ottawa, made second place with jumps of 39 and 40 meters, Blood of New Hampshire was third and H. N. Sander, Dartmouth, jumping 30 and 38 meters, scored the final point that gave Dartmouth victory in the contest.

The Marshal Foch trophy for ski jumping went to Ellingson, who also won the cup for the longest standing jump of the meet, 42 1-2 meters.

Later, when it grew colder and snow was faster, Ellingson made an exhibition jump of 55 1-2 meters, or 182 feet, close to the hill record.

TAYLOR TAKES MID-ATLANTIC SKATING CHAMPIONSHIP

NEWBURGH, N. Y., Jan .1.—(AP)—Bert Taylor, Iceland Skating club, New York city, won the middle Atlantic skating championship here today. A post entry, Taylor had not been figured in the pre-meeting dope. Valentine Bialis, of Utica, defending champion, Irving Jaffee, Olympic winner in 1928 and Allan Potts, North American champion, were the favorites.

Taylor already held the indoor championship of the middle Atlantic association.

Lillian Corke, Majestic Skating club, New York, won the ladies events, succeeding Margaret McBride of Toronto, Canada, who did not defend her title.

Chester Cole, of the Iceland Skating club, won the intermediate championship without winning a race. He scored two seconds while Jack Reno, Holy Name club, New York, and Artie Pickering, Jr., Iceland club, scored in the 440 and 880 respectively.

John Reynolds, Holy Name club, scored a clean sweep in the junior class, winning both the 440 and 880 yard events.

Victory in the special three mile Joseph F. Donohue Memorial race, went for the fourth time to Bialis who nosed out Jaffee in the last lap.

The meet was begun on a small lake in Downing park, Newburgh, but it had to be transferred to Chadwick lake after ice on the first lake broke badly in a preliminary heat.

Taylor won the 440, Potts the 220, Bialis the 880 and Jaffee the mile.

PLAINFIELD PROS FACE GOOD TEAM IN INDIANA PROS

The Phi Delta team, Indiana professional champions, which furnishes the opposition to the Plainfield Pros at the Plainfield Community house on Friday evening is one of the fastest basketball organizations in the middle-west. Coming to Plainfield from a successful tour of the mid-west and the New England states the Indiana team is a formidable foe, in fact, as tough a team as any that has appeared on the Plainfield court this season.

Plainfield has no set-up for Friday night's game and Manager Salisbury will put his stringest aggregation on the floor in an effort to make up for the defeat suffered last week at the hands of the Boston Whirlwinds. The visiting team is largely made up of former college stars and boasts some names known throughout the college basketball circles.

ARMORY A. A. CLASHES WITH PHILA. GIANTS FRIDAY NIGHT

The attraction at the State armory in Danielson Friday evening will be the Philadelphia Colored Giants. This team needs no introduction to local fans as they have played in these parts quite a few times and have built up quite a reputation for themselves. As this is their first appearance in this part of the state this season it is expected that a large crowd will be on hand.

MAYS AND BROUILLARD WIN AT WORCESTER

WORCESTER, Mass., Jan. 1—(AP)—Bobby Mays, 134, of New London, won a decision over Harry Devine, 133 1-2, of this city in a sizzling ten round bout here today. Lou Brouillard, 150, of Danielson, Conn., won from Stanley Reed, 148, of Syracuse, N. Y., in the sixth round of the eight-round semi-final.

Susie Says

Well, has the old head got to feeling normal again after extending a greeting to the new year?

Have you got rid of that feeling that there were a couple steam sledges, a trip hammer and part of a boiler works going full blast up there under your scalp?

Did any of you folks who attended the various New Year functions, public or otherwise, notice any great thirst because of the prohibition laws? What, you didn't? I'm surprised.

The only thing that I noticed was that you had to be more careful when you walked about between the tables in restaurants and other such places that you didn't kick somebody's quart or a pint into a total loss. In the old days you didn't take these chances, you just set 'em on the table.

It's like a radio announcer said the other night "that four out of five have it and the other knows where he can get it." And he'd get it, too, if his friends prove the least bit Scotchy.

The prize dumb crack I heard was down in Westerly where the chimes on one of the churches played "Oh, Blessed Day" as the old year was going out and the new arriving. "Can you imagine that" pipes up the dumb one, "a church playing 'How Dry I Am'?"

And now one wonders whether the one who played the chimes didn't have a sense of humor to pick out such a selection with which to welcome the new year.

Well, anyway, the selection might have been appropriate for Westerly seeing as how the Coast Guard kept such a close watch on all boats heading in from the open seas. In other places the word "saturated" could well have been substituted for "dry" if the rhythm had been right.

And speaking of New Year's celebrations they say that in Edinburgh, Scotland, there's one celebration that surpasses all others. Thousands upon thousands gather in front of one church and everyone has a bottle and at the stroke of midnight they all drink. And those that have no bottles must drink from somebody's bottle, believe it or not.

Doesn't that show that the Scotch are not a tight race, even if there are more jokes about the Scotch than any other nationality.

They say whiskey is the national drink of Scotland, ale the national drink of England, beer in Germany and wine in France but in America it's terrible.

And who brought up this liquor business anyway?

DARTMOUTH DOWNS TIGERS IN FLASHY HOCKEY TILT

Although showing a more consistent drive than the Princeton six, Dartmouth was unable to score until the second period when Andres beat Pennypacker in 5:49 with a dribble-in shot. It took however just 42 seconds for the boys from Hanover to put the game safe away in the third period. Johnson scored first in 6:30 with a streaming angle shot and was followed less than a minute later by Guilfoy, who took Andres' rebound to beat the Princeton goalie. Johnson added his second goal of the game with less than two minutes to play, scoring with a hard drive from in front of the net.

Princeton threatened only at rare intervals and then found itself facing a brilliant Dartmouth defense lead by Goalie Hawkes.

KING TUT SCORES KAYO OVER WALLACE IN EIGHTH

MILWAUKEE, Jan. 1.—(AP)—King Tut, of Minneapolis, a rough young aspirant for the lightweight championship, defeated Billy Wallace, Cleveland challenger, in the eighth round of their scheduled ten round fight in the auditorium this afternoon by a technical knockout.

Wallace, twice floored for counts of nine and twice knocked staggering across the ring, was unable to respond at the start of the eighth. He claimed he injured his back when the rough Tut wrestled him out of the ring in the fifth round. Wallace fell through the middle rope, his back striking the edge of the ring. He was given a short rest and managed to continue until the finish of the seventh.

Regardless of the injury, however, the Cleveland lightweight, once rated as the most dangerous hitter in the division, was no match for the wild-swinging Minneapolis puncher. Tut took every round.

NORWICH SCORES AT FIRST HOCKEY VICTORY

A dreary grey sky saturated with a sleep-producing humidity very nearly cheated Norwich out of a hockey game at the park on New Year's afternoon. But thanks to a mighty fine group of sports, the Glastonbury Hockey club, Norwich celebrated their initial game before a satisfied audience of about 300. With the breaks of the game always favoring, the local boys squeezed out a 1 to 0 victory in the last four minutes of play over a better trained and experienced team. It was very evident that Glastonbury were much the better players.

However, the local boys showed plenty of fight, especially Bill Werth, who in a spectacular attempt to score was struck in the forehead with the puck and was forced to retreat to the Backus hospital where several stitches were taken in the wound. S. Palmer at left wing displayed fine action thanks to his hockey training at Dartmouth. George Keeley proved to be Norwich's deadliest shot, scoring the only goal in the game. The lineup:

Glick Gets Verdict

TACOMA, Wash., Jan. 1—(AP)—Joe Glick, New York, won the decision over Doc Snell of Tacoma in the six round main event of the New Year's day boxing program here. Glick, weighing 139 pounds, two more than Snell, outmaneuvered and out-boxed the Tacoman.

TROJANS HUMBLE PITTSBURGH TEAM IN GAME MARKED BY BRILLIANT PLAY

ROSE BOWL, Pasadena, Cal., Jan. 1. —(AP)—Crashing, swirling giants of the University of Southern California, ripped and tore a Pittsburgh Panther defense to shreds here today to rout the previously undefeated mythical football champions of the east, 47 to 14, in the Tournament of Roses clash —the most decisive beating taken by a losing team since this classic was established 14 years ago.

The great intersectional New Year's classic saw a Pittsburgh eleven that placed four men on All-American teams this past season completely outclassed.

All the vaunted power of the Panther team that brought it nine straight victories during the year of 1929, went for naught against the Trojan offensive.

The game had barely gotten under way when Southern California scored. Six times again, in the ensuing minutes of play, the Trojans went over the Panthers' goal line.

By plunges and aerial passes the Southern Californians went down the field while some 70,000 spectators were thrilled.

Only twice was the Pitt drive in evidence and on those occasions touchdowns resulted. Out-fought, outpassed and thoroughly outclassed in the first half, the Panthers came back in the third quarter to score a touchdown and push over another in the last period.

Warm weather prevailed but the heat was not as much a handicap to the eastern players as the fact that they were overwhelmed by an attack that brooked no opposition.

And so, in a decisive fashion, Southern California met and matched the final challenge of a football season and post-season that has seen far western colleges, conquerors six times, while allowing four victories to eastern opponents.

The first period was crammed with as many thrills as many complete games, and had the spectators gripping their seats as Troy's men of football stormed the ground defense of their opponents for long gains and flipped passes with amazing accuracy to score two touchdowns.

Pitt threatened once and that on the first play of the game when Toby Uansa, All-American halfback, slipped through Southern California's left tackle and scampered 68 yards down the field before he was hauled down 14 yards from scoring turf by Saunders, the Trojan safety. The Panthers failed to score, three line plunges netting six yards, and Uansa's pass to Donchess falling incomplete over the goal line.

Six minutes after the start of the game, Southern California crossed the last yard mark of its rival for the first touchdown. Saunders shot the ball straight over the center of the line for 25 yards where Edelson, left halfback, plucked it from the air and raced 30 yards to score. Uansa was caught napping on the play. Shaver place-kicked the try for point.

Two more Trojan touchdowns followed in the second quarter and the count stood U. S. C., 26; Pitt, 0, as the half ended.

After the half time rest the Trojans exhibited the same zip and drive that marked the preceding periods and in the next 15 minutes rolled over two more touchdowns. Pitt scored, too, in the session to assure it at least from the ignominy of a "whitewash."

Both teams again scored in the last minutes of the game.

The game brought out keen duels between Pittsburgh's stars and Southern California's outstanding players, with the former decidedly second best. Uansa, Panther left half, and rated one of the greatest ball carriers of eastern gridirons, was outshone by "Race Horse" Russell Saunders, Trojan quarterback. Saunders finished his college career in a blaze of glory. Uansa, while piling up more yardage from scrimmage, made most of it in his 68-yard run as the game opened. His total was 80 yards which indicates how closely he was guarded after his one breakaway.

Joe Donchess, who won country-wide recognition as an end, played a fine game for Pitt but his efforts were overshadowed by the brilliant work of Francis Tappaan, Southern California's flank man.

MAPLE LEAFS START YEAR BY TROUNCING MAROONS

TORONTO, Ont., Jan. 1.—(AP)—Displaying everything that a good hockey team should have, the Toronto Maple Leafs opened the new year right by defeating the Montreal Maroons, 5 to 3, in a thrilling National Hockey league game here tonight.

The Leafs outchecked the Montrealers all the way but the Maroons would not take the defeat submissively and the result was in doubt until the final bell. Frequent penalties toward the end of the game and a fight between Pettinger of Toronto and Wilcox of Montreal contributed to the excitement.

Ace Bailey scored twice for Toronto and Conacher, Blair and Jackson got one goal apiece. Vancouver Bill Phillips, who just came up to the Maroons after getting a tryout in the International league, started off his big league career with a goal and an assist. Northcott and Stewart got the other two counters.

Shea Wins on Foul

COLUMBUS, O., Jan. 1—(AP)—The 10-round bout between Eddie Shea, Chicago, featherweight and Mike O'Dowd of Columbus was halted in the second round here today when the boxing commission awarded the fight to Shea on a foul.

A low left hook caught Shea and he protested he would be unable to continue even if permitted to take a rest. The first round was even.

PROF. KENNELLY TELLS OF SCIENTIFIC SPEED IN RACING

DES MOINES, Iowa, Jan. 1.—(AP)—Men and horses are subject to the same laws of racing fatigue, Professor Arthur E. Kennelly of Harvard, tonight told the American Association for the advancement of Science.

Times, average speeds and distances in world record racing were shown to be so inter-related that no alteration can be made in one without sacrifice to the others.

Doubled distances were found to require 113 per cent. more time. When speed is cut in half running time is increased 512 times. If average speed is doubled, the running distance available before a racer would become exhausted is reduced 256 times.

If in any part of a long race a runner accelerates above the average speed shown by the Kennelly study to be proper for the world's record, he must pay for the spurt because exhaustion sets in before he can reach the goal.

The laws were derived from world's records in swimming, walking, rowing, running and skating for men, and trotting, pacing and running for horses.

Existing records for distances between 100 and 440 yards, Professor Kennelly said "do not invite attack," but some records for greater distances "are available." These include the 2,000 to 5,000 metre runs and 40,000 to 100,000 meter runs.

A record making runner, he said, should hold his speed steady throughout the race and high enough to bring him exhausted just to the goal. This was not the usual theory a generation ago when it was held that speed should be relatively high in the first and last quarters of a race. Bicycling and automobile records were found too irregular to sustain any simple rule.

BRIGHT ATHLETIC OUTLOOK FOR ACADEMY SPORTS

The year 1930 strides onto the stage with prospects that promise big things for Academy sports between now and next Dec. 31.

From the start of the infant sports, indoor track and swimming, two weeks hence, through the baseball and track campaigns, on to football and cross-country and then into basketball once more after a year's lapse the future and its hopes have filled Academy supporters with more enthusiasm than has been seen in many years.

From this early stage baseball once again looks like the big sport at the school this year. With several veterans holding over from the successful 1929 team, together with such additions as Boots Greene, Pop Richards and Johnny Caron for the pitching job to help along Butsy Weisgraber, Walter Navick, one of the sweetest fielding infielders that you will find in high school ball and Johnny McKenna, a promising catcher. The team has a 22 game schedule but Coach Brigham is not losing any sleep over his chances. The prospects are much better at the start of this 1930 year than they were twelve months ago. And yet last year the team won 17 and lost only three.

Track and baseball teams are the sports outfits that will be defending league titles this year. Although the prospects are not quite as bright in track as in the diamond sport, still the squad has the winning habit after taking its first league championship in 1929 and that will help a lot.

Football will have only Capt.-elect Fat Stevens and Les Crowell on the line with some promising lower-classmen to work in the backfield. Football has the annual Bulkeley game at home this year as a nucleus from which to build the schedule. Mike Abugia, Johnny Mack and a few others will be ready to step in and battle for positions on the line. Cotter, Golembeskie and Bob Geer will be leading aspirants for positions in the backfield.

Basketball will make the greatest splurge during the year for the Norton Memorial gymnasium will be completed in time for next season. The $100,000 arena will be one of the finest in New England schools. Tommy Lynch, forward, Fat Stevens, Georgie Lambert, forward and Dickerman, guards will be promising candidates.

HACKMAN STARS IN SOUTHERN CONFERENCE CLASSIC

ATLANTA, Ga., Jan. 1—(AP)—A slim phantom-like half-back, Buddy Hackman of Tennessee, flashed brilliantly across the gridiron here today to lead the blue eleven from the northern division of the Southern conference to a decisive 21-12 victory over the Cardinals squad of the south in the Shrine charity game at Grant field.

An estimated crowd of 20,000 attended the contest, the proceeds from which go to four crippled children's hospitals in Dixie.

The elusive Hackman, scored all of the Blue's three touchdowns. Two of his goalward jaunts resulted from passes from his Tennessee teammate, Bobby Dodd. His other scoring venture followed a 44 yard off-tackle run through the entire Cardinal team.

After being held scoreless for three periods, the Southern Cardinals finally mustered a 40-yard touchdown drive early in the last quarter, with Dunlap of Georgia Tech, substituting for McWen, of Florida, slipping over center for the counter. Another march late in the period, this time for 70 yards, climaxed by a 22-yard pass over the goal line from Dunlap to Jones, Georgia Tech end, gave them their last score.

The heralded big guns of both squads were effectively silenced. Gene McEver of Tennessee, who led the nation in scoring the past season; "Shipwreck" Kelly of Kentucky, Warner Mizell and Stumpy Thomason of Georgia Tech were stopped with little gain. A red-haired will o' the wisp, Leroy Bethea of Florida, substitute for Mizell, showed the way to the Cardinals, gaining 79 yards in seventeen attempts.

The Blues had a decided advantage in that Major Bob Neyland, the northern squad coach, started an almost complete Tennessee team. Three backs and four linemen, including both ends, were available to lead the way in carrying through Tennessee plays which Neyland employed for his squad. Dodd's punting and his accurate passes provided one of the features of the battle.

YALE BEATS MICHIGAN AT HOCKEY AGAIN

LAKE PLACID CLUB, N. Y., Jan. 1. —(AP)—Yale proved itself superior to the University of Michigan at hockey, winning the third and last game of a series here today, 5 to 2.

Frank Luce, Yale center, was high scorer of the day with five goals to his credit. Four of Yale's goals were made in the first period, and Michigan got all of its score in that frame. Michigan weakened markedly in the last period, but Yale used 16 men to Michigan's nine, by substitution.

Today's contest was nearly free from penalties, Michigan receiving four and Yale two.

CLEAN-UP CAMPAIGN TO BE INSTITUTED BY N. C. A. A.

NEW YORK, Jan. 1.—(AP)—Recognizing the evils of college athletics as set forth in the Carnegie Foundation report, the National Collegiate Athletic association today launched a clean-up campaign within its organization.

While no definite and sure workable plan was laid before the delegates from 230 universities and conferences in attendance at the twenty-fourth convention, the president was given power to appoint a committee to draw up a practical and promising reform program. The committee will report at the 1930 meeting.

As an immediate measure, however, the college and university presidents and authorities in secondary schools will be urged to start a "quiet, earnest effort" to clean up within their individual institutions. To further this phase of the program the presidents will be asked to acquaint themselves with the contents of the report and pass such knowledge on to the trustees, faculties and alumni.

Approval of the report that shocked the athletic world in the middle of the football season, came at the conclusion of the presentation of the set of resolutions by Dr. Thomas A. Storey, of Stanford university. Storey headed a committee composed of O. F. Long, Northwestern; R. G. Clapp, Nebraska; Fred W. Marvel, Brown; M. J. White, Tulane, and D. B. Swingle, of Montana state.

The association's action on the Carnegie report culminated the quietest meeting in recent years—a meeting that saw the resignation of Brigadier-General Palmer E. Pierce as president and the election of Charles W. Kennedy of Princeton as presiding officer. In honor of the retiring president, who held the position from its institution 24 years ago, the office of honorary president was created and Brigadier-General Pierce elected for life. Dean Frank W. Nicholson of Wesleyan, Middletown, Conn., was re-elected secretary treasurer.

The retention of the fumble rule in football was forecasted in the report of E. K. Hall, chairman of the rules committee. The success of the more recent changes in the game was reflected in the successful year just passed, according to Mr. Hall. As the result Mr. Hall said the experiment of the past year had disclosed neither the necessity nor the desirability of any material change in the rules.

Closer harmony between the national collegiate body and the amateur athletic union and the American Olympic association was seen in the report of Brigadier-General Pierce. A letter from Daniel J. Ferris, secretary of the A. A. U., was read asking the N. C. A. A. president to appoint a committee to confer with a similar body from the A. A. U. on better and cleaner working arrangements and the unification of the rules.

President Frank P. Day of Union college put the delegation to talking when he suggested a return to amateur coaching and the abolishment of gate receipts as a cure for the evils brought out by the Carnegie report. The general reaction, however, was that the present system was much better and the adoption of such a plan as mentioned by President Day would mean only the return to the stage where athletics were years ago.

Named as vice presidents for the coming year were: First district, W. S. Langford, Trinity college; second district, Dean B. L. Sackett, Penn State; third district, Dean S. V. Sanford, Georgia; fourth district, O. F. Long, Northwestern; fifth district, S. W. Beyer, Iowa State; sixth district, D. A. Penick, Texas; seventh district, H. L. Marshall, Utah and seventh district, W. B. Owens, Stanford.

MIDWEST GRIDDERS PROVE SUPERIOR TO SOUTHWEST

OWNBY STADIUM, DALLAS, Tex., Jan. 1.—(AP)—Gridiron stars of the midwest, proved superior to the Southwest All-Stars in a wild scoring battle here today. The score was 25 to 12.

More than 15,000 excited fans saw the big mid-west eleven come back to batter across three touchdowns and sew up the decision after the southwest had unloosed a sharp passing attack to tie the count, 6 to 6, at the half.

There was never much doubt of the outcome once the invaders opened up with their power plays in the second period. Pest Welch, their All-American quarterback, failed to score a touchdown, but he battered the lighter Southwest line to bits.

The midwest turned to the air, the very department at which their opponents were supposed to excel, to score two touchdowns in the third period and taken an unpassable lead.

Within five minutes, Herman Young, rangy end from Detroit, snared long passes from Holmah and Welch and trotted across the goal line. Rebholtz ran 30 yards for another score in the final quarter.

Except for their passing attack, with Grubbs of Texas Christian on the throwing end and Geis of Arkansas receiving, the Southwest eleven was more or less helpless. This combination accounted for both of the team's touchdowns. The first was scored late in the second quarter after a march from midfield, when Grubbs fired a short one to Geis over the goal line. Again in the closing period, Grubbs passed to Geis who ran 30 yards for the score.

POETRY

Happy New Year!

Christmas Day has come and gone—
  Oh, the gifts it brought!
Now we shall be asked to pay
  For the things we bought.
While the joy of Christmastide
  All our being fills,
On will come the Glad New Year—
  And the New Year's bills!

Many window-envelopes
  Will the postman bring,
Till we dread to see him come,
  Dread to hear his ring!
"Happy New Year—please remit!"
  Everybody trills.
See the flood of New Year cards—
  And the New Year's bills!

We are getting nearer now
  To the Glad New Year,
New Year's Day is close at hand,
  Soon it will be here.
Though the thought of all we owe
  May give us the chills,
Meet with cheer the Glad New Year—
  And the New Year's bills!

—Somerville Journal.

A New Year's Song

Who scorn the gifts by newness borne
Are only little in their scorn;
New wonders belt the world about,
Melodies from the stars break out;
The air is crowded with brave flight,
Cities lift fire against the night;
Far-teeming industries endow
The labored arm, the dreaming brow.
Our name be energy, be growth!
May the sick heart of blank-eyed sloth
Bear no part in us, while the need
Begets the high, transfigured deed!
The thrill of change shakes through the air
Like sunlight going everywhere;
The lusty epochs march; the skies
Bloom, every dawn, with bright surprise:
ONWARD the cry! by standing still
No nation ever got its will!—

—By Harry Kemp in Nation's Business.

Wife (showing husband expensive fur coat)—One really can't help but feel sorry for this poor thing that was skinned for this.

Husband—I appreciate your sympathy.—Tit-Bits, London.

Mrs. Alden was about to engage a new servant girl. "And do you have to be called in the morning?" she asked the applicant.

"I don't 'as to be, mum," the girl replied, "unless you happens to need me."—From the Vancouver Star.

Mother—Why, son, I thought you liked it. What's the trouble?

Small Jamie—Well, I been going three weeks now an' they haven't taught us how to sit out a dance yet.—Life.

"Do you understand what you are to swear?" asked a magistrate of a very intelligent witness.

"Yes, sir; I'm to swear to tell the truth."

"Yes," said the magistrate, "and what will happen if you do not tell the truth?"

"Well, sir," was the hesitating answer, "I expect our side'll win the case."—Montreal Star.

The Katy flyer had a broken piston valve on the engine near Temple, Tex. The engineer coasted until he came to a garage, stopped his train, had the valve repaired at a cost of 75 cents and pulled out 30 minutes late.

North Africa, the home of date culture, raises few of the choicest varieties, the explanation being that Arab rulers used to appropriate the choice fruit for their banquets, so that the growers stopped producing the too desirable dates.

The case of the people versus a man charged with extortion was drawing to a close in Federal Judge Fake's court at Newark, N. J. Court was in recess when the jury foreman leaned over and whispered to a court reporter: "Hey! What's this case all about anyway? I'm deaf and I didn't hear but a few of them questions and answers." The reporter told the judge and the judge declared a mistrial.

University of California freshmen debaters arrived at Fresno, Cal., to debate with the Fresno State college team on a question involving the moral standards of modern youth and soon decided there was nothing to argue about. Through a misunderstanding both teams had prepared the same side of the question. In order not to disappoint the audience the speeches were delivered and the affirmative won.

Judge E. L. Scott, of Porterville, Cal., has a remedy for colds which has the distinction of being new and different. Starting for his office and feeling the early twinges of a cold, Judge Scott slipped a cold tablet into his pocket. Later he reached for the tablet and swallowed it. He felt much better as the day progressed and congratulated himself on his forethought. Returning home in the evening, "His-zoner" told Mrs. Scott a button had come off his vest. Reaching into the same pocket, he pulled out the tablet.

It happened in a congested street in Kansas City, Mo. He was a traffic officer riding a motorcycle with an empty side car. He noticed the woman rush from the sidewalk to the safety zone and just miss a street car she wanted most terribly to catch. "Hop in, madame, and I'll get you there," the officer said. The offer was accepted instantly, and down the street they careened, the woman clutching the sides of the side car with both hands. At the first car stop they missed the street car, but they hurried on to the next stop and won with a block to spare. The woman thanked the officer profusely and went home to tell her friends of the most thrilling adventure she had had in months.

WESTERLY

TOWN ON GOOD BEHAVIOR— NO HOLIDAY ARRESTS

(Special to The Bulletin.)

WESTERLY, R. I., Jan. 1.—New Year's eve and the first day of the 1930 year passed without activity in the police departments of Westerly and Pawcatuck, there being no arrests to start the month and year.

At midnight the chimes of Christ Episcopal church played a familiar hymn. Pedestrians and vehicular traffic did not fill the principal business streets after the movie picture attendants passed to their homes until 1 and 2 o'clock when auto parties returned from more formal observance of the New Year's advent in other cities and adjoining towns.

On High street about 7.30 p. m. a Pontiac sedan, owned and driven by Chester T. Brown, of Ashaway, collided with an Essex coach, N-4157 Conn., driven by Hector A. Richards of 59 Prospect street, Pawcatuck. No one was injured. The Essex had a splash pan bent, left running board bent and left rear mudguard torn away. The Pontiac car had a dented front right mudguard and banged bumper. Patrolman George L. Madison, on duty on Canal street, investigated. The adjustment of damages was settled between parties and there was no court summons. Both autos were proceeding slowly at the time of the collision.

While Westerly and Pawcatuck police departments made no arrests on New Year's there were investigated motorists desiring of avoiding investigation consulting the authorities relative to appearance of 1929 plates on autos. A party of Massachusetts motorists was delayed in Stonington until they made satisfactory explanation that the receipts of their plates had been delayed. A number of Westerly operators of taxi and service cars explained to Chief of Police Thomas E. Brown that they had made requests of the Rhode Island state board of public roads for plates but there had been a mix-up in the receipt of proper plates.

Narragansett Commandery, No. 27, K. T., of Westerly, Francis M. Johnson, commander, held its January conclave in its asylum, Wednesday evening. The annual inspection by Fifth Division Commander Em. Sir Forrest A. Bliss, grand captain, will be held Wednesday evening, Feb. 19.

Rev. John Groton, rector of the Episcopal church, of New Bedford, Mass., and Mrs. Groton, were New Year's visitors at their former home in Westerly. Mr. Groton's mother, Mrs. Hannah B. Groton, widow of Rev. William M. Groton, former rector of Christ Episcopal church, Westerly, has been confined to her home, 8 Elm street, for some time by serious illness.

Edward J. Purtill of Pawcatuck, who sustained a broken bone in the little finger of his left hand Tuesday morning and badly lacerated other fingers when the stamp window metal grill fell upon them, was able to be at the Westerly post office for a short time Wednesday.

WEDDING

Porter—Thompson

Wednesday afternoon, Miss Maud Emeline Thompson of 94 West street, Worcester, Mass., daughter of John H. Thompson of Westerly, became the bride of Benjamin Francis Porter, 3 Dayton street, Worcester, at 2 o'clock at the home of the bride's sister, Mrs. Eugene M. Chapman, 94 West street, Worcester. The officiating clergyman was Rev. Clifton H. Mix, pastor of Pleasant Street Baptist church.

The bridesmaid was Miss Elizabeth F. Chapman, a niece of the bride, and the best man was Earl H. Besse. The bride's gown was of brown chiffon velvet and the bridesmaid was dressed in blue silk crepe de chine. The bride's gift to her bridesmaid was a string of pearls and the groom's gift to the best man was white gold cuff links. Following the ceremony, Mr. and Mrs. Porter left on a wedding trip to New York. Upon their return they will make their home at 3 Dayton street, Worcester.

Funeral services were held Tuesday for John Brown, 55, of Milford, Mass., formerly of Westerly, at his late home. Burial was in Milford. Mr. Brown died on Sunday after an illness of several months. He was a stone cutter and was employed in Westerly before moving to Milford. Besides his wife, he is survived by three sisters, Mrs. James Maxwell, Westerly; Miss Barbara Brown, Milford, and Mrs. George Clark, Worcester, and by three brothers, Michael Brown, Westerly, and Joseph and William Brown, of Milford. Mr. and Mrs. James Maxwell of this town attended the funeral services Tuesday.

Noticeable this year was the New Year's illumination of both private houses and public buildings. The tree on Broad street and the hundreds of colored lights strung along the streets in the business section of the town have been kept lighted until after midnight.

Christ church on Broad street has a large tree on its lawn which has been illuminated and many homes throughout the town have been lighted as never before.

The central fire station on Union street, has been brilliantly illuminated during the holiday season with colored lights in all of the windows and a large electrically lighted star at the top of the flag staff, and was attractive for New Year's.

The lights were mounted on six-foot chicken wire and the sign was placed on the front of the building ready to glow by dark.

WEDDING

Wood-Brainerd

The Windham, N. H., Journal says: Miss Edna Brainerd, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Elbert A. Brainerd, and Sidney C. Wood were married at the Brainerd farm Christmas morning at 10 o'clock by the Rev. John J. McClellan, pastor of the Presbyterian church. Only near relatives were present. Mrs. Wood is well known as a successful teacher, having gained a state-wide reputation on account of her years of service, especially on Long Island. Mr. Wood is a native of Florida, but in recent years has been a resident of Long Island and the state of Rhode Island. He is now developing two beatuiful subdivisions on the New England coast. On one of his developments he has completed a beautiful Spanish home, where he and his bride will reside. The building, designed by Mr. Wood, is of concrete and of the Spanish type. Its snowy turrets gleam in the sun as they flash into sight when one rounds the curves at the top of the hill in passing along the highway leading from Noank to New London. This building embodies the best in the building art and required more than 50 tons of concrete to complete. Two little lighthouses stand guard close by. These are shaped like an obelisk and from the top electric lights illumine the plot. Electric wires as well as the telephone wires are concealed beneath the ground. Outside lighting devices are controlled from inside the house which contains more than a hundred electrical outlets.

A landscape gardener has planted trees about the building more than a hundred of various kinds, many of them natives.

From the vestibule one sees a marine view of remarkable beauty stretching out for more than 60 miles. At night the lights at sea gleam out across the wide expanse of waters. From this wonder house can be seen eight of these. Montauk, Latimer, Watch Hill, Stonington, Race Rock, Little Gull, New London and Stonington lights.

(Special to The Bulletin)

NEW LONDON, Jan. 1.—Charles L. Linski, 19, of 326 Jefferson avenue, is hovering between life and death tonight at Lawrence-Memorial hospital, with the chances greatly against the recovery of the youth, for he is suffering from internal injuries as a result of being pinned beneath an overturned automobile early this morning. He has been unconscious since he was taken to the hospital. At the hospital tonight it was stated that Linski was on the critical list.

Linski, Walter Wallin of Warner street, Groton, and Almond DeWolf of 47 Cedar Grove avenue, this city, went to Norwich last night in Wallin's Ford roadster. When about a quarter of a mile north of the Cinderella Inn, Quaker Hill, Linski, from an unknown cause, lost control of the wheel. The machine left the highway while traveling at a high rate of speed and overturned. Wallin and DeWolf were thrown out and escaped injuries other than minor bruises and lacerations, but Linski was caught and held fast beneath the overturned automobile. Shortly after the accident occurred, Laurent Genard of High street, Baltic, en route from this city to his home, arrived and gave assistance to Wallin and DeWolf. Linski was placed in Genard's automobile for he was then unconscious and, accompanied by his two companions, was taken to the hospital by Genard.

JAMES PEARY AND WIFE ACCUSED OF AUTO THEFT

(Special to The Bulletin)

NEW LONDON, Jan. 1.—James Peary and his wife, Anna, of 127 East 14th street, New York, were brought to New London last night from Bridgeport, in which city the pair was arrested at the request of the local police on a charge of stealing an automobile owned by William C. Smith of 133 Thames street. Peary and his wife could not obtain a surety on their respective bonds of $500 and were held for trial in the police court tomorrow.

Smith drove his Dodge sedan to Woodbridge and Division streets yesterday morning at 8 o'clock and, parking the car, went to his work. Three hours later Smith discovered that the auto had been stolen and reported the theft at police headquarters. Several hours later and after the police throughout the state had been requested to be on the lookout for the car, it was observed passing through Bridgeport. The man and woman, with Herbert V. Wilder, a youth residing at 481 Ocean avenue, New Haven, were arrested, but Wilder was liberated, for it was disclosed that he had been picked up by the couple in Stratford. Peary and his wife relate a strange story which is given no credence by the police as to how they came to be in possession of the auto. They declare that they were hitch-hiking in an endeavor to reach New York and, when on the outskirts of the city, they were overtaken by four sailors in the car, the driver, being Thomas Hennison, a sailor. Peary and his wife said that Hennison claimed to own the car and offered to allow them to drive it to New York, the offer being accepted. However, neither Peary nor his wife knows where Hennison is stationed: in fact, they do not know anything of the sailor other than his identity.

S. bonds and treasury notes, is shown by the Lehman Corp., the first investment trust to report for 1929, in a statement as of Dec. 31 made public today. Net asset value of the 1,000,000 shares of capital stock outstanding amounted to $91.54 a share or 22 per cent in excess of the market value of the shares, which closed Tuesday at 75.

Of the corporation's resources taken at cost, 52.7 per cent was invested in a diversity of common stocks owned, 4.5 per cent in bonds other than U. S. government securities, 4.4 per cent in preferred stocks, and 33.4 per cent represented by cash assets including U. S. bonds and notes. Other assets, including loans, advances and securities purchased in account with others, make up the remaining 5 per cent of the resources.

The balance sheet shows cash in banks of $1,337,378, funds loaned on call of $13,300,000, and U. S. bonds and treasury notes of $18,878,625. Securities owned at cost included $4,557,236 in bonds, $4,388,212 in preferred stocks and $52,915,736 in common stocks.

Liabilities amounted to $891,735, consisting of accrued expenses and amounts payable for securities purchased. Stock dividends have not been treated as income. The corporation had commitments under which during the next three years it may make investments up to $5,625,000 of which short term building loans amounted to approximately $4,015,000. The value of the corporation's securities and its interest in accounts with others, taken at not in excess of the market, was approximately $7,950,000 less than cost. The decline in the market value of the corporation's resources since its inception of the business on Sept. 24, 1929, was thus 85 per cent of the corporation's original paid-in capital and surplus.

Broadway Theatre.

The name of one man is so closely linked with show business, that to mention one you must mention the other— Flo Ziegfeld, whose single efforts have lifted the musical, singing and dancing stage from the depths of cheap burlesque to the heights of modern production with its lavishness, beauty and riotous color. Now, the master touch of "Ziggy" himself has been lent to the talking screen with his own production "Glorifying the American Girl," which opened to delighted audiences at the Broadway at the New Year's Eve midnight show, and continues throughout today and tomorrow only. With Mary Eaton, lovely star of "Cocoanuts," Helen Morgan, Eddie Cantor and Rudy Vallee, the former the little song-plugger whose struggle to be "glorified" is dramatically told, and the latter three starring in the gorgeous technicolor revue scenes, the production reaches the peak of screen entertainment. On the same bill are the latest Fox movietone news, a Paramount song-cartoon, and Buster and Johnny West in "Marching to Georgie," a howling comedy of two gobs cast upon the strange shores of a girls' boarding school. This program will be followed on Saturday by Cecil B. DeMille's first talking picture, a vivid soul-stirring drama, "Dynamite," with a story as smashing as its title.

Palace Theatre.

A musical comedy which thrilled an earlier generation has been brought back to the public by Warner Brothers in the all-talking, singing and dancing production, "So Long, Letty," which is now playing at the Palace theatre and will be continued there through tomorrow evening. Presented along with this great piece is another knockout feature, "Oh, Yeah," a full-length all-talking comedy of railroading in the west, starring the inimitable James Gleason and Robert Armstrong, who played the lead in "Big News."

The plot deals with a mixup of husbands and wives just at the time a crabby millionaire uncle comes to town with his two flapper granddaughters, and mistakes Patsy Ruth Miller for the wife of his nephew, Bert Roach, after having taken a violent dislike to his real wife, Charlotte Greenwood, and to Patsy Ruth Miller's husband, played by Grant Withers. So an exchange of wives takes place. Withers, the gay blade goes into the next door cottage with Charlotte Greenwood another party hound, while Bert Roach who likes the quiet type of woman moves into the same house with Patsy Ruth Miller, who, of course is a demure little thing who likes her sewing, cooking and other housework.

Claude Gillingwater is cast as the eccentric old millionaire, while Harry Gribbon is the life guard—a life guard naturally who can't swim. Other stars help to make this an uproarious force.

"Oh, Yeah," is full of laughs, too, but it is a robust knock-down and drawn out affair with two tough raidroad brakemen as the heroes, and with Patricia Caron and Zasu Pitts as the heroines. There is also singing and dancing in this production, but the best part of it, by far, is the spicy dialogue of Armstrong and Gleason.

Starting Saturday and for four days, the Palace will present a picture that has had them falling out of their seats since it was first shown in New York. This is "The Taming of the Shew," with Douglas Fairbanks and Mary Pickford cast together. Whether or not you read Shakespere, who, by the way wrote the play to begin with, come anyway and enjoy the fun. It's one long, long laugh.

Breed Theatre.

TULLY MARSHALL, KARL DANE and WILLIAM HAINES in "ALIAS JIMMY VALENTINE."

"Alias Jimmy Valentine," Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer's filmization of the famous stage play, is the attraction now playing at the Breed theatre, with William Haines in the role of the whimsical reformed burglar. The story, one of the most famous of screen dramas, is kept intact in the new film version, and Leila Hyams, Tully Marshall, Karl Dane, Howard Hickman, Lionel Barrymore and others of note are in the cast. Jack Conway directed the play.

ANNIVERSARY SERVICE AT THE METHODIST CHURCH

The anniversary services at the Methodist Episcopal church, Sunday, were very interesting. In the morning the pastor, Rev. Charles Smith, spoke on One Hundred Years of Methodism in the town of Montville. There have been people of the Methodist faith here since 1805, when Betsy Rogers became a Methodist. From about 1817 ministers of this faith preached in this vicinity frequently, but it was not until 1829 that a society was organized. In 1846 during the pastorate of Rev. Ezra Withy the first Methodist Episcopal church was built, at a cost of $1,000. In 1858 a revival occurred and sixty people united with the church. In 1872 the second church building was erected at a cost of $13,000.

Afterwards beautiful memorial windows were placed in the church, and in 1889 the chapel was added at a cost of $2,000. The parsonage was purchased in 1866 at a cost of $3,300.

The Sundey school was organized in 1829. Today it numbers about 185. The membership of the church is 152 The church has had over 60 pastors.

On the morning of April 21, 1927, during a severe electrical storm the second church home was totally destroyed by fire. The society soon planned to build another church but in a different location; this was completed in 1929 and dedicated October 13th. The new church cost over $50,000.

The vesper service in the afternoon, proved to be of special interest. The program included Organ prelude by Robert Franch Church, organist. Invocation by the pastor. Organ Selection. Christmas Fantasia on "Antioch" by Lemore, played by Dwight Richardson, of Norwich. Solo by Mrs. Herbert Richardson, of Norwich, "Eye hath not seen," from "The Holy City." Gaul. The Scripture Lesson, was read by Rev. Charles E. Spaulding, D. D., of New London. Hymn 128 was sung by choir and congregation. "O Come All Ye Faithful" by Adams, was given on the organ by Mr. Richardson. Solo "I Will Exalt Thee" Huhm, was sung by Mrs. Richardson.

Dr. Charles E. Spaulding, preached a fine sermon. His subject was "What Christianity Means Today." He developed three points, it means the supremacy of spiritual things in human life, enthusiam for humanity, personal completeness. An organ selection, Pastoral, from Sonata, by Guilment, by Mr. Richardson preceded singing by three members of the choir, H. G. Dart, Mrs. Aston and Miss Hatfield. The service closed with all singing the doxology, benediction by Dr. Spaulding.

The Virginia prohibition department seized stills and paraphernalia valued at $1,495,994 in the fiscal year ending June 30.

LARGE CONGREGATIONS AT NEW YEAR'S MASSES

New Year's day, the feast of the Circumcision of Our Lord, and a holy day of obligation in the Catholic church, found large congregations present for the three masses at St. Mary's Memorial church. There was a large number of communicants.

The mass at 5 o'clock was offered by Rev. Frederick M. Coholan; 7 o'clock, by Rt. Rev. Msgr. Patrick J. McCormick of Catholic university, Washington, D. C., and 9 o'clock, by the pastor, Rev. William A. Keefe. At this mass the junior choir of 100 voices, directed by the organist, Mrs. Michael J. Farrell repeated the Christmas musical programme. The closing hymn at the service was Holy God We Praise Thy Name, led by the choir, with the congregation uniting. The Christmas decorations remained in place on the altar and sanctuary, also the crib of Bethlehem at St. Joseph's altar.

James Riordan, of New London, called on his many Greeneville friends Tuesday.

John Wright has returned to New Bedford, after spending a few days with relatives on Prospect street.

Miss Gertrude Fontaine returned to Hartford Tuesday, after spending the holidays with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. John Fontaine, of Central avenue. Tuesday evening she attended the New Year's eve festivities at the Bond hotel in the party of Mr. and Mrs. Robert G. Jordan, of West Hartford.

The Home department of the Third Baptist church met with Mrs. Minor Smead Tuesday afternoon. After a study of the lesson plans were made for a banquet to be held soon. The oldest member of the department will celebrate her 94th birthday the 21st of this month.

Monday evening, in the hall of the Third Baptist church, the members of Troop No. 21, Boy Scouts, held an entertainment. Games and a social hour were enjoyed and vocal and piano solos rendered. Hot dogs, rolls, coffee, doughnuts and cookies were served by the entertainment committee.

This meeting was held as a farewell gathering to the scoutmaster, Rev. Harry Brothwell, who is to leave in the near future to become pastor of a church in Waterford.

Had Birthday Party

Monday evening, a pleasant surprise party was tendered Miss Dorothy Smiley in honor of her birthday. Amid much merriment she was blindfolded and led to the dining room, the table being prettily decorated with flowers and favors. Covers were laid for twelve. Throughout the evening music, dancing and games were enjoyed. The party broke up at a late hour, all wishing Miss Smiley many happy returns of the day. She was the recipient of many beautiful and useful gifts.

Sunday School Christmas Party

The Sunday school entertainment and Christmas tree of the Third Baptist church, was held in the chapel last week with a large attendance of [illegible] their parents. After [illegible] an opening carol, Joy to the [illegible] prayer was offered by Rev. [illegible] Brothwell. A little playlet, [illegible] Story, was then given by a group consisting first of Grandma, Mrs. Henry Sebastian, who told the story of Christ's Birthday to a group of children who entered her living room with its mantel and fireplace aglow with Christmas cheer. The children, in their nightgowns and pajamas, had already hung their stockings, and had been uneasy waiting for Santa Claus and so stole quietly down stairs. After Grandma had told them her story they promised to go up to their rooms again and fall fast asleep. The children taking part were David Campbell, Jr., Mabel Brothwell, Al[illegible] Haydon Phyllis Raven and Ar[illegible] Ladd. After another Christmas [illegible], Hark the Herald Angels Sing, Another playlet, "Mrs. Santa Substitutes," was given in which the part of Santa Claus was taken by Rev. Harry Brothwell; Mrs. Santa, Doris Lund; Wog, Clayton Gallup, and a number of the Sunday school children. Santa Claus, who is laid up with the goup, is forbidden to go out with the presents on Christmas eve and so Mrs. Santa gives him a cup of hot tea in which is a sleeping powder. After Santa falls asleep, Mrs. Santa gathers a group of children together to entertain him, when he awakens, with songs and recitations and she and Santa's faithful toy-maker, Wog, go out and deliver all the presents and not one child is forgotten.

The parts were admirably taken and next the presents were distributed by Santa from a large and beautifully decorated tree. The pastor was remembered with a gift of money and every member of the school received a box of candy and a present from the Sunday school. The committee in charge consisted of Henry Sebastian, superintendent of the school, and Miss Doris Lund, program committee chairman.

NORWICH FIRE DEPARTMENT HAD 271 CALLS DURING PAST YEAR

In connection with a nation-wide campaign to mobilize public opinion in favor of the world court, the work is being carried on in this vicinity by Mrs. Nathan Gilman, who was recently appointed state director on international relations of the Woman's Christian Temperance union, and is also acting-chairman of the department of peace of the local council of Jewish women.

This is part of a concerted effort to acquaint the public through the country with the proposal to procure the adherence of the United States to the world court, under the Root formula. It is planned to present certain resolutions to the United States senators during the sessions of the fifth conference on the cause and cure of war, which is to meet in Washington, D. C., from Jan. 14 to 17 and each national organization participating in this national conference will be represented on the state delegations which will be formed to present the world court resolutions to their respective states.

This effort is reaching the organizations, ministers and individuals with world court resolutions and letters urging them to give their utmost cooporation and to stand back of President Hoover, who favors America's adherence to the world court on the Root plan. Organizations that have been reached are as follows: 76 unions of the Woman's Christian Temperance union in this state, the ministers in this city and outlying districts, the Woman's City club of Norwich, the Business and Professional Woman's club of Norwich, the chamber of commerce of Norwich, the granges of Norwich, Colchester, Lebanon, Franklin and Bozrah, the Norwich Y. M. C. A., the local council of Jewish women, the B'nai Brith lodges of Norwich, Willimantic and New London, I. O. B. B., Ladies' auxiliary of Norwich and New London, Chapters of Hadassah of Norwich, Colchester and New London.

The response from the various groups is most encouraging as there is a continuous flow of adopted resolutions coming back to the state director's office daily, which is taken to indicate an aroused public conscience in favor of a permanent court of international justice. It is to be expected that those who worked for the success of the world court of 1926 and for the Kellogg peace pact of 1928 will again give the same intensive and ardent support to the present world court campaign.

Describing what this effort is attempting to do, Mrs. Gilman said:

"Three major issues affecting international relations are before the American public. These are the world court, disarmament conference in London and the Pan-American treaty of arbitration. All of these measures, if successfully carried out, will give reality and meaning to the Paris peace pact. For that reason they are most important. By the pact the nations of the world pledge that the settlement of all disputes and conflicts, of whatever nature they may be, shall never be sought except by pacific means.

"If that pledge was more than a noble declaration or a fine gesture we must show it by strengthening and providing institutions, which will make possible such pacific settlements.

"These questions will be considered during the next regular session of congress, which reconvened in December. While it is impossible to foretell just when and in what order these questions will be considered by the senate, it is safe to be on the alert, to be prepared for action and the first essential is an enlightened public opinion. The great question is whether the public is informed enough and impressed enough with the importance of this world court campaign.

"It must be realized that if a small group of court opponents in the senate are able to prevent the adherence of the United States to the world court we as much as declare to the rest of the world that we will not co-operate in the establishment of the machine necessary for pacific settlement of disputes. We undo in this way in a very great measure the good accomplished by the Kellogg peace pact and frustrate the work and hopes of millions, not only in this country, but in every civilized country on the globe.

"From President Hoover's annual message of congress bearing on the problems of peace we note his calling attention to the fact that the statute of the court has been amended to meet the senate's reservations, and to make it clear that the court is a true international court of justice, and he says further I believe it will be clear to everyone that no controversy or question in which this country has or claims an interest can be passed on by the court without our consent at the time the question arises. The doubt upon advisory opinions has been completely safeguarded.

"It is further stated on good authority that with the court revised according to the Root plan we do not in the least jeopardize our traditional policies as a government as not entangling ourselves in political policies of foreign states or of relinquishing our traditional attitude as a government towards purely American questions with which we are concerned.

"The authorization by President Hoover of the signing of the world court protocol at Geneva, Dec. 9, is hailed as a great achievement as it completes the final steps towards senate ratification of the court.

"The public will recall that the senate favored America's adherence to the world court by a vote of 76 to 17 in 1926.

"It is imperative for groups that have not yet taken action on the world court resolution to do so at once so as to help Norwich and vicinity register 100 per cent. co-operation in this worthy cause. These groups which have not yet been reached with resolutions and wish to express themselves in favor of the world court may secure resolutions," Mrs. Gilman said, by calling her at 2810R. "Personal letters to your senators urging ratification of the world court protocol will bear much weight."

NOVEMBER DEATH RATE LOWEST FOR METROPOLITAN

In spite of an increase of 17.2 per cent. in the mortality from automobile accidents as compared with the same period a year ago and somewhat higher death rates for scarlet fever, whooping cough, diphtheria, cancer and pneumonia, the November, 1929, death rate among the more than 19,000,000 industrial policyholders of the Metropolitan Life Insurance company, who constitute a reliable cross-section of the population of the United States and Canada was the lowest for this month in the records of the company. Declines were shown for typhoid fever, measles, influenza, tuberculosis, cerebral hemorrhage, heart disease, respiratory conditions other than pneumonia, diarrheal complaints, Bright's disease, puerperal diseases, homicide and accidents.

The year-to-date death rate at the end of November was 9.2 per 1,000. This is so slightly higher than the death rate for the corresponding period of 1928, that the calculation must be carried to the second decimal place to show the difference.

PALACE THEATER FILLED TO SEE NEW YEAR IN

A gathering of about 1,500 people saw the New Year in at the Palace theater, jamming every available inch of space for the midnight show Tuesday. The patrons of the theater were unanimous in their opinion after nearly three hours of merrymaking that the show was one of the best of its kind ever presented in Norwich.

Prior to the opening of the program, at 11:30 o'clock, Manager Hamilton distributed hats and favors of various descriptions to the audience. During the show the old Palace theater orchestra, under the leadership of John Egan, provided music and at various intervals the entire audience figured in group singing. The program included eight high class acts of vaudeville, brought here special for the occasion, in addition to the feature picture, So Long Letty.

At the stroke of midnight the entrance of the New Year was signaled through the ringing of bells and blowing of whistles and sounding of other noise makers.

Nights Schools Re-opening

The night school sessions which have been discontinued for the Christmas recess will be resumed this (Thursday) evening and will be continued next week as usual.

THREE NEW YEAR MASSES AT ST. PATRICK'S CHURCH

In a floodlight of splendor, when the sanctuary was completely lighted at the consecration of the Sacred Host at the third mass of New Year's day, at 9 o'clock, in St. Patrick's church, the feast of the Circumcision of Our Lord was commemorated. The first mass at 5.30 was read by Rev. John J. Reilly and Rev. Myles P. Galvin read the low mass at 7. The rector, Rt. Rev. Msgr. M. H. May, offered the closing mass of the day. Great congregations attended the services, while the New Year holy communions almost established a new record for numbers.

This feast has one of the briefest gospels in the ecclesiastical year, a single verse, Luke 2.21. The epistle read was Titus 2, 11-15, St. Paul's exhortation to live soberly, justly and godly in this world.

At the last mass, the organist, Henry J. LaFontaine, repeated a portion of the Christmas music, one of his interludes being an arrangement of carols and hymns introducing Silent Night and Away in a Manger. The offertory was the beautiful hymn, Christmas, in which the refrain was carried by Horace F. Corning, the hymn ending in a finely rounded out trio by Mr. Corning, Roderick F. Sullivan and William Shannon. The service was one of parish rejoicing at the end of a year of almost unbelievable success and progress, religiously, numerically and financially.

At the last mass Wednesday, the assistants to the celebrant were Paul Hinchey and Francis Sullivan.

SCOTT'S EMULSION

PALMER BROS. CO. IS EXPECTING BUSY YEAR

Expectation of a good year in business for the Palmer Bros. Co. which operates mills in New London and Fitchville for the making of comfortables, is voiced by President Percy S. Palmer who announces that the company is prepared to start manufacturing operations on a full scale. Mr. Palmer said the comfortable industry as a whole has shown improvement during the year just closed and that the Palmer Bros. company recorded an increase of ten per cent over its business of the previous year.

"The mills of the Palmer Brothers company have operated on practically a full schedule for the year," he said. "The Montville plant was found to be too small for economical manufacturing operations. It was closed and the machinery and equipment moved to the New London plant and consolidated with it, where it is operating in full. Due to the seasonal nature of our business, unusually large storage space is necessary. The entire capacity of the Montville plant is required for this purpose.

"The increase in volume of business has been on the higher priced goods. The tendency of the trade is towards novelties and goods of better quality.

"After the first of the year it is planned to start operations on a full manufacturing schedule. The Palmer Brothers line for 1930 is not opened until about Feb. 1. The new line has been carefully prepared and styled by New York's leading stylist. It contains several unusual novelties It is too early to say how this line will be received by the trade. The comfortables have been trade marked and a modest advertising program planned for 1930 to put this trademark across.

"There is no reason to anticipate any decrease in the volume of business of the Palmer Brothers company for 1930."

PAINTINGS FROM MYSTIC IN NEW YORK GALLERY

A New York critic writes: About twenty paintings by Mystic artists make up the third in a series of exhibitions from the summer colonies, which is a new feature this year at the Macbeth gallery. Those who follow the course of out-of-town art events already know more or less about the activities at Old Lyme, Gloucester and Mystic, but the present attraction, like the two already held, brings some of the outstanding works produced this year where New Yorkers may have a close look at them. The show may not be fully representative, but it gives a good idea of the lively conservatism practiced by the members of the youngest, both in history and personnel, of the New England summer art colonies. The veteran Charles H. Davis stands at their head, showing one of his sensitively painted pastorals. But in the majority, younger men, such as Arthur Meltzer, Robert Brackman, Lester Boronda and Carl Lawless, are in the ascendancy. The last named offers a glittering piece of realism in his "Snow and Shadows," while Mr. Boronda's "Evening" reveals a more imaginative point of view in a painting of soft, fresco-like color and surface. Equally broad in their contrasts in method are the still life of flowers and conventional brass by Paulette van Roekens and the "Lillies" by Robert Brackman. It is the latter, however, which stands out so forcefully in the exhibition, more modern than the rest in its feeling for form and composition. Lilies in a pottery jar, apples and even a mandolin are the shapely items, chosen for that quality more than for their mere charm of surface or color, employed by Brackman. Then there are the vigorously handled portrait of a girl by Stephen W. Macomber, whose personality is a little obscured by the power of his brush; the Indian motive, more illustrative than intrinsically decorative, by Herbert M. Stoops, and the rich "Fertile Valley" of Mr. Meltzer, which brings out all the glitter and charm of the New England countryside in its fresh summer abundance. The show does much to explain the up-and-coming spirit which animates the activities of the Mystic group.

Ten girls and four boys were present: Ruth Avery, Beatrice Riccetti, Doris Seagraves, Betty Browning, Olive Beebe, Edna Pierce, Alice Avery, Eleanor Palmer, Edith Seaman, Ethel Pierce; also Raymond Barber, John Laskowski, Robert Barber and William Faulkner. His theme was "The Uncertainty of Life." The service began at 9 with a showing of stereopticon pictures which included a series on the Holy Land, "The New Born King," "The Holy City," and the story pictures of "Ben Hur." The pictures were shown by Ralph Smith and while they were on the screen the pastor told the story of each. At ten, a lunch was served by Mrs. Richard Carter, chairman of the social committee of the C. E., assisted by Virginia Ward, Florence Gembel and Alice Brown. Following the lunch of sandwiches, cake and chocolate, a social was held, in charge of Lewis E. Aldrich, president of the C. E. A REDUCTION
Out-of-Town Telephone Rates
is now effective

A nationwide decrease in the rates for day station-to-station telephone calls to points approximately 60 to 300 miles distant was recently announced by the American Telephone and Telegraph Company and became effective yesterday, January 1, 1930.

This reduction in rates has likewise been adopted by The Southern New England Telephone Company on calls between Connecticut points which come within the prescribed mileage limits.

The fact that this company has cooperated with the American Telephone and Telegraph Company in putting this reduction in effect, makes the decrease in rates apply to every day station-to-station call between points approximately 60 to 300 miles disant, whether the destination of the call is within Connecticut or is in anoher state. The rates for evening and night station-to-station calls, as well as for person-to-person calls, remain in general at their present levels.

The rates affected are reduced ten cents in most cases and five cents in the few remaining cases. For example, the day rate for a station-to-station call from Norwich to Boston is reduced from sixty cents to fifty cents; to New York city from eighty cents to seventy cents; to Stamford from sixty-five cents to fifty-five cents.

On the present volume of calls, the saving to subscribers of this company as a result of these reductions will approximate $100,000 a year, and to telephone users throughout the United States the total yearly saving is estimated at $5,000,000.

The adoption of these reductions in rates marks a definite step along the road of progress toward the goal which is the objective of this company and of the entire Bell System:

"The most telephone service, and the best, at the least cost to the public."

VIOLENT RESENTMENT ON BOSTON COMMON TO RECENT SLAYINGS BY COAST GUARD

Recruiting Posters Were Torn From Their Metal Standards and Torn and Trampled—Petty Officer in Charge Was Unable to Cope With the Crowd—Action Followed Meeting in Faneuil Hall, Called in Protest Against the Killing of Three Rum Runners in Rhode Island Waters—Skipper of Patrol Boat Accused of Cowardice.

BOSTON, Jan. 2—(AP)—A demonstration on Boston common in which coast guard recruiting posters were destroyed, was an unexpected aftermath today of a meeting in historic Faneuil hall, called in protest to the killing of three rum runners, in Rhode Island waters, Sunday by coast guardsmen.

The petty officer in charge of the recruiting station was unable to stem the crowd. The posters were torn from their metal standards, torn and trampled, and the standards bent and broken.

The ancient rafters of Faneuil hall echoed to charges that in enforcement of prohibition the nation faces a new form of oppression. The Rhode Island killings were referred to as the "Newport massacre," and compared with the Boston massacre, the first bloodshed of the war of independence.

The coast guard, with its long and honorable record for courageous saving of human life, was accused by speakers of cold blooded killing and brutal treatment of wounded in the deaths of the three rum runners. A resolution adopted unanimously by an audience which filled the hall called upon President Hoover for an impartial investigation. It follows in part:

"We believe that we have a right to respectfully demand that you, sir, as president of the United States, order a thorough and searching investigation into the facts surrounding this deplorable incident by somebody not connected with the coast guard or the treasury department.

"By the continuance of such governmental practices as the incident above described we can see nothing but the destruction of the liberties for which our fathers fought, for which free men have bled from the time of the great charter.

"We are not asserting the guilt of the coast guard but we believe the attitude of the government as at present taken, will justly give the impression that an attempt is being made to suppress the facts and whitewash a criminal act of the worst kind and all this for the enforcement of an unpopular, unnecessary and stupid law which has no proper place in the constitution of our nation, and which all intelligent people know can never be enforced."

Conrad W. Crocker, general counsel for the Liberal Civic league, which called the protest meeting and which has conducted an investigation into the shooting, denied that the rum runners had attempted to escape or that they were given any warning by the coast guard patrol boat 290 before it opened fire with a machine gun. Crocker said his investigation showed the men were shot down from a point blank range of 15 feet as their craft, the Black Duck, was proceeding at four miles an hour in a dense fog and headed directly towards the 290. The 290, he said, instead of being in pursuit, was tied by the stern, to Dumpling Rock buoy at the time.

He accused Boatswain Cornell, skipper of the 290, of cowardice and said he was afraid to board the Black Duck after Charles Travers, the wounded and sole survivor of her crew, brought her alongside the coast guard craft.

"Those men were left to welter and die in their own blood," he said. It was the cook aboard the 290, he said, who finally in response to Travers' pleas, went aboard the Black Duck to help him with the three dead or dying men. Crocker claimed that when Cornell finally "found nerve" to take his craft the half mile through the fog to Fort Adams, two hours after the shooting, a naval surgeon there said Jake Weisman, one of the three killed, was still alive and that he was not pronounced dead until half an hour after his arrival.

Crocker claimed that if the guardsmen had taken the men to shore quicker, Weisman's life might have been saved.

Congressman John W. Douglass said the rum runners were "outrageously, feloniously murdered," and promised to forward an investigation at Washington.

John F. Fitzgerald, former mayor of Boston, after attacking the Newport slayings, announced his intention of being a democratic candidate for governor next year, with repeal of the state's enforcement act as a platform plank. He made of his announcement a challenge to Gov. Frank G. Allen, who yesterday defended the state law.

"Let Gov. Allen and Mayor Nichols leave the rooms where liquor is served," he said, declaring it would have been as justifiable to shoot down guests in Boston hotels New Year's eve as the shooting of the Newport rum runners. He referred to the shooting as "murder in cold blood."

William H. Mitcell, chairman of the meeting, said 1100 men, women and children had been killed in the enforcement of prohibition. "When murder stalks abroad in the guise of law, in God's name repeal that law," he asked. "Official murder is still murder."

John W. MacCormack, Boston congressman, took the south to task for failure to observe the 14th and 15th amendments while forcing the prohibition amendment on the north. "I have seen men vote dry and drink wet," he said, "but I am not a Brookhart. I have never taken a drink in my life, but I do not feel I have the right to dictate to my neighbor." He said the prohibition amendment was the only negative amendment in the constitution, all others conferring liberty.

Major General Clarence R. Edwards, the venerable former commander of the 26th division, was quoted by Crocker as having told him shortly before the meeting that if the army was asked to perform the duties under prohibition of the coast guard he and "every other gentleman" would quit the service.

INVESTIGATING KILLING OF THREE RUM RUNNERS

NEWPORT, R. I., Jan. 2—(AP)—Seven witnesses were heard today at the state's inquest, from which federal officials were barred, into the deaths of three rum runners on the motorboat Black Duck, off here Sunday. The federal officers were barred by Attorney General Oscar L. Heltzen who said he did not consider that they had a right to be present to get information that could be used for a defense if an indictment should be brought against the crew of the coast guard boat 290, who shot the rum runners.

The inquest, conducted by Heltzen and Coroner Perry B. Dawley, was continued until next week, probably Monday, at which time Heltzen said he hoped to have the difficulties that have arisen between the state and federal authorities sufficiently ironed out so as to get the testimony of the coast guard crew.

Heltzen said he intended to confer with Henry M. Boss, U. S. district attorney, at Providence, tomorrow and if unable to get the information he sought he would telegraph to the treasury department at Washington immediately. He explained that the treasury department was in charge of the coast guard investigation from the federal angle.

The inquest was private and none of the testimony was made known. The federal officers barred were Deputy Collector T. F. Finnegan, of Boston, Customs Agent Joseph P. McKenna and Inspector George M. Murphy, who said they were conducting an investigation of the shooting for the treasury department.

The witnesses heard were Sergeant James Toomey and Privates Ray Rankin and Clifford Reistrick, of the medical detachment at Fort Adams who received the bodies of the dead men when they were brought to the fort by the coast guard crew; Charles Travers, of New Bedford, the surviving member of the crew of the Black Duck; Lieut. O. D. Bowman, who was officer of the day at the fort when the bodies reached there; Medical Examiner Samuel Adelson, of Newport, and Thomas Cassidy, a New York reporter who was understood to have testified that a coast guard officer at New London had told him the one-pounder on the 290, the gun usually used in a firing warning at rum ships, had not been fired.

Heltzen said he had "plenty of testimony that the one-pounder had not been fired."

CONFERENCE ON YOUNG PLAN FOR REPARATIONS

THE HAGUE, Jan. 2—(AP)—The advance guard of the second conference of the Young plan for reparations had scarcely arrived here today when talk began of the necessity of a possible third meeting to stabilize the peace of Europe.

The normal work ahead of this second conference has been definitely outlined but the proposed trust agreement between the central banks of the creditor powers and the new bank for international settlements which is to handle collections and distributions under the Young plan, seems destined to meet with some critical opposition.

Another question that may prove bothersome embraces the reparations payable by Hungary, Bulgaria and Austria to the "succession states"—Roumania, Czechoslovakia, Jugoslavia and Greece. A sub-committee appointed by the first Hague conference has been unable to reach an unanimous agreement regarding the reparations obligations of Bulgaria and Hungary.

Aside from these subjects the new conference is to adopt statutes for the bank of international settlements and consider reports from committees appointed last August to find methods for liquidating all the hangovers of the past between Germany and the creditor nations.

LINDBERGH NOT KEEN FOR MEMORIAL STATUE

ST. LOUIS, Jan. 2—(AP)—Rather than be memorialized in stone as the hero of the New York-to-Paris flight, Colonel Charles A. Lindbergh would prefer to be remembered in St. Louis as "the boy who flew the air mail."

While expressing no particular objection to a movement to erect a statue to him in a city park here, the famous flier expressed this preference in a telephone conversation today with Mayor Victor J. Miller prior to leaving with Mrs. Lindbergh on their westward cross country flight.

"He neither endorsed nor seriously objected to the statue," said Mayor Miller, originator of the idea, who added that he has not as yet definitely decided whether to abandon the proposal. The mayor's idea was to erect the memorial by small popular subscription and he already had received several donations.

POLICEMEN GUARD STREET CAR ROUTES IN NEW ORLEANS

NEW ORLEANS, Jan. 2—(AP)—Announcement by New Orleans public service today of the bombing of 64 trolley cars here since the street car strike of Union street car crews last July spurred the police department to station heavily armed patrolmen on guard along the city car routes tonight.

The police carried shotguns and pistols and were under orders from Superintendent of Police Theodore Ray to shoot to kill the bombers "if necessary."

CINCINNATI PAID FINAL TRIBUTE TO CHARLES P. TAFT

CINCINNATI, O., Jan. 2—(AP)—Cincinnati today paid final tribute to Charles P. Taft, philanthropist and publisher, who died Tuesday at the age of 86. Mr. Taft, founder of the Cincinnati Times-Star and its publisher until his death, had been ill for more than a year.

Funeral services were held at Christ Episcopal church with Rev. Frank Nelson, rector, officiating. Bishop Boyd Vincent of Cincinnati pronounced the benediction. The church was crowded with those who paid their last respects to the city's greatest benefactor, and numbers of persons stood in a drizzling rain during the short service. Among those attending were city officials, numerous business and political associates and representatives of Governor Myers Y. Cooper, who was unable to attend.

Burial was in Spring Grove cemetery in the presence of only members of the family and a few friends. The service was brief.

RESCUE PLANE WRECKED IN TAKE-OFF AT FAIRBANKS

FAIRBANKS, Alaska, Jan. 2—(AP)—One of the Fairchild cabin planes sent here for the Eielson search was cracked up today as Gifford Swartman and Captain at Reid were taking off for Nulato, the first stopping place between here and Nome. No one was injured.

Swartman, at the controls, was forced to land his ship in a small slough when the engine stopped just after taking the air. The plane was believed badly damaged but Reid and Swartman escaped.

Snow which had been falling several hours stopped just before Reid decided to hop for Nulato, a trading center and wireless station on the Yukon river, about 250 miles from here and on a direct line to Nome.

Until mechanics are able to make a thorough examination of the ship, they would make no estimate as to the extent of damages or time needed for repairs.

COAST GUARD CUTTERS SENT TO DISABLED SHIP

SEATTLE, Wash., Jan. 2—(AP)—Disregarding storm warnings broadcast by the weather bureau, two coast guard cutters late today were racing to the rescue of the disabled freighter California off Portland, which was being battered by a 75-mile gale far out on the Pacific.

The cutters Snohomish and Haida were expected to reach the crippled vessel some time tomorrow. Latest reports from the California gave her position as about 330 miles almost due west of Cape Flattery.

Forty-five men were aboard the ship which lost her steering gear in the terrific storm. The Coast Guard here received a message late today from Captain Gregor Johnson, master of the California which said the ship was "drifting 90 degrees true, three miles an hour."

This would mean the vessel was drifting east.

PLANS TO CHECK LEAKS OF INDUSTRIAL ALCOHOL

WASHINGTON, Jan. 2—(AP)—New plans by the administration to check leaks of industrial alcohol into bootleg channels were rumored tonight as the prohibition enforcement controversy continued to dominate the interest of Washington.

Apparently gratified by the assurance of Senator Jones, of Washington, that the Hoover law enforcement commission would not go into the wisdom or unwisdom of the 18th amendment, the clashing dry leaders centered their attention on the industrial alcohol situation.

The rumor also circulated today that the law enforcement commission had been blocked so far in efforts to investigate that problem, and that the commission is divided over the question of open or closed hearings on this subject.

Split In Democratic Party In Alaba[illegible]

BIRMINGHAM, Ala., Jan. 2—(AP)—The democratic executive committee of Jefferson county, where more votes were cast in the last general election than in any other six counties in Alabama, today pased a resolution censuring the state executive committee for barring party "bolters" from becoming candidates in the August primary.

The resolution, introduced by C. D. Comstock of Birmingham, was passed by a vote of 45 to 24.

Another resolution passed by the committee and adopted without argument or a dissenting vote invited all qualified electors to become candidates in the primary regardless of their vote in the general election. The resolution prescribing qualifications of candidates required only that they support the party nominees in the general election.

The county committee's action was taken on the eve of a meeting here to formulate plans for the independent campaigns in the November general election of United States Senator J. Thomas Heflin, seeking reelection, and Hugh A. Locke, Birmingham attorney, gubernatorial candidate, both of whom were barred from the primary by the state committee because they supported President Hoover.

Immediately after the committee met at Montgomery on December 16 and voted to raise the bars against the bolter candidates for federal, state, district, or circuit offices, Heflin followed Locke in announcing that he would be an independent candidate.

Senator Heflin, who is here to address the organization meeting of the independents tomorrow night, in a statement today likened the action of the state committee in barring bolters to Mussolini's rule of Italy.

GRAND JURORS CELEBRATED FOLLOWING INDICTMENT

WASHINGTON, Jan. 2—(AP)—A celebration by grand jurors followed their indictment of Robert A. McPherson, Jr., on a charge of killing his wife, Mrs. Virginia Hurley McPherson, several months ago was described today by a witness before a police trial board.

Eugene Beatty, one of three members of the grand jury who testified in the defense of Police Inspector William S. Shelby and Lieutenant Edward J. Kelly, said that after the grand jury had voted to indict the young husband, a half a dozen members of the jury had gathered in one corner of the room and hilariously comported themselves.

Beatty said one of the women members of the jury was so shocked that smelling salts were administered to prevent her from fainting.

$400,000 OFFER MADE FOR CUMBERLAND FALLS

Coleman Du Pont, former Delaware senator and native Kentuckian, has renewed his offer to purchase Cumberland Falls at a cost of $400,000 and present it to the state is the latest move on the part of preservationists to preserve this scenic spot for state park purposes.

The announcement was made in letters mailed to members of the Kentucky legislature which convenes next week, requesting them to accept the offer. Two years ago Du Pont offered to purchase the site and give it to Kentucky but the 1928 legislature rejected the offer.

Motion Picture Plane Afire Fell Into Sea

SANTA MONICA, Cal., Jan. 2—(AP)—Ten persons including Kenneth Hawks, motion picture director and Max Gold, assistant director and former national handball champion were killed today when two motion picture camera planes collided head-on in mid-air and plunged into the ocean near here.

The cabin ships, loaded with cameras and motion picture equipment, in addition to five persons each, crashed together at 3,000 feet altitude, three miles of the coast. They wedged together in a tangled mass, burst into flames and plunged to the surface sinking immediately.

Three of the passengers were thrown clear as the interlocked planes struck the water. The other seven were carried beneath the surface. Three bodies later broke free from the wreckage on the sea bottom and rose, to be picked up by patrol boats. The doors had been removed from the plane cabins to give cameramen free play, and searchers believed all bodies eventually would appear on the surface. The dead:

George Eastman, camerman.

Ben Frankel, assistant cameraman.

Otto Jordan, assistant cameraman.

Tom Harris, property man.

Paul Ross, pilot.

Ross Cook, pilot.

A third motion picture plane taking part in the maneuvers, piloted by Lieutenant Colonel Roscoe Turner, transcontinental flier, was 500 feet away when the crash occurred and was not involved in the catastrophe. Turner flew back to Clover field and reported the accident.

Turner who carried with him a parachute jumper was flying 500 feet to the left of the camera planes and several hundred feet under them. The camera planes were at an altitude of 3,000 feet.

The parachute jumper was watching the camera ships for a signal that they were ready, preparatory to climbing out of the cockpit for a parachute leap into the sea. The camera planes were to have swooped down after him, photographing him as he fell and struck the water.

"I was circling 500 feet to the left and below the camera ships, said Turner, describing the disaster. "They were over my shoulder and I could not see them. Suddenly the boy with me said they looked like they were coming together.

"I immediately winged over and came around for a look at them. By that time, they had crashed together and, when I saw them, they were tangled together on fire and plunging into the water. Just as they hit two or three people either jumped out or were thrown clear of the wreckage.

I could see the bodies splash into the ocean a little distance away from the point where the planes hit the sea."

Turner said the camera planes were supposed to have circled close together and to have followed, one on either side of the parachute jumper as he fell. He expressed belief that possibly sun in the eyes of one of the pilots had caused him to circle in the wrong direction, meeting the other ship almost head on.

DENIES "PROPOSING" TO DOLORES SALAZAR

LOS ANGELES, Jan. 2—(AP)—Ferdinand Pinney Earle, artist known as "Affinity Earle," in a deposition on file today in superior court denied that he ever proposed marriage to Dolores Salazar, Spanish dancer. The deposition, signed in Paris, was the 51-year-old defendant's answer to the dancer's $180,000 breach of promise suit.

When the case was called for trial this morning, Superior Judge Arthur Keetch continued it indefinitely to await the arrival of additional expected depositions from Earle.

Earle declared he had proposed to only one, the present one, of his four wives. The others—"there is such a thing as spontaneous agreement without proposal"—he explained.

In her suit Miss Salazar demands $50,000 for breach of promise to marry, a like sum for alleged betrayal and $30,000 for alleged breach of contract to star her in motion pictures and the balance for punitive damages and failure to place agreed amounts in Hollywood banks for her credit.

TEN MEN INVOLVED IN THE "BANKRUPTCY RING" CASE

They Are Charged With Having Engineered a $500,000 Failure—The Only Assets Discovered Thus Far is a Truck Load of China—Now Under Indictment For Using the Mails to Defraud—Three of the Ten Men Sought Are From Waterbury—Bench Warrants Have Been Issued For Their Arrest.

NEW YORK, Jan. 2—(AP)—Ten men, charged with having been members of a "bankruptcy ring" and with having engineered the $500,000 failure of the National Home Outfitting company in Pittsburgh and New York last July were sought today by U. S. marshals, armed with bench warrants.

They are under indictment in federal court, charged with using the mails to defraud.

The ten men sought are: Morris Sanford, Morris Maletsky, and Michael Gellis, all of Waterbury, Conn.; Betram Heres, of Pittsburgh; Jack Lerner, of Manhattan, and Harry Schachter, Abraham Lauterstein, Michael M. Kantor, Benjamin Elfand, and Morris Chauls, all of Brooklyn.

The company was petitioned into bankruptcy last July. On August 1, after agents of the National Association of Credit Men had testified before Federal Judge Henry W. Goddard in New York that large trucks of merchandise had been moved from the New York city branch to lofts and stores, Isidore Shapiro was appointed receiver.

It is charged that the concern obtained from Pittsburgh banks a $100,000 credit rating, through fraudulent representations made by Sanford to bankers when it was organized in 1927, and that it bought to the limit on this credit.

EXPLOSION ON GIG OF U. S. S. SARATOGA

SAN PEDRO, Cal., Jan. 2—(AP)—Three men were seriously burned today when the engine of an officer's gig moored on the port side of the U. S. S. Saratoga, naval aircraft carrier, exploded.

The men were blown from the gig into the water and picked up by Matthew Bobick, operator of a water taxi, whose boat happened to be nearby. Bobick took them to the starboard side of the Saratoga and they were taken aboard for emergency treatment. He did not learn their names.

One of the men, Bobick said, apparently was critically injured and another was blinded.

The smoke which poured from the Saratoga was from burning paint on the port side, ignited by the gig explosion Bobick said.

STATEMENT BY PREMIER PRIMO DE RIVERA OF SPAIN

MADRID, Jan. 2—(AP)—General Primo De Rivera, the Spanish premier, in what many believe is part of his political testament today laid before the country a plan providing for a return to constitutional guarantees and parliamentary government by next September. That would be just seven years after the suspension of parliamentary government following the bloodless coup by which Primo De Rivera seized the reins.

At the same time the premier denied that any immediate governmental changes are contemplated or that a crisis existed in his cabinet. He said King Alfonso approved the plan today after studying it since its submission to the monarch on Tuesday.

FEDERAL OFFICERS ARE WATCHING GAMBLING SHIP

LOS ANGELES, Jan. 2—(AP)—The gambling ship Montfalcone, anchored off the southern California coast, again is under observation by federal officials who, however, said today that they could not interfere because they consider the ship within the three mile limit.

Assistant United States Attorney Harry G. Balter said Orange county authorities were making no efforts to "padlock" the ship. He said coast guardsmen boarded the floating gambling palace New Year's eve seeking liquor but found none and left without disturbing the gamblers. Later in another search seven pints were found hidden in the crew's quarters, he said.

DETECTIVE DEMOTED TO RANK OF PATROLMAN

NEW YORK, Jan. 2—(AP)—Detective Patrick Flood, one of those who investigated the slaying of Arnold Rothstein, Broadway gambler, today was demoted to the rank of patrolman. The announcement was made by Commissioner Grover A. Whalen during Flood's departmental trial for dereliction of duty in connection with the Rothstein case.

Although Flood's trial has not been completed his immediate demotion was ordered, Mr. Whalen said, because his testimony today showed "ignorance and complete lack of understanding" of his "routine duties."

SCHOOLBOYS ROBBED 150 BROOKLYN HOMES

NEW YORK, Jan. 2—(AP)—A 16-year old schoolboy today told Magistrate Hughes that he and two 15-year old companions had robbed 150 Brooklyn homes in the last two months.

The boy, William Haggerty, was arraigned on a charge of robbery and held in $10,000 bail for a hearing tomorrow. His two companions were sent to the children's court.

Haggerty said the plan in most of the 150 robberies was to enter houses where parties were in progress, climb into the room were the wraps had been left and steal whatever valuables he found.

SEARCHING FOR GUNMEN WHO SHOT INSPECTOR

DETROIT, Jan. 2—(AP)—A city wide search for a black sedan and at least three men who this morning shot and seriously wounded Inspector Henry J. Garvin, head of the crime and bomb squad, and probably fatally wounded an 11-year-old school girl who was in the path of their bullets, was being pushed here tonight.

Inspector Garvin, for two years identified as the moving spirit in the city's battle against racketeers, extortioners and liquor interests, was caught by a veritable broadside of revolver bullets and shotgun slugs shortly before 8 a. m., today as he was driving to work. The occupants of the black sedan, believed to have waited outside Inspector Garvin's house most of the night, drove up behind the officer's car, forced him over to the curb and when they came alongside, opened fire.

The school girl, Louise Bartlett, daughter of a Detroit automobile factory worker, was found lying in the yard of a house across the sidewalk. She had been struck in the head and arm by three bullets. The girl had been walking along the sidewalk to school, a short distance away.

Inspector Garvin is known to have been marked to "go on the spot" for at least two months, police said today.

Detectives who inspected the bullet holes in Inspector Garvin's car said they believed the weapons used were shotguns and automatic pistols.

INVESTIGATING MYSTERY OF A $30,000 NECKLACE

NEW YORK, Jan. 2—(AP)—Investigation was begun today of the unexplained reappearance in a police station of a lost or stolen pearl necklace valued at $30,000.

The necklace has been identified as the one Mrs. Mary H. Gilmore reported lost or stolen on November 22. It turned up mysteriously on New Year's eve on a desk in the detective room of the East 35th street station.

Assistant District Attorney Harold Hasings, in charge of the investigation, said he planned to question several persons before presenting the case to the grand jury. No one who saw the necklace placed on the desk could be found at the station, Mr. Hastings said.

Mrs. Gilmore missed the necklace while shopping on Fifth avenue. On December 11, her insurance company notified police they had received a telephone message offering to return the necklace for $10,000. On the advice of police, the insurance company attempted to complete the negotiations, but was unsuccessful.

There was considerable snow on the highway and in turning out to pass one of the New England Transportation company buses near the [illegible] home, the elderly man lost control of his car. The machine ran almost headon into a tree and then swung to one side so that it balanced over the edge of a 30-foot ravine placing the occupants in a most precarious position. Several men tied the car to a tree to prevent the impending plunge and the occupants were then removed to safety. Lathrop had sustained a fracture of the left leg, facial lacerations and shock. Mrs. Lathrop also received facial injuries, the other members of the party being uninjured.

DANIELSON

BOAT TRAINS NOT TO OPERATE AFTER SUNDAY

(Special to The Bulletin)

DANIELSON, Jan. 2.—After Saturday of this week Danielson and other towns below this community will be without train service other than freight train service. The boat trains, which have run for upwards of 60 years, are to be taken off and the express and mail matter they have handled will be handled by trucks. The boat trains, famed for years, have not carried any passengers for a long time, but have operated as mixed trains, hauling mail and express cars as well as freight cars.

The trucks that are to supply the express service will be operated on regular schedules and along the branch from New London to Worcester as well as out of Providence for Webster and Southbridge. This innovation follows closely upon the introduction into this territory of freight-by-truck service by the New Haven road, operating through its subsidiary, the New England Transportation Co. This new truck service is working out very well. It so happened this particular day that there were not sufficient trucks on hand to care for the business that developed. When such a situation arises cars are loaded at Putnam and forwarded by train, as formerly.

Under another arrangement concerning freight originating up and down the branch the service is being speeded up by 28 to 30 hours, as to deliveries at destinations. At Putnam shipments are consolidated into cars and these cars are delivered the next morning at Communipaw for the Pennsylvania road transfer, at Port Morris transfer for the Erie road and at Port Jervis transfer for the Central of New Jersey. This liminates transfer at Cedar Hill, as has been the rule.

As to the removal of the boat trains, they will be little missed. It is anticipated that the trucks will render a wholly satisfactory service and that there will be less likelihood of their being off regular schedule than has been the case so many times with the boat trains since they have been operating as mixed trains.

There may be a bit of sentimental regret over the passing of the boat trains, since they have operated up and down the line, morning and evening, since the days of the wood-burning locomotives. It is recalled by older residents that, many years ago, the morning train made a lengthy stop here to allow passengers to breakfast at the depot restaurant, in a station long since destroyed by fire. While in no sense ever comparable with the de luxe main line trains of this day, the boat trains were quite famous and had the fastest schedule of any of the passenger trains operating through this section. They were used extensively by business men in this part of eastern Connecticut in getting to New London to take the boat for New York.

Postmaster E. H. Keach revealed this afternoon that the receipts at the Danielson postoffice during the year 1929, totaled $36,754.54, which is well ahead of any year in the entire history of the office. In 1928, the receipts were just under $32,000, whereas, back in 1923, when Mr. Keach first became postmaster the receipts were running between $19,000 and $20,000. The receipts referred to are exclusively from the sale of stamps. The business here has grown with rapid strides since the development of the business of Powdrell & Alexander, a concern that makes heavy daily shipments by parcel post. There also has been material growth of business from several other sources.

In the list of bank stocks of eastern Connecticut financial institutions valued by the state board of equalization for taxation purposes, Danielson's banks make a fine showing. With a par value of $100, the tax value of the stock of the Windham County National bank is fixed at $520, this being the highest valuation placed on any bank in this part of the state. This bank has been doing business for more than a century. The stock of the Danielson Trust Co., organized in 1914, is valued for taxing purposes at $250. Its par value is $100. The Killingly Trust Co., with a $25 par value stock, is valued at $100 for taxing. This company paid a 100 per cent dividend during the past year.

Of all the personal taxes due the town of Killingly on the list completed last fall, $7,530 has been received by Personal Tax Collector Arthur A. Dean. Mr. Dean said this afternoon that of the upwards of 3,500 people of the town, men and women, who are liable to pay this tax only a few more than 60 have failed to do so. It is expected that it will be established that there are those among this group some entitled to exemption on account of having performed military or fire department service. There may have been some removals from town. There may have been errors in including names in the list. All of this will be sifted out and ascertained as rapidly as possible. Mr. Dean has had less difficulty in collecting the taxes this year than he did last year. Only a very few persons tried the old dodge of ante-dating checks to escape paying the $1 penalty imposed upon those who did not settle prior to Dec. 15. This subterfuge did not bring the desired results, as each belated payer was required to hand in $2. Threadbare excuses for not paying on time also were fewer this year than in the past.

The business of the Danielson Bottling works, which has been located in the old borough hall building on Water street for several years is to be removed to the brick building on the Frank Davis property, on Elmville road. Leo Piche of the company said this morning that there is a splendid spring on the Davis property, the water being of excellent quality.

There is the prospect, it is said, that the state may put in a stretch of concrete highway during 1930 on the Danielson-Putnam trunk line northward from the bridge in Elmville to a point at the southerly limits of the village of Attawaugan. If this work is done, there will be an all-concrete highway from Danielson into Putnam, at Grove and South Main streets. About two miles of macadam between Elmville and Attawaugan will have to be built to bring this about.

Lieut. Ross V. Urquhart, commanding officer at the Danielson barracks, and Lieut. Albert E. Field, department inspector, were in Hartford today attending a meeting of lieutenants of the state police department.

The water shortage that existed for several months in outlying sections has been almost wholly overcome. A distressingly long time was required for refilling of some wells that went dry, they showing little gain after several hard rain storms. The inconvenient condition has been overcome and about everyone has an ample water supply now.

This was another holiday for many of the mill workers in Danielson, some of the plants that closed for New Year's remaining so for the balance of the week.

There are several cases of special local interest on the calendar of the Windham county superior court for the January term for the consideration of criminal business.

With a temperature rising to 54 degrees this afternoon and bright sunshine the day was reminiscent of early spring.

Ralph H. Dunbar has arrived here from Augusta, Me., and this morning took up the duties of his new position as cashier of the Windham County National bank.

It has been noted as a matter of local interest that the town of Killingly has obtained the registration number 10,000 for the truck it owns at the town farm.

See display sale adv. of Keech Dep't. store elsewhere in this issue.—adv.

James Cobb, held in default of $10,000 bail on a kidnaping charge, at the county jail in Brooklyn, will be presented in the town court for a hearing Monday morning.

Walter Lis, injured in an automobile accident the past week end and since a patient at the Rhode Island hospital in Providence, is reported as improving.

Borough Hall building, Water St., for sale. Apply to Danielson Bottling Works. Tel. 335-2.—adv.

Some of Killingly's sportsmen spent this day fishing through the ice on ponds in nearby territory, and incidentally they had 1930 licenses.

Thousands of calendars were put out here just prior to the holiday by banks and business concerns, some of them expensive and many of them very attractive.

CENTRAL VILLAGE

FEW LOCAL CASES ON SHORT CALENDAR LIST

(Special to The Bulletin)

PUTNAM, Jan. 2.—In an announcement today Curtis N. Dean of the superior court said that court will convene at Willimantic on January 10 when a short calendar session will be held. Judge Edward M. Yeomans, of Danbury, will preside. Only a few cases of local interest are contained on the trial list.

A questionaire prepared by Dr. Karl T. Phillips provided novel entertainment for the members at the weekly session of the Putnam Rotary club held at noon today. Each member was interrogated as to bits of his life history. The idea has been used before at the social sessions of the Rotary gatherings when the committee have been unable to secure speakers. It is proving to be popular and gaining much favor.

Arthur F. Hughes was named chairman of the committee to make arrangements for the combined meeting of the Putnam and Danielson Rotary clubs which is to be held at the Congregational church in Danielson, on the evening of January 23.

Rotarian Leon F. Farrin reported at the meeting today that much progress has been made in the efforts of the committee appointed to organize a Rotary basketball team. Mr. Farrin stated that further details concerning this movement would be announced at a later date.

At six o'clock Wednesday morning a little girl first saw the light of day that was entering through the windows of the maternity section of the Day Kimball hospital. She was the newly born daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John Cody of Chapman street, and to her goes the honor of being Putnam's New Year's baby. Little Miss 1930 tipped the scale at 8 pounds and according to a report from the hospital this morning the mother and daughter are doing nicely. Besides being the first baby of the year, Mistress Cody will receive from the management of the Putnam Furniture company a basinet fully equipped.

At the hospital, 12 hours later, another daughter came into the world amid the joyous revelry accorded the new year. Her parents are Mr. and Mrs. Francis Norton, of Pomfret. The hospital officials said this morning that Mrs. Norton and her daughter are as well as can be expected.

Unmindful of the fact that the Connecticut company had discontinued service between Putnam and North Grosvenordale the previous evening, several residents of Danielson and way stations were confronted with the problem of how to reach home Wednesday night after the last coach left this city at 10:45 o'clock. The last bus leaving this city will leave its terminal at the railroad station direct for Danielson. Previous to the removing of the North Grosvenordale run the 10:45 bus remained in this city until after the close of theatres to accommodate patrons living in Thompson and points between. Generally the coach returned to Putnam a few minutes before eleven o'clock and began its final trip of the day at the 11th hour. Residents of Danielson, thinking that something unforseen had befallen the last bus, waited until a few minutes before midnight Wednesday before they were aware that they were stranded and must find other and more expensive means of reaching home.

Terence J. McGarry returned to his studies at the General Electric school in Lynn, Mass., today, after spending a holiday recess at his home on Grove street.

The funeral of Erwin E. Robbins, retired business man who died at his home Monday, was held this afternoon with a service at his late home on Main street. Rev. James F. English, pastor of the Congregational church, officiated. The funeral was largely attended by representatives of fraternal organizations with which Mr. Robbins was associated and many of his former business associates. The floral remembrances were numerous and very beautiful. Burial was in the Eastford cemetery in the town of Mr. Robbins birth. Rev. Mr. English officiated at a committal service at the grave. The bearers were R. E. Thurston, George Lewis, Jr., S. E. Watson, of the Putnam Lodge of Elks; E. N. Fisher, of Putnam; Emery Munyan, of Worcester, and Fred Ashton, of Chepatchet.

A meeting of the Northeastern Fish and Game club was held Thursday evening at Odd Fellows hall. The gathering was featured by discussions pertaining to new game laws. Delegates were selected to represent the local club at the Connecticut convention of fish and game societies to be held this month.

Miss Rachel Todd, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Charles H. Todd, of North Woodstock, was married on New Year's day to Lorio Bodo, son of Mr. and Mrs. Louis Bodo of Walnut street, at the rectory of St. Mary's church.

Several of the city's industrial plants which have been closed for the past few days because of inventory proceedings, resumed operations this morning.

Thursday proved to be the mildest day of the winter season to date. The mercury rose to an unusually high mark of 54 at noon today, remaining at this mark until a late hour this afternoon, smashing ice dealers' dreams of an early season harvest. Water two inches deep formed on the ponds this morning after a six-hour fog had cleared away.

At the request of Cashier Arthur E. Smith, of the Citizens National bank of this city is published the names of Alfred L. Bonin and Edward H. Burt, directors of the bank admitted to directorship at a recent meeting. In the advertisement of the bank which appeared in the financial section of The Bulletin on January 1, the names of Mr. Bonin and Mr. Burt were omitted from the list of directors, through an oversight.

Alfred L. Bonneville, collector of town taxes, has recovered from a recent surgical operations and has resumed his duties as collector of the town tax revenue.

James M. Tatem of the City Taxi company, was host at a dinner served in honor of his drivers on Wednesday, shortly after the arrival of the New Year. The dinner was served at Mr. Tatem's home on Center street, and was attended by every employe of the concern.

BIG FREIGHT ENGINE LEAVES TRACKS AT SIDING

Engine 3600, one of the New Haven road's big 300-ton freighters, was derailed early this evening at the south end of the depot siding. The Midway wrecking crew arrived at 9 o'clock to undertake the job of getting the great machine back on the iron. The main line was clear for regular night traffic and the State of Maine express, due here shortly after midnight.

FIRST FIRE OF THE YEAR A BLAZE IN A FORD CAR

Engine No. 1 and Chemical No. 1 responded to an alarm from Box 14, on Postoffice square, at 1:20 Thursday afternoon, for the first fire of the year. A Ford automobile, owned by Roland Royer of Bedford, N. H., parked in front of the Malek hotel, was discovered to be burning briskly on the inside, thought to have been ignited when a match thrown in the gutter caught a gasoline leak. Effective use of a chemical extinguisher secured from J. B. LeClaire's store in the Anthony block, had the blaze nearly out when the firemen arrived. A chemical tank from the truck finished the job. The inside of the machine was ruined and the top partly burned. After all was over, the Ford's motor responded to the spark, running as though there had been no trouble.

TWO LETTER CARRIERS INAUGURATE SERVICE

City carrier service began at the local postoffice Thursday morning, with Leo Gilbert and Dennis Sullivan, the regular appointees to cover the two routes. There will be two deliveries on each of 306 days during the year. Postmaster Crumb said this morning that the carrier delivery began under the serious handicap of there being no suitable cases for the separations which the carriers must complete before leaving the office. On account of there being only one carrier contemplated at first, the equipment is incomplete. When the service is moving properly, the two trips will begin at 8:30 a. m. and 1 p. m. In view of the fact that the carriers names are Gilbert and Sullivan, some sort of a musical accompaniment is forecasted for the daily trips. Maybe selections from the famous opera of Pinafore.

A larger gallery than usual Thursday, it being a spring-like day, was on the construction job, to watch the pouring which began Thursday morning at the big north abutment for the new viaduct. This piece of construction will be the start, from the borough end, for the steel trustees, which will span the dozen or more piers, as the bridge is carried over Pachaug river at two different points, also above the New Haven railroad tracks, and across the low lands in the rear of Mrs. Nellie Leonard's property. Work will not hold up on the pouring, day or night, until the big mould is filled with a couple of dozen carloads of stone, sand and cement. Some of the wise ones on the self-appointed advisory board, were learning Thursday, that their plans for the big contract, were evidently not considered. This applies to three particulars. Some said the big crane shovels could do nothing with the flint-like river bed, but the big tractors ran around in the stream, anywhere, like military tanks, and scooped out the pits for the pier anchorages.

Others declared that the mixed cement for the Quinebaug forms would be run out on a wire overhead carrier, with a bucket attachment. Such predictions were away off, the river men built a long bridge, and ran out the great duplex lift and mixer, right to each pier, where gravity did the job from the top of the 60 foot elevator mast. Again, it was declared by a few of the gifted ones, that all work on the rear of Supt. W. A. Richardson's home, extending to the river, was to be a "fill," as it would be cheaper. "Us boys," were left again, for today the largest abutment in the whole contract is being constructed right there, and there are to be two land piers, immediately south of it.

The officers of the A. A. Young Jr. Hose and Ladder Co., chosen for 1930, are: Chief, Walter A. Field; first assistant, Theodore Boule; second assistant, John W. Blake; secretary, Lionel E. Boucher; treasurer, Clovis Camvant; steward and property custodian, Edmond Bryant. An unanimous vote of thanks was passed to Mrs. Michael Sheehan, in recognition of her forethought in furnishing hot coffee to the firemen, at the Arabek block fire, on the morning of Dec. 5. The committee appointed for the firemen's ball includes: Chief Field, James Morey, Leslie Hyde, Charles Saunders. It is planned to hold the ball in January at the Community house in Plainfield.

WEDDING

Bessette-Turcotte

Ulderic Bessette, of Plainfield and Miss Irene Turcotte, of Jewett City, were married at St. Mary's church and the morning of Dec. 30th. Rev. John J. McCabe celebrated the nuptial high mass. The best man was Leonard Bessette, and the maid of honor Miss Lillian LaChappelle. The bride was gowned in white crepe with bead and lace trimmings. She wore a veil and carried an arm bouquet of roses and white chrysanthemums. The dress of the maid of honor was Nile green crepe with satin finish and trimmed in lace. Her bonnet style hat was of tinted maline to match. She carried pink carnations. A breakfast was served the guests at the bride's home on Carely avenue. Mr. and Mrs. Bessette are away on a honeymoon trip which will take them to Holyoke, Mass., Manchester, N. H., and other points in the Granite state. They will be given a reception on their return, Saturday. Their home will be on Carely avenue.

EPISCOPAL CHURCH PLANS EPIPHANY SERVICE

The Epiphany will be celebrated at St. Paul's Episcopal church, Plainfield, by the service of lights Monday night, January 6, at 7:30. This festival of the church, in commemoration of the visit of the magi to Bethlehem, is often called "the feast of lights." The word Epiphany implies a glorious shining. At the close of Monday night's service, the choir will march out carrying lighted candles and singing one of the beautiful Epiphany hymns. The service will include much festival singing. St. Paul's rector and people hope to welcome at the service many from other churches.

EXTRACTING MOTOR TAXES

Down in the District of Columbia the automobile owners have been subjected to much the same injustice and discrimination that has prevailed in Connecticut concerning the issuance of markers. They are required to stand in line until it is possible to get to a window where they can pay their tax and obtain their registration. It may be for a long or for a short time, but it is tedious and expensive. Even the privilege of getting the markers by mail is not permitted.

In this state it has been possible to use the mail for such purposes and this year an added inducement has been given through the removal of the requirement that all such applications must be sworn to before a notary. This has resulted in a larger use of the postal service and in all probability another year will see the number of registrations obtained in that manner greatly increased.

Standing in line is still the experience of a great many auto owners who have not realized that they can use the mail, or who have waited so long that they realized they could not get their markers returned before the first of the year. Pictures in New Haven show the applicants in line far down the sidewalk from the branch office of the motor vehicle department and that would have been the situation had a blizzard been raging. Perhaps another year some of these will get Uncle Sam's help, but it can be appreciated that much of this congestion is created by the fact that all applicants in that district, if they do not use the mail, must go to the New Haven branch and that means putting upon that branch's force the business which could be handled with far greater accommodation to all concerned if there were branch offices in every city of the state.

Washington is kicking because more consideration is not shown to the motor vehicle tax payers. It is a proper kick. There is no discrimination, however, in the District of Columbia, for all are treated alike, but it has always been the practice in Connecticut to discriminate in the establishment of branch offices and unless a greater use is made of the mail privilege or all cities are given branch offices it is bound to continue.

THE BOY WITH A GUN

It was a fine Christmas present when Newport parents gave their 13-year-old son a .22-calibre repeating rifle. Evidently they thought he was old enough to handle firearms and possessed the judgment that should be exercised in the use of it. Perhaps they thought that the birds and the neighbors' cats would make fine targets for the bullets, but we doubt if they anticipated that their housekeeper would be the first victim of his skill.

That youngster had no idea of killing anybody, least of all the housekeeper, but a deadly weapon was put into his hands to use as a plaything and it was in such a use of it that human life was taken. He was apparently given this gun without any such instructions as to never point it at another person, one of the first things that should be impressed upon a boy even though the weapon is no more than an air rifle. Also it would appear that he had never heard of making sure that it was not loaded, for he playfully proceeded to "hold up" the housekeeper and actually snapped the trigger of a gun which proved to be loaded.

That lad in all probability will do no more shooting. He will find himself minus a repeating rifle and he will get some golden advice as to the use of such a weapon before he is permitted to touch one again.

But that is all too late. It is quite apparent from what has happened that either he never got any warning against fooling with the gun or a misuse of it, or else his disregard of such instructions plainly indicates that he never should have been permitted to have a rifle.

Death-dealing weapons should not, most certainly, be used as playthings. It is a matter of too frequent occurrence that lives are taken because of gross carelessness in the use of them or in leaving them about where children can get them to play with. It has been demonstrated so many times that this Newport fatality was not necessary to direct attention to it, but it will be repeated periodically in the future, nevertheless, because of the failure to deny deadly weapons to those who do not stop to realize the great danger involved in their use.

THAT SALARY GRAB

Even though it is backed by the claim of legality, New York is disturbed by the increase which has been voted in the salary of certain of its officials.

While there may be a difference of opinion as to whether increases were justified there is a strong feeling that they never should have been obtained in the manner that was used. Even those who gave their full support to the Walker candidacy are open in their criticism of the action that has been taken. And it is because of the method that has been employed.

It is a sorry position which those who backed the Tammany ticket, those who stayed away from the polls and those who gave their votes to the socialist candidate when it was known he had no chance, find themselves in under the existing circumstances. They were all prepared to see Tammany remain in control because they figured no one could defeat the democratic candidate and now, right on the threshold of a four-year term, or in fact before that term was opened, they find the officials putting their hands into the city funds for whatever they want salarywise.

It is pointed out that it was not included in the budget estimates. But what does that amount to! The salary increase was not included in the budget because it would have operated to the benefit of any successful officials and there was a possibility that someone else might be elected. Thus, they waited until it was determined that they were successful and then they proceeded to boost their own pay.

Even though it might be possible to show that the jobs should command as much as they will get, it is the manner in which it was done that rankles. To those in control the method makes no difference. They simply had to make a grab bag of the treasury and they had to work fast. While they claim to be within the law, it is thrown back at them that it is not morally right. But what care they for such a fickle thing! To them it is simply a question of how you look at it. They have looked after themselves first and the city has gotten a first class demonstration of what may be expected in the way of Tammany practice during the second Walker administration. New York invited it and provided the opportunity, so New York has no one to blame but itself.

JUDGE AYLING'S ANNIVERSARY

It is a pleasure to salute Judge Nelson J. Ayling upon the completion of 25 years of service as the head of the Norwich probate court. It is perfectly evident that such a term has been possible because of the high character of the service that has been rendered. He has been a good judge and it has been appreciated.

Judge Ayling long since established the fact that he is the right man for that office, and recognition has been given to it by the manner in which the office has been virtually taken out of politics through the repeated nominations given him by both political parties.

Backed by his long training, by his experience in office, by his demonstrated ability and his grasp of the relationship existing between the court and those having business before it, he has been found invaluable in administrating the duties of this court before which most everyone has business at some time or other. His record in the office is an enviable one. During his judgeship marked changes have taken place and much additional work has been imposed upon the court but always with the same successful administration.

Congratulations can be expected to flow from all parts of the Norwich probate district on this anniversary occasion and it is to be sincerely hoped that the genial and efficient judge will be permitted to double his term of service in that office.

CHANGING THE CALENDAR

As the result of an investigation and recommendation, it has been established that there is quite a strong sentiment in behalf of changing the calendar so that there will be 13 instead of 12 months in the year. Under such a plan there would be a uniformity of the months, instead of the varied lengths at present.

The demand for the change has come chiefly from business houses, those who are desirous of making comparisons with months of previous years, but find under the present arrangements that the same month in different years may have four or five Saturdays, as the case may be, so that comparisons are not always what might be thought. It has just been announced by a large chain store company that it has adopted the new calendar for its business this year. This is in keeping with action which had previously been taken by others and it is expected that they will be enabled to make more definite and accurate comparisons.

In making such a change there is no disturbance of the present calendar except so far as the business of that concern is involved. It doesn't mean that birthdays are going to be thrown from the present month into some other or that there is going to be a jumble of dates now fixed in the mind. The year will be just as long and just as short.

There is no good reason why business houses cannot keep their books according to any calendar arrangement that suits them if it is to their advantage. Getting the necessary approval for putting such a calendar into effect is certain to be a different thing, something that involves more than business houses and more countries than this. There is involved in it, nevertheless, no small degree of publicity and discussion and they can be expected to be much in prominence as the agitation in behalf of a calendar change is urged through such efforts as are made for it in this country and in international conferences.

Habit makes it easier to write it 1929 than 1930.

The man on the corner says: Some people complain even though the year is new.

While so many are turning over a new leaf, the line-a-dayer is turning back and starting all over again.

In his effort to increase the speed of an airplane to 2,000 miles an hour the European inventor might do better first of all by making it safe.

In a Tucson, Arizona, paper appears a two-column editorial deploring the failure to run down a murderer. The two columns bordered in black are blank with the exception of the heading and three lines in the center but it attracts more attention and readers than if the whole space had been filled with an extended and critical editorial.

CUPID COMES OVER THEM.

"I always thought," said the elder Mr. Weller, "that the names of Veller and gammon could never come in contact, Sammy—never."

"Always exceptin' the case of a widder, of course," said Sam.

"Widders, Sammy," replied Mr. Weller, slightly changing color, "widders are 'ceptions to every rule. I have heerd how many or'nary women one widder's equal to, in point o' comin' over you. I think it's five-and-twenty."

Professor Penn laid down his thumbed copy of the "Pickwick Papers" without his customary chuckle. The elder Mr. Weller, he thought, must have known less about widows than he pretended. Take Mrs. Hay, now. She'd never think of coming over any one. Doves didn't come over serpents. Mrs. Hay—ah, here she was, as a tap on the door announced his dinner.

"What is it?" asked Mrs. Hay.

"What's what?" replied the professor.

"You were staring at me so strangely," said Mrs. Hay. "I thought—"

"Oh," said the professor, with a slight blush. "I was just thinking Mr. Weller didn't know much about widows."

"About widows?"

"Mr. Weller, said the professor, "thinks widows come over people. Of course," he hastened to add, "I think it's just the other way around."

"Oh," sighed Mrs. Hay, "if you only knew the schemes—the tricks"—and her tone made the professor see packs of wolves slinking from the financial jungles to rend an unprotected landlady's bankroll.

"Shunned?" stammered the professor. "Why, I—I like widows — some widows, I mean—er—that is——"

Here the professor despairingly seized knife and fork and began on his lamb chop, while Mrs. Hay, once in the corridor, stamped her little foot with a muttered, "Men are worse than horses. You lead a horse to water, but you don't have to shove him in."

"The professor," said Mrs. Hay about an hour later, "is a darling, but he's too meek. He lives more in Ur of the Chaldees than in Chicago of the Yankees. I wouldn't ask you to do this," she assured the brother she had summoned by telephone, "if he wasn't so meek."

"All right then," agreed her brother, a burly person with great respect for his sister's acumen. So presently voices in an adjoining room recalled Prof. Penn from the records of Ur.

"No chance!" said a gruff voice. "You can't come over me for rent I don't owe. I've a good mind to toss the furniture out the window."

"Oh!" in Mrs. Hay's voice. The professor moved to the door.

"Yes, and you after it!" bellowed the belligerent roomer.

"Ooh, ooh!" shrieked Mrs. Hay, and, without quite knowing how, the professor hopped into the room, reached high enough to sock the burly one's ear, and took the widow in his arms.

"There, there," he soothed her, "Everybody tries to fool a widow, but you won't be one long."

For a moment the third party, face crimson and fists clenched, glared at the professor, but a glance from his sister chased him from the room.

"Meek," he mumbled, tenderly feeling his ear. "Meek! Something must have come over sis."—Chicago News.

A Washington Bystander

By KIRKE L. SIMPSON
Associated Press Staff Writer

WASHINGTON Jan. 2.—The only editorial comment allowed to the staid congressional record comes in parenthetical insertions into the subject matter of a speech of such notes as (Laughter), (Applause).

The reader is not even advised whether the applause was ironic, as it frequently is, or the laughter of the horse variety.

Most record readers have the notion that these interjections get in by virtue of the masterly pencil of the speech maker when he cons over his remarks in stenographer's transcript.

Now and then you see a member busy with these editorial duties. Yet there is now testimony that the official stenographers themselves do at times note the reception of a wise crack or a fine, rolling oratorical period.

And sometimes you never do find out how the comment got in. Take the recent case of Representative Huddleston's remarks about Haiti. He said at one point, after remarking that President Borno was put in and kept in power by American bayonets:

"Why, in the wink of an eye, give the Haitians a chance, and they would slash him to pieces. And they would like to do it."

Was It (Applause)?

In the record next day the notation (Applause) followed this. Representative Beedy of Maine, a member of the insular affairs committee and a frequet visitor to Haiti in that capacity, took unkindly to that.

Next day he called for correction of the record and the striking out of that (Applause).

"I find upon consultation with the reporters of debates that in their notes the word ((Applause) does not appear in this particular place," he told the house.

"On the ground that it will put the house in an embarrassing position to have it go to Haiti that this body applauded a statement that there was a desire to cut the President of Haiti to pieces, I ask that the record be corrected by striking it out."

Stricken Out

So the (Applause) went out, but only after Speaker Longworth, commenting on the strength of "some 25 years experience in the house" had expressed his confidence that the reporters never would insert the word unless applause actually occurred

"By what authority do they ever insert the word (Applause) or (Laughter)? Representative Underhill demanded.

"Only when it actually occurs upon the floor," said the speaker. "It is part of the proceedings of the house. If gentlemen insert the word (Applause), they do it on their own discretion and with very great lack of good taste, the chair may say."

And right there the record commented: (Applause).

"I thing it is a bad practice to put it in, anyway," Representative Underhill said.

A day or so later Beedy made a speech on Haiti in answer to Huddleston.

Examination shows four or five (Applause) notations in the record in the course of that speech.

Stories That Recall Others

In Doubt

It had been a great Christmas. All the children had been home. Everybody pronounced the dinner perfect. After a day of excitement father and mother found themselves alone. Then the head of the house said: "My dear, I have never been able to decide which is the worst, Christmas or housecleaning."

A Good Reason

About this season, results of end-of-the-semester examinations are being compiled. Each bunch of test papers usually contains some humorous answers that sometimes are discouraging to the teacher, who seriously wonders just what she must have taught to bring forth a few of the answers received.

A question asked on one examination in one of the grades was: "Why do we chew our food?"

YOUR HEALTH

Prevention Means Escape.

By W. Raymond McKenzie, M. D., Baltimore, Md.
(From Gorgas Memorial Institute)

Doctors are often confronted by this query from patients: "How is it that our parents or grandparents did not have all this trouble with their tonsils? No one ever heard of these things years ago."

Yes they did, but in those days neuritis, rheumatism, heart and kidney maladies, ulcers of the stomach and some forms of blindness or deafness, were considered visitations of Providence, and were more or less taken for granted as inevitable. Now we know that they are preventable because we can trace their causes.

Rheumatism is rapidly passing the way of other preventable diseases, due largely to the removal of tonsils and adenoids from young children during the past few years. This decline has been so marked that many prominent medical authors and teachers have written about it and produced hospital records to substantiate their conclusions. In a recent article reporting a series of 20,000 children who had their tonsils and adenoids removed and 28,000 children who were not operated on, the author concludes that the child without tonsils has a decidedly better chance to escape rheumatic infection than the child who still has tonsils. Heart complications are very common following rheumatism, and this article shows that in 33 per cent the condition developed before operation as against 17 per cent after operation. Scarlet fever occurred in 7.6 per cent of operated children as against 16 per cent of un-operated children. Children without tonsils have less tendency to develop heart disease after scarlet fever. This article definitely shows that the tonsil is a factor in the causation of rheumatism, scarlet fever and chronic heart disease, and that the child with tonsils removed is assured greater protection against these infections than the child whose tonsils have not been removed.

What is true in children is equally true in adults. It is unnecessary for you to suffer with neuritis, or rheumatism or other general diseases, which we now know are due to focal infection. If the focus can be found and eliminated, you can be relieved or cured and your life not only greatly lengthened but made more comfortable and more productive. One of the most important factors in the relief and cure of these focal infections is the early diagnosis, so that serious and dangerous complications may be avoided. As the disease becomes chronic the chances of a complete cure diminish. Almost all of the acute cases get entirely well; most of the subacute ones get well or are greatly relieved; a much smaller per cent of the chronic cases get well or are relieved. You probably have heard the story that tonsil operations on adults are very dangerous. There is not one particle more danger for an adult than for a child. An older person may not feel as good as the child for the first few days after the operation because his recuperative powers are not so good. Yet tonsil operations are major operations and should not be considered lightly or as being a minor procedure. They should be performed by a competent specialist, thoroughly trained in his work.

Now just a few more words in closing. If you are suffering from frequent colds, recurrent attacks of sore throats and tonsilitis, body or joint pains, heart, kidney or stomach trouble, eye or ear disease, consult your family doctor and let him advise you.

Make the inspection of your tonsils a regular part of your annual health examination.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Ring the Bells

Mr. Editor: Thursday, Jan. 16, is the birthday of prohibition. We believe that on that day all the church bells in the nation should ring ten minutes at 12 o'clock, noon, to celebrate the event. It is fitting and proper that we should do that. July 4, 1776, the Liberty bell rang out glad tidings of liberty and independence from English oppression. It is just the same today. The American people have asserted their liberty and independence from the oppression of the liquor traffic. Prohibition is the dominant factor of the peace, prosperity and happiness of the people of this nation today and will eventually lead to the happiness of all the people of the world. Celebrate it by ringing the bells.

BURGESS BEDTIME STORY

Chatterer Is Filled With Joy.

Greed is selfish and unfair;
What it gets it will not share.
—Old Mother Nature.

Chatterer the Red Squirrel was a happy Squirrel. He was so. He was so happy that he wanted to tell everybody how happy he was. But he didn't. No, sir, he didn't. For once he kept his tongue still. And for Chatterer to keep his tongue still is quite remarkable. He kept his tongue still because he didn't want anybody to know where he was. He was on the roof of Farmer Brown's corn crib.

Now, Chatterer had long wanted to get into that corn crib and had had no chance. He couldn't climb up stone posts and that corn crib was set on stone posts. Furthermore, on the top of each post was an inverted big tin pan. So, even had he been able to climb one of the posts, he would have been stopped by the pan. But now he was on the roof and he intended to be inside in a very short time. He had reached the roof by means of a clothesline which had been fastened from a corner of the corn crib to a clothespost.

Chatterer can move quickly, as you well know. The way he darted around on the roof of that corn crib would have told you without words that he was very much excited. Presently he leaned over the edge of the roof near one corner. Peering under the edge he discovered that the space between two boards on that side was almost wide enough for him to get through. A little gnawing would make it wide enough. You know corn cribs are built with spaces between the boards, so that air can circulate through to dry the corn.

Chatterer hung on by his hindfeet and swung himself in until he could get hold with his hands. Then he let go with his hindfeet. His sharp teeth got to work at once. It didn't take him long to gnaw a place just big enough for him to slip through. How Chatterer's eyes sparkled once he was inside that corn crib! Here was food enough for all the Squirrels in the world. Anyway, that's the way he felt.

"And it's all mine!" exulted Chatterer. "Yes, sir, it's all mine!" And he really felt that it was all his. Perhaps you think that funny, but it wasn't. You, see, the little people of the Green Forest and the Green Meadows are quite used to feeling that anything they find belongs to them, if they can take possession of it. Chatterer felt that in getting into the corn crib he had taken possession of it and so the corn belonged to him. He knew, however, that he wouldn't have possession of it very long if Farmer Brown or Farmer Brown's Boy should find him there. So he took great care not to show himself.

That morning he was satisfied to stuff himself after he had explored the inside of the corn crib. Then he went out the way he had come in, ran down the side and simply jumped down to the ground and scurried back to the Old Orchard. Chatterer was full of joy and corn. His eyes snapped as he thought of the feasts he would have all winter. He meant to keep it a secret.

"I won't tell anybody," said Chatterer to himself. "No, sir, I won't tell anybody. Whenever I'm hungry I'll just go over and help myself to what I want and no one will be any the wiser. Some folks are not so smart as they think they are. Farmer Brown and Farmer Brown's Boy built that corn crib so that I couldn't get into it. Then they made a bridge for me." Chatterer chuckled as he thought this. Of course, by that bridge he meant the clothesline from the post to the corner of the corn crib.

Neurasthenia

I've tried everything for these nerves of mine
From auto-suggestions to pills;
But I find they remain, and set just the same,
Along with my various ills.

The least little thing puts them all out of tune
And leaves me wrought up for the day;
While excitement, I find, takes them right off my mind,
In a most unusual way.

I've read all the books by the learned M. D.'s,
With their helpful suggestions galore;
And I've tried breathing deep, also plenty of sleep,
But alas! they remain as before.

I've tried going out and I've tried staying in—
I've already spent most of my pelf;
But my good friends agree, when, they all look at me,
That I'm thinking too much of myself.

FORMER C. V. RAILROADER GIVEN CANADIAN POST

(Special to The Bulletin)

MONTREAL, Jan. 2.—Announcement was made at the Canadian National railways headquarters today of the appointment of Robert L. Burnap, a railroader of long experience on the American side of the line, as vice-president in charge of traffic, succeeding A. T. Weldon. The appointment is effective at once.

A native of Burlington, Vt., R. L. Burnap was educated in the public schools of that city and later attended Dartmouth. After his graduation from that university, he found his first railroad job with the chief traffic artery of his native state, the Central Vermont. This was in December, 1895. Throughout his railroad career, covering a span of 36 years, Mr. Burnap has been identified with lines that now form a part of the Canadian National railways system. After filling a succession of posts in the Central Vermont which brought him into contact with prominent commercial men at New London, Conn., St. Albans, Vt., Ogdensburg, N. Y., and New York city, he was made general freight agent of the Granite State lines in August, 1906, and later was moved to Chicago as assistant general freight agent of the Grand Trunk system.

He progressed steadily in the Grand Trunk service, becoming first traffic manager at Chicago on March 1, 1920. In November, 1927, the management of the Canadian National railways brought Mr. Burnap to Montreal to fill two jobs, assistant general freight traffic manager of the Central Vermont, both of which positions he held up to the time of his present appointment of vice-president. During his long term of service with the Grand Trunk, Mr. Burnap made a great many friends throughout the middle west and his connection with the Central Vermont served to make him widely known throughout New England.

FORECLOSURE SUITS IN SUPERIOR COURT BUSINESS

Three different foreclosure suits have been brought in the superior court by the Eastern Connecticut Bond & Mortgage Co. of this city, according to papers filed here Thursday with Court Clerk John H. Walker. The first is against Sidney R. and Ellen V. Bogue of Stonington for foreclosure of a mortgage for $486.40, dated Sept. 17, 1928, on property in Stonington on which Savings Bank of New London claims a mortgage for $800. Another is against Ernest Watrous on property in that town on a mortgage for $2,040. The Savings Bank of New London claims two mortgages for $2,000 each and Raymond & Alexander Lumber Co. claims a mortgage for $1,606.49. There is also a suit against Fred B. and Florence E. White, both of Waterford, and Milton D. Biesecker of New London on a mortgage for $680 on property in Waterford. In a small Siberian village, a proposal was made to convert the church into a storehouse for grain. A number of the older peasants opposed this and finally chose old Ivan Petrovich to go to Moscow to protest against this plan. He set out on foot but it so happened that he met a Communist aviator who said he would carry him to Moscow and back in his plane. Ivan Petrovich soon returned to his village. Surprised, his friends asked him how he had returned so quickly and why? Ivan answered solemnly: "I went right up to heaven, and they are right, these young ones. There is no God. There is nothing but empty space. Let them take the church for a warehouse."

SNATCHES FROM CAMP LIFE AT WINTER SCOUT CAMP

Camp Pioneer,
Winsted, Conn.

Dear Jim:

You know how much fun summer camp is, well it isn't a patch on winter camp. Last Thursday when we left Norwich, the roads were clear and we thought we wouldn't need our chains; well, when we got on the road to camp we were glad we had a pair.

It was pretty near dinner time when we got there—and did we eat! Then came a hunt—for something to sleep on, everybody took his iron cot and put it where it would fit in best, and mine came right over the register. Didn't the heat from the stove feel good some mornings!

Amos and Andy Adams were our radio stars; Amcis Lenox and Art Adams had a heated discussion about Madame Queen, it was called a draw. Sandy and Mr. Sellman were camp directors and cooks.

Skating and skiing were our chief sports—I forgot chess. The latter came under indoor entertainments so that was why I left it till last. Chester sure can play hockey, his team, the "piano movers" and Jack Welch's "the piano tuners," the same names were used because if one team lost the piano business would still go on.

Sandy brought us over to Camp Sesquasum, that is pronounced like "we'll squash-um." They were New Haven Boy Scouts, staying for the same time that we were.

Tuesday night we went to Winsted and saw the Marx Bros. in "The Cocoanuts." Back to the cottage we welcomed the New Year with a salute, both from our toy cannon and our scout sign.

I will close wishing you were here with us and also a Happy New Year.

Your Chum,
NICK.

(Camp as Life Scout Edward Lichenstein of Troop Six saw it).

Some of the high spots in the winter camp were the hockey games, the campfires, the games in the woods, and the craftwork. The scouts on the first day were divided into two teams. These were called the "Piano Tuners" and the "Piano Movers." The two teams had many exciting hockey games from which the Piano Tuners usually came out victors. The lake was perfect and the ice smooth and thick. At the campfires, stunts, songs and pop corn popping were indulged in. On the first night, the Piano Tuners entertained the Piano Movers with stunts, and the next night the Piano Movers entertained with a play. We visited the New Haven Scout camp and had a wonderful time. Sunday, religious services were held in camp for those who did not go in to church. Monday, we worked on craftwork. Some of the fellows made pocketbooks, some made axe sheaths, others made belts. I made a model bridge and Nick made a model raft. On Tuesday, Chief Hill came out and took moving pictures of us.

Dec. 26th—Awoke at 7 o'clock and made beds and got breakfast. At about 12:00 o'clock the scouts arrived from Hartford and at about 1:00, the scouts from Norwich arrived. We played games.

Dec. 27—Had leathercraft work today. Played a game of hockey in the afternoon. At night, had a big entertainment.

Dec. 28—Hockey, skiing, scoutcraft, and hockey again. At night, we told stories around the fire.

Dec. 29—Religious services. Chicken dinner. Scoutcraft and hockey.

Dec. 30—Skated around the lake. Made skating rink of tennis court. Had a night game of hockey with flash lights.

Dec. 31—Hockey, Siberian man hunt. Saw the New Year in. Stayed up until after twelve and then to bed for the last together.

Jan. 1.—Rolled up our packs and got ready to leave. Played hockey. After dinner we put our bundles in the car and were soon started for Norwich, all hoping to return next year.

SEVEN TOWNS OWED COUNTY $49,747.91 AT END OF THE CURRENT FISCAL YEAR

Seven towns of the 21 in New London county owed the county $49,747.91 in county tax at the end of the fiscal year, Sept. 30, 1929, according to the annual report of the county commissioners, George H. Bradford of Montville, Charles H. Smith of Noank and Elisha Waterman of Lebanon. With the $75,252.09, which had been paid to the county commissioners, the sum that was owed makes up the county tax of $125,000.

The seven towns named in the report and the amount they owed were as follows: Ledyard $563.45; Bozrah $515.85; North Stonington $672.41; Voluntown $410.62; New London $42,045.60; Old Lyme $1,649.37; Griswold $898.57.

Receipts at the county jails in the year were $15,219.21, which included $1,384.12 from the earnings of prisoners. The jail expenses were $18,221.87.

Other expenses included $3,870 at the court house, $27,175.13 on account of the county home, $5,704.92 in salaries, and the balance in miscellaneous expenses to make up total expenses of $89,218.75.

When the year opened there was a balance of $133,195.31 carried over from the preceding year and when the year closed there was a balance of $175,948.20 to carry over.

QUARTER CENTURY AS NORWICH PROBATE JUDGE

New Year's day marked the 25th anniversary of Judge Nelson J. Ayling as judge of the Norwich probate district which is the largest in this part of the state and includes the towns of Norwich, Griswold, Preston, Lisbon, Franklin, Sprague and Voluntown. At times when vacancies have existed, Judge Ayling has been called upon and has acted as judge of probate for the towns of Montville, North Stonington, Bozrah and Willimantic.

His record of service in the position has been one of demonstrated adaptability to the exacting requirements of the office where tact, human sympathy, and a large measure of common sense are indispensible requisites in settling the difficult questions that come before the court. Those who know Judge Ayling recognize his special endowment in the qualities that contribute to the successful administration of the office.

While he has been in office there has been an average of about 240 cases annually before him, the total docket in the 25 years showing 6,110 cases, and in that time only about 13 appeals have been taken to the superior court and only one has reached the supreme court of errors. In his decisions on will cases all have been settled or decided in his favor.

Before becoming probate judge on Jan. 1, 1905, in which he succeeded the late George E. Parsons, when he became clerk of the superior court, Judge Ayling had been clerk of the Norwich police court for two years and for four years was prosecuting attorney of the court.

Judge Ayling has been a student of the working of the probate courts and of probate law and has made his office and practice conform in every respect with modern methods. At the annual meetings of the probate judges association of the state he has been an earnest and largely successful advocate of standardization of the application of the probate laws of the state, of ways and means of management and of probate court procedure.

Politically, like his father, Judge Ayling supports the republican party, but that honest service has been appreciated by both parties is clearly shown in the elections of the last quarter of a century when he has been opposed but rarely for re-election.

In November, 1902, he was elected to the Connecticut senate from this district, where he served as chairman of three important committees, agriculture, rules and amendments and rendered valuable service. Since becoming judge of probate he has not taken such an active part in political campaigns.

BOY SCOUT BADGE IN PIONEERING

One of the merit badges engaging the attention of the Boy Scout winter campers at Camp Pioneer was that of pioneering. To obtain this badge a scout must:

Sour stomach, indigestion, gas. These are signs which usually mean just one thing; excess acid. The stomach nerves have been over-stimulated. Too much acid is making food sour in the stomach and intestines.

The way to correct excess acid is with an alkali. The best form of alkali for this purpose is Phillips Milk of Magnesia. Just take a spoonful of this harmless, almost tasteless preparation in a glass of water. It works instantly. The stomach becomes sweet. You are happy again in five minutes! Your heartburn, gas, headache, biliousness or indigestion has vanished!

Know Phillips Milk of Magnesia and you're through with crude methods forever. It is the pleasant way—the efficient way to alkalinize the system; to relieve the effects of over-acidity.

Phillips Milk of Magnesia has been standard with doctors for over 50 years. 25c and 50c bottles at all drug stores. Be sure you get the genuine. "Milk of Magnesia" has been the U. S. Registered trade mark of the Chas. H. Phillips Chemical Co. and its predecessor, Chas. H. Phillips, since 1875.

COMMANDER CHALKER SEARCHING PATROL BOATS

(Special to The Bulletin)

NEW LONDON, Jan. 2—Lieut. Commander Chalker, U. S. Coast Guard, in command at this port has begun a thorough search of the patrol boats and destroyers and cutters to discover whether any liquor taken from the rum runner Black Duck and the Flor Del Mar, captured by the coast guard, had been hidden on the government vessels. The lieutenant-commander is said to have stated that only six cases of the liquor were stolen from the seized crafts, but it is reputed nearly three times as many cases of the liquor were stolen and some of it disposed of for cash. The sailors who are guilty of the theft are in for the severest penalty that can be given them, if their identity becomes known.

Orgie, who is employed by the city, was repairing the surface of Bank street, when an automobile driven by Mildred G. Feeley, of Essex, came along. A stream of water quickly extinguished the fire, but not until the building had been gutted. Investigation revealed that the fire originated from an oil burner becoming overheated.

LAFAYETTE W. STARR WAS FORMER NORWICH RESIDENT

Lafayette W. Starr, 86, former resident of New London, Mystic and Norwich, died today at his residence in Waterford, death ending an illness of many months. NEW YEAR LENIENCY, WOMAN AND SAILORS FREED

Mrs. Ruth Cummings, 34 Cottage street, was in the police court this morning charged with conducting a disorderly house. The police had not provided sufficient evidence to warrant Prosecuting Attorney Max Boyer in trying the case, so the charge was nolled. The charge of frequenting against Jack Easley, Harry Terry, Ervin Graf and George Ruppert, all sailors, were also nolled. Harry Stone, another sailor, however, who was charged with assault, was fined $75 and costs and sentenced to 10 days in jail, but execution of the jail sentence was suspended. The arraignment of the Cummings woman and the sailors was the result of a drinking party at the Cottage street house Sunday night. The liquor, it was claimed by the sailors, was a part of the cargo of the rum-runner Flor Del Mor, which was one of the two rum-runners that were seized by coast guardsmen, off Narragansett bay earlier in the day. After the boats had been docked in this port, a quantity of the liquor was taken to the home of the Cummings woman where much of it was consumed by the gathering, which included besides those arrested, at least two other women and four or five other sailors. About 1:30 o'clock Monday morning a fight was started and during the battle, Stone attacked Ruppert with a bottle, hitting the later across he face. The police were informed of the fight and officers who went to the house arrested Stone. Ruppert's face was badly lacerated and he was sent to Lawrence-Memorial hospital, where he is still a patient, although he was in court today. Easley, Terry and Graf were at the house when the police arrived, but the women, excepting Mrs. Cummings and the other sailors had fled. At 9 o'clock the same day, officers went to the Cummings house and finding Mrs. Cummings, Easley, Terry and Graf arrested them, the woman charged with maintaining a disorderly house and the sailors with being frequenters.

Thomas Cummings, of Tilley street, employed by the Robert Gair Co., Montville, has returned home after spending several days with relatives in Springfield, Mass.

NOANK

THE PUBLIC IS COLD TO THE FIRE COMPANY'S NEEDS

The question has been on everybody's lips in this fishing village "What is the matter with Noank Fire Co.?" At one time it was rated one of the best companiest his side of the Thames river. On the roll were over 70 fire-fighters, there was money in the tin box, they had a drum corps and in their blue suits took many prizes at different fairs, etc., around Mystic and as far away as East Haven, Conn. They have the honor of having Connecticut's smallest smokeeater, Charles Ellis, who, in his red suit, no bigger than a fire lantern, would get a great hand from the crowds that lined the streets in any time. In his room at his home on Pearl street, he has seven loving cups won at different fairs and conventions. These range from a tea cup size to a large cup standing 30 inches high. Also he has different ribbons. For several years not much has been heard about the fishing village fire fighters and people wonder what they are doing. The report has been heard that they are on the rocks—only about 10 belongs to the company now. No longer their famous steward, Ollie Beebe gets up clam chowder that has sent back to Mystic, Stonington or Westerly, smoke-eaters filled to their iron hat-brims with chowder. They would say, "Go to Noank for a haddock, or North Dock fish chowder!" Pinochle games and pool matches with the Hoxie Co. in Mystic for the championship that last all one winter would draw a crowd of 200 or more; but nothing like that is going on today. There is only the building, where a few go over for a game of pinochle, to play with their overcoats on, close to the fire. No more life! It seems a shame—a fire company, but only about 600 feet of hose, they say, with two gallons of gasoline in the tank of the red fire engine and no money to buy more gas.

If a fire should break out on Prospect Hill, they could hardly make it. This leaves the town unguarded. People cannot expect the smoke eaters to buy hose and coal, also gasoline; they give their services for nothing, fight a fire without gloves and raincoats, standing on a ladder or in a room for many hours, in zero weather and will not leave until the fire is out. The smoke eaters often would get the horse laugh from some in the crowd, watching the fire. They would say, "Well, Noank fire company saved the cellar, or the parrot!" The life of a fireman is nothing to laugh about. They lose time, or may get burned, or fall from a ladder. If a fire broke out today, the critics would not call up a cigar store to put out the blaze. They would call loud for the fire company.

When the great fire broke out at the shipyard, in 1924, the firemen fought it, with different companies from out of town, for two days, and for several days after they had men there with the engine. Now Noank is after a fire district; that means city water service. The plan was started over nine months ago, yet Noank is without water. At their last public meeting in the village hall, a paper was read about what the fire company wanted the fire district to take over; but the fire district thought their firemen were asking too much. The matter was put to a vote and the fire district won out by one vote. But a recount was not asked for. That is the way the matter stands.

The firemen of course would not have to go out to answer an alarm unless they wanted to; but they have a heart when any one's house is on fire to do their best to save property. What dues they take in from the members will not pay expenses for the year.

Can the fire company keep this up? The members now are paying to keep up the building and if the fire district gets to running that means a new fire company. Then the old firemen would have to say good bye for ever to their quarters. But when is that fire district going to start? All here hope it will be soon for then Noank will be a real town. A barrel factory from Massachusetts would like to locate here, when the town has running water.

Two men made a bet not long ago; one fellow claims that in two years Noank will have a water supply. His rival claims not for the next six years. He put up $150 against $75 that Noank will not have water until 1937. A betholder has those good American greenbacks. It still looks as though the villagers will have to carry the water pail from the well for a while, until another public meeting is held.

Edward Turner of Boston, Mass., has been a guest several days of Mrs. Sara Shandeor.

Edward Mahoney has returned from New York.

C. R. Williams of Providence was in the village Tuesday.

Robert Lane has returned after a short visit in Providence.

Miss Minnie Palmer of Westerly has been visiting her parents, Capt. and Mrs. Roswell Palmer.

The following officers have been chosen by the Ladies' Aid society of Noank Baptist church for the coming year: President, Mrs. Carrie Fitch; first vice president, Mrs. Minnie Cox; second vice president, Mrs. Stella Rathbun; third vice president, Miss Effie Lamb; secretary, Mrs. Jennie Ashcroft; treasurer, Mrs. Mabel Spicer.

Mrs. John A. Ellis, Miss Sara Ellis and Edmund Ellis have gone to East Greenwich, R. I., where they will spend the winter.

Mrs. Lois Johnston has returned to New York after a visit with her mother, Mrs. Jennie Ashcroft.

Mr. and Mrs. Edward Turner and son have returned to Quincy, Mass., after a visit with Mrs. Sara Shandeor.

Much interest is being taken in the coming basketball game between the local Whirlwinds and the Shamrocks from Mystic. Noank will have the regular lineup starting with Clarke, center; Robertson and Chesebro, forwards, and Buddington, Butson, Marks and Sweet guards.

W. A. Terry of New London was a business caller in the village Tuesday.

George C. Lape was in Boston Tuesday.

ANNOUNCEMENTS

Palace Theatre

Students of Shakespeare, and those who wouldn't know the great dramatist from Adam will both be entranced at the production which Douglas Fairbanks and the Missus (Mary Pickford) are giving at the Palace theater for four days beginning tomorrow in "The Taming of the Shrew." The coming of this picture is a great event, inasmuch as the country has been waiting for it a long time, and inasmuch as the films of it escaped destruction by a narrow margin in the recent conflagration on the coast after Doug and Mary and the rest of the cast had labored long and mightily to make it the perfect little classic that it is.

If you don't know the story of the play from which the picture was made, there's no harm in telling it now. It happens that Katherine, the lovely daughter of the wealthy Baptista Menola is of a hot-headed, shrewish nature. She is good-looking, and will have lots of money when she marries, but she is such a devil and has such a terrific temper that all the boys of Padua are mortally afraid of her. They would as soon marry a wildcat—in fact marriage with a wildcat would have been safer, the way Katherine was accustomed to handling men when she became aroused.

MARY PICKFORD, in "TAMING OF THE SHREW"

Well, anyway, Katherine's father didn't know what to do with her. Gladly would he have seen her married, but he, too, knew her ways and he didn't blame the local shieks a bit for their lack of ardor in courting fair Katherine. Then who should come along but gay young Petruchio, a devil-may-care mustachioed son of Anold, friend of Baptista's. Baptista greets him, and the first thing we know Petruchio wants to marry Katherine. "She has just hurled her music teacher—poor fellow—down a long flight of stairs, by way of exercise."

Fearful of the consequences, old Baptista gives Petruchio his consent, and the young man gets down to work. It's a tough struggle, and for awhile, we don't know who's going to take a beating, but in the end—well, come and see how Doug does it, and how Mary plays the part of the shrew.

Today for the last times the Palace presents "So Long Letty," with Charlotte Greenwood, and "Oh Yeah," starring James Gleason and Robert Armstrong.

Norwich Choral Society Concert

The music lover of Norwich will again be able to enjoy a splendid musical treat owing to the great musical interest of the Norwich Choral society, composed of ninety local singers. The organization will present on Friday evening, at the Slater Memorial hall, under the direction of Allen B. Lambdin of Connecticut college, Hydn's sacred oratorio "Creation." By enlisting the cooperation of a number of local music lovers in joining the Norwich Choral society as associate members, the organization was enabled to secure for Friday's concert three soloists of national repute. The oratoria was carefully rehearsed by our local singers and Mr. Lambdin feels proud of the musical attainment of the Norwich men and women under his direction.

The soloists who will sing at the concert are: Lucia Chagnon, soprano, an American girl with a beautiful voice, charming personality and great musical experience. Miss Chagnon has undergone such a course of intensive training as might have disheartened many of the most stoically determined. As a child she was brought up in a musical and dramatic environment, and at the age of sixteen she made her debut in opera. In 1924, Miss Chagnon became the pupil of the famous Lilli Lehman in Berlin, and in 1927, after having labored under the most rigid Lehman discipline in voice culture, dramatic art, memorizing opera roles, fencing, walking, thinking, and practicing, she was sufficiently equipped to appear before the critical audiences of Europe, who received her with enthusiasm. A final summer with Lehman in 1928 completed her training through every phase of the vocal art, which makes Miss Chagnon one of the finest soprano singers in the United States.

Judson House, tenor, comes from a musical family, both of Mr. House's parents being musical. As a result of which as a youngster he was choir boy at St. Mark's church, Brooklyn, N. Y., as a soloist of the famous New York symphony orchestra under Walter Damrosch. Mr. House at the age of twenty, began his career in a blaze of glory. His continued and brilliant success as a soloist was interrupted only by his service in France with the A. E. F., having the rank of a sergeant major. Mr. House has a voice full of beauty and power which thrills his audiences.

Alexander Kisselburgh, baritone, is truly a great artist. On his appearance at a concert at Carnegie hall, New York, the New York Times made the following comment: "Alexander Kisselburgh made his New York debut at Carnegie hall and held a large audience under the spell of a remarkable voice and personality. He also has a full resonant voice of great power and range. Some of it descended to deep notes of a basso, yet time and again it produced a high, floating tone of which a tenor might have been proud. His diction was excellent. In his interpretation, Kisselburgh showed how flexible his voice could be." In his recital at the white house before President and Mrs. Coolidge and a gathering of dignitaries Mr. Kisselburgh's singing was received with enthusiastic applause, an honor and a privilege extended only to musical artists of real distiction.

Dance Grange Hall

The Norwich Grange will hold another one of their popular dances on Friday night with fine music and a large number is anticipated to be present. Whatever is made from these high class social gatherings will go towards the expenses of their new hall which deserves the support of this community.

After a sleet storm in Portland, Me., which devasted the trees of that city, a scientifically-minded resident performed an experiment. He picked from the ground a broken twig about eight inches long. Ice and all it weighed fourteen ounces. When the ice had melted and the twig dried it barely moved the scales, weighing about an ounce.

The theft of brass from the yard of the Eagle Waste and Metal company on Canal street has at last been solved by the Westerly police. Late Wednesday afternoon Patrolman Charles Button escorted to the Westerly police station a 10-year-old boy. Besides solving the brass mystery, the arrest was the first for 1930 by the Westerly police. Because of the boy's age, his identity was not divulged, but it was hinted that other youngsters may be brought in within the next few days. The police recovered a quantity of the missing brass Wednesday and expect to find the rest of it when more of the juvenile gang have been taken into custody. The disappearance of brass was reported to the police Dec. 19 by the Eagle company.

A social time was then enjoyed, and sandwiches, doughnuts and coffee were served by members of the Friendly league. At 11:30, Rev. Mr. Shepler began the closing service, choosing a selection from the Bible and speaking most interestingly upon the subject. A few minutes before midnight, William Thorpe, who was stationed at the back of the room, sounded "Taps." OVERHEATED MOTOR GETS OUT PUMPER FOR SMOKE

(Special to The Bulletin)

WESTERLY, Jan. 2— "Fire, fire," shouted Katherine McCormick as she smelled smoke and rushed from the Siedner store, 43 Broad street, about 7:20 tonight. On the run, she headed up Cookey hill toward the fire station. Officer Robert M. Kessel passed her, coming down Union street to go on duty. The officer turned and ran after her. At the fire station Chief George E. Egger met the breathless couple and gathered that there was a fire. He turned in Box 56 for Dixon square and Chief Egger, Engineers Bonner and Pasetti and firemen with motor pumpers speeded down the hill to Broad street and a line of booster tank hose was rushed into the shop, upstairs and down, but only smoke and no fire was found. Quickly the line of hose was taken to the Mohican market front door. Porter James H. Collins stood inside. As he opened the door there was more rushing of hose to the basement, where an electric motor connected with the refrigeration plant was found to be red-hot. The burning insulation filled the cellars of both stores with smoke. The current was shut off and the heat and smoke subsided. The recall sounded at 7:50.

THE FARMER'S TALK TO FARMERS

THE DOCTRINE OF HARD KNOCKS.

(Written Specially For The Bulletin)

It may seem a trifle supererogatory—i. e. officously unnecessary—to preach to farmers the doctrine of hard knocks.

Lord knows hard knocks are a regular part of their daily diet. That explains why so many old farmers are bent-backed and crinkly-legged. It also explains why so many young farmers and farmerettes, foreseeing the impossibility of avoiding hard knocks in farm life, seek to exchange it for city jobs. Anything to get away from the weather and the weeds, the bugs and the blights, the constant spankings of Old Step-Mother Nature.

But—let me ask in all sincerity—is the avoidance of hard knocks the main or even a chief end of life? Is it our darling ambition to live lives without struggle and stress? Are ease and comfort the most desirable blessings which existence has to offer? Is the clam which rests all its life bedded in soft ooze and lives on what the tides bring into its gaping mouth, a nobler creation than the eagle which has to sweep the skies and search the forests for its prey before it can have its dinner?

One of the prime functions of one of the biggest farm organizations—the grange—is set forth in its own words as the nurturing of "a higher manhood and womanhood among ourselves." I think it will be generally admitted that manhood and womanhood are rather higher developments than clamhood or even eaglehood.

Can they be attained without being earned? That's the first question which logically rises after their desirability is admitted. There used to be sung an old hymn which pointedly asked—

"Shall we be carried to the skies
On flowery beds of ease,
While others fought to win the prize,
Or sailed the bloody seas?"

Too many of this somewhat flabby generation answer, in effect, if not words: "Sure, flowery beds of ease just suit us. Bring 'em on."

Is the choice a wise one? Or even a permissible one? Let's talk it over, a few minutes. Let's consider the subject less from the standpoint of what we'd like than from the one of what's best for us.

Most of us farmers still have horses. During the winters they stand at ease in their deeply bedded stalls, "eating their heads off," as the saying goes, but doing little or no hard work. Comes spring, all of a sudden, and the necessity of plowing the lands we intend to crop. The horses are hitched on to the plow—and, the first day, they do just about four hours' work. They have to stop frequently to get their breaths, the collars have to be eased up and padded to avert galls, the poor beasts sweat so profusely that it drops in streams from their bellies, the plowman himself finds blisters forming on his uncalloused hands; he "knocks off" before the middle of the afternoon, to save himself and team from being too stiff and sore to do anything next day?

Why?

Some farmers still keep cows and spend much thought and money on their winter feeding and care. They are coddled and rationed, sometimes with more solicitude than is shown for many tenement children, and it would seem as if they ought to give more and better milk than when they are turned out, in spring, to hunt over the pastures and earn their own fodder from the short-growing grasses. Yet the very opposite is the truth. No stable ration has yet been devised on which the cows do as well and turn out such quality butter fat as the wild grasses they have to hunt for and spend the whole day filling up on.

Some years ago, a professor of inquiring mind in one of the state agricultural colleges where dairying was a major interest, asked and obtained permission to test out a little theory of his own. From the coddled herd in their spick and span stables, with fresh water always before them, with mangers kept supplied with scientifically proportioned rations, blanketed against cold, currycombed daily, and tested frequently for all sorts of symptoms—from this pampered herd he picked out one heifer, neither the best nor the poorest, but a fairly average specimen. She was incontinently turned out of the stable into an open-fronted shed where she was fed hay and cornstalks and a small measure of "provender" daily all winter, from which she had to go to a near-by brook for water, often breaking a hole in the ice with her hooves to drink from. By frank admission of even those who had cast doubts on the professor's experiment, this heifer came out in the spring healthier, in "better order," and mother a better calf than any of the coddled aristocrats in the up-to-date stable.

Why?

Simply because she had toughened herself to make gains out of the discomforts the others had been protected against—to their own flabby detriment.

We'll grant that there are certain differences between men and beasts. But, physically, they're much of a muchness. Both are naturally fitted to accumulate strength by using it. The horses that sweat and strain and become lamed plowing half an acre of sward their first day out of stable will, in a week, have developed power and stamina enough to plow an acre and leave the field prancing. The man in the old spelling book story who had his hands full the first day lifting the calf, by continuing to lift it every day as it grew, was evenually able to lift the ox.

The simple truth is that in this life strength comes only after strain, and hardihood only after hardship.

Victory is not won by fleeing the enemy but by accepting battle with him, taking defeat after defeat, if necessary, till at last you overcome him.

The world is full of men who boast that hard knocks are responsible for their ultimate success. Then, why in the name of all that's commonsensible are they almost invariably so anxious to spare their children their own salutary experiences?

"Parental love?" Parental fiddlesticks! Love is not real love when it turns into a mawkish sentimentalism which ignores the facts of life and refuses to accept its irrefutable logic. This idea that one's children should be shielded from the very buffetings which have inured their sire's manhood and capacity for success lacks logic and even intelligence. It makes for effeminacy in the very worst sense of that once honorable word.

Peter the Great knew practically nothing of war, and was walloped over and over again by his adversary, the great Swedish general. But he learned a lesson from every defeat, till finally he was able to meet his enemy on better than even terms and beat him.

It is from our mistakes that we learn how to avoid repeating them. It is by chasing error to its den that we finally discover the road to truth. It is after blundering into many blind alleys only to be turned back that we eventually strike the main highway.

The old Latins had a saying: "Per aspera ad astra"—through struggle to the stars. And it is only by struggle, sometimes rising to the pitch of agonizing strain, that the star of success can be attained.

I knew of one old farmer who frankly confesses that his ideal of farming is to sit in a rocking chair on the back porch, smoking a corn-cob pipe and telling Tom, Dick and Harry, his hired men, what to do and how to do it.

I knew another who is too modest to formulate any ideal but whose actions manifest his aspirations. With axe and mattock and plow and spade and crowbar and dynamite he is clearing and cleaning up an abandoned farm, transforming it acre by acre as he goes into a fertile oasis among the hills. He works harder and accomplishes more than any of his hired men. He is spending and being spent in order to turn over to his successors, when he leaves it, a farm in vastly better condition than when he took it.

In other words, he is doing something, accomplishing something, creating something for his country and posterity.

When I once adverted to this in a chat with the porch-sitting neighbor, he snorted: "Posterity? What's posterity ever done for me, or Sam Sherman, either?"

That, indeed, seems to be the attitude of too many, these latter days. They live only in the moment. They have neither gratitude for their hardworking ancestors nor real consideration for their pampered descendants. Ease and comfort and all attainable luxury are their household gods which they worship and serve assiduously.

Not long ago, I had a letter from an old friend who is modestly trying to suggest worthy ideals and aims to his fellow workers. "The only thing they seem really interested in," he wrote, "are their 'eats'." So he had invited them all to a free corn roast on his small farm. Which undoubtedly tickled them pink, even if it didn't much forward his altruistic schemes.

Instead of which let us do and dare, that those who come after us may carry the banner to greater heights, themselves also preparing the way for still grander accomplishments.

Seems to me that the latter plan shows a worthier and better spirit.

But it can't be done if we spend all our lives dodging the hard knocks by which Nature is insuring us to a constantly nobler manhood. Or is shielding our children from the hardening experiences which alone will train them into fitness to endure.

WALL STREET BUILDING HOLDS EASTERN TREND

Since pre-revolutionary days Wall street has developed from west to east. When Captain Kidd lived at 56 Wall street the slave market occupied the east end and Trinity church the west end of the street.

In those days buildings were three or three and a half stories high and one lean against Trinity's front gate and watch the slave traders a half mile away.

The church end of the roadway developed as an aristocratic residential section while the end leading down to the East river piers remained a center for disorderly gatherings.

YOUNG INVENTOR RICH, SO HE QUITS BUSINESS

ST LOUIS—(AP)—Six years out of college, Jonathan C. Stimson has retired at an age when most men are getting started in business

Royalties from the sale of his reflecting device for automatic signal lights for street and railway crossings have enabled him to quit at 31. In addition, his income is bolstered by sales of an auto tail light which he also invented and patented.

AGED TOWN MODERNIZES WITH RAILROAD'S ENTRY

PRESIDIO, Tex. —(AP)— Presidio, named Presidio del Norte by adventurous priests who settled here in the seventeenth century, is having the first industrial boom in its 300 years.

The last of Texas frontiersmen have begun making a railroad city of this Rio Grande town. The Santa Fe is building a line along the old cattle trail from Chihuahua, Mexico, to Dodge City, Kas., via Presidio.

DAY OF CONFUSION IN MARKET CLOSED WITH PRICES IRREGULARLY LOWER

NEW YORK, Jan. 2.—(P)—The stock market stumbled into the new year with considerable confusion today. Share prices were bid upward rapidly in the first hour, sharply depressed during the afternoon, and rallied moderately in the final hour. Closing quotations were irregularly lower, scores of leading issues showing net losses of 2 to 6 points. The market remained dominantly professional, the day's transfers falling short of 3,000,000 shares.

The flood of year end forecasts and analysis by important bankers, economists and industrial leaders, while reiterating confidence in the stability of fundamental conditions, and faith in a comparatively early recovery in business and trade, were rather guarded, and inclined to conservatism. Commission house advices generally predicted higher prices before the close of the new year, but were largely noncommittal as to the immediate market outlook. On the whole, New Year's brought little cheer to the bull crowd.

Particularly unsettling developments came late in the day. Just before the close of the market, the Fox Film Class A stockholders' protective committee issued a statement asserting, "indications are that a receivership must be resorted to at once." After the close of the market, the weekly federal reserve brokers' loan compilation disclosed a gain of $96,000,000, the largest since late September.

Other business and corporate news was decidedly mixed. Sears Roebuck reported an increase in December sales of 27.6 per cent. over the previous December, and Montgomery Ward, a gain of 12.04 per cent., the latter falling considerably short of the average gain for previous months of the year. Freight car loadings for the third week of December dropped 90,757 cars from the preceding week, despite higher shipments of coal resulting from cold weather. American Cigar and Continental Motors passed their common dividends, and a receiver was appointed for Submarine Boat. A favorable curtailment of crude oil production was reported for last week.

Monetary conditions largely reflected year end conditions. Indication of an abrupt relaxation such as is normally experienced in January appeared in a reduction of 1-8 of one per cent. in the rates on the shorter maturities of bankers' acceptances. Call money held at 6 per cent. The increase in brokers' loans reflected in part the rally in stock prices in the last week of the year, but was also due to normal year end money requirements. The federal reserve condition statement showed further liberation of credit through open market operations, although rediscounting was curtailed, and reserve position strengthened.

Erratic fluctuations in General Electric, which showed a net gain of 6 points in the morning, a loss of 5 1-2 in the afternoon, and a net loss of 1 1-4 at the close, was typical of the action of leading shares. Fox Film A was a feature of the afternoon, dropping 5 points to a new low at 17 in heavy liquidation.

U. S. Steel sold up 3 3-4 points to 173 3-4, dropped to 166, and closed at 167 1-8, off 3 3-4. Stocks closing about 4 to 8 points lower included Allied Chemical, American Power and Light, American Tobacco B, Byers, Kraft Phenix, McCrory Stores, Pacific Lighting, Republic Steel, Macy, Sears Roebuck, and Standard Gas.

A few stocks closed substantially higher, including Air Reduction, General American Tank, Hershey Chocolate, Chesapeake and Ohio, and United Aircraft, up about 3 to 5 points.

Commodities were irregular. Wheat futures lost 2 cents and more on bearish government weather reports and reports of offerings from France and Russia. Corn sagged 1-2 cent and more, reflecting large receipts and favorable weather. Cotton futures rallied 85 to 90 cents a bale on covering and light offerings.

Foreign exchanges slumped, sterling cables dropped 5-16 to $4 87 13-16, but these changes were not regarded as particularly significant, owing to the small volume of business. The first quarter is normally a period of strength in leading exchange rates.

NEW YORK, Jan. 2—(P)—Sales of Montgomery Ward & Co., for 1929, aggregated $291,530,621, compared with $232,354,728 for 1928, an increase of 25.47 percent. December sales totaled $35,799,816, as contrasted with $31,951,820 in the corresponding month of 1928, an increase of 12.04 percent.

The American Tobacco Co. has purchased 27,000 shares of preferred stock of the American Cigar Co., which company it controls, and will loan it up to $12,000,000 during 1930 to care for the cigar concern's expenses in extensive improvements in new equipment and enlargement of its selling facilities.

The Houdaille-Hershey Corp., manufacturers of automobile accessories, has acquired a substantial interest in the Schwitzer Cummins Co., of Indianapolis, makers of motor cooling fans, water pumps and other automobile products.

Directors of the Continental Motors Corp., of Detroit, have omitted declaration of the quarterly dividend of 20 cents a share due at this time on the common stock.

BOND MARKET

NEW YORK, Jan. 2—(P)—The bond market began 1930 with a rise in prices. Gains averaged small and trading was light, but the advances proved to be fairly general, with the rails and utilities showing to the best advantage. Buying was selective in character and the highest grade loans got most of the attention.

Reinvestment demand is slow in asserting itself and the market does not expect to see an inflow from the large current dividend and interest payments for several days, but a much better sentiment was apparent in the day's dealings. Purchases were evidently being made in anticipation of easier money which would serve to lift bond prices.

Gains of a point or more in investment rails and utilities were numerous, and a few of the industrials participated in the upturn to a similar extent. Foreign loans were considerably stronger.

American Telephone 5 1-2s, Armour & Company 5 1-2s and Real Estate 4 1-2s, Atchison Refunding 4 1-2s (California and Arizona Division), Great Northern 4 1-4s, Missouri Pacific Refunding 5s, New York Central 3 1-2s, Northern Pacific 6s, New York Telephone 6s and Virginian Railway 5s climbed at least a point during the day and most of the gains were held through the close. Smaller advances came out in a large number of issues. Declines were comparatively frequent and most of them resulted from minor selling.

Liberty bonds and Treasury certificates moved irregularly, but there was little interest in the group.

Latin Americans took a prominent part in the foreign trading and Argentine, Chilean and Brazilian listings were generally higher, with gains averaging somewhat more than a point. European government obligations were steady.

THE CURB MARKET

NEW YORK, Jan. 2.—(P)—A bullish New Year's celebration, staged by operators for the advance at the opening of today's curb market, proved to be of short duration, as a flood of selling swept over the market in the afternoon, leaving final quotations irregularly lower. The reaction was inspired by a series of bearish developments including the passing of the American Cigar dividend, the revelation of large losses taken by investment trusts in the November break and the threat by the Class A stockholders' committee of the Fox Film corporation to bring about a receivership for the William Fox Theatrical Enterprises.

Several stocks, particularly in the aviation group, which had been subjected to heavy tax selling in the past few weeks, rallied briskly when this pressure was removed, and succeeded in retaining a good part of their gains. Recently organized pools, which started operations in the hope of attracting a large public following, stepped aside when it became apparent that the January reinvestment demand was not coming up to expectations.

In the investment trust group, Lehman corporation advanced more than $5 a share to $80.12 1-2 on the publication of its report showing asset value in excess of $91 a share, but it lost all but a fraction of its gain. Goldman Sachs closed fractionally lower after having registered an early gain of more than 3 points. The new Tri-Continental issues were admitted to trading but also failed to maintain their early gains.

In the public utility group, most of the active issues such as Electric Bond & Share, American & Foreign Power warrants, American Superpower and Electric Power Associates lost ground while a few ordinarily inactive shares, such as American Light & Traction and Consolidated Gas of Baltimore, closed with substantial gains.

American Cigar broke 8 points to a new low at 68, as contrasted with the 1928 high of 152 1-4, on the passing of the quarterly dividend of $2. Fox Theatres, which sold as high as 37 7-8 last year, dropped from 5 3-4 to 2 1-2, and then rallied to 3 1-4, for a net loss of 2 1-2 points on the talk of a receivership. Glen Alden Coal dropped 4 1-2 points on what appeared to be the termination of a pool operation. Trading in the oils was light but most of them displayed a firm undertone.

CHICAGO GRAIN MARKET

CHICAGO, Jan. 2—(P)—Russia came to the front today as a bugaboo unsteadying the nerves of wheat owners. Notwithstanding that people in Moscow are subsisting on a ration-card basis, wheat values here were forced down by persistent selling pressure which resulted largely from assertions that Russia is exporting at least some wheat, and has forwarded samples to Liverpool to be valued. Simultaneously, the volume of wheat export business today from North America was small compared with the amount looked for in most quarters, the estimated total being only 500,000 to 700,000 bu.

Chicago closing prices for wheat were shaky, 1 7-8c to 2 1-4c a bushel lower than Tuesday's finish. Corn closed 3-8c to 5-8c down, oats unchanged to 1-8c off, and provisions showing a and 7c to 10c advance.

Downturns in wheat prices today came after the Chicago market had scored a material advance. Houses with eastern connections took the lead in the selling, and buyers grew laggard, virtually ignoring in the late dealings the factors which earlier had led to price bulges—namely, reports that rains were hampering the wheat harvest in Argentina, that wheat shipments from Argentina were decreasing, and that demand from European consumers was being augmented. Incidentally, Washington reports showing that domestic winter wheat is in good to excellent condition were of some effect as an incentive to sellers.

By far the chief influence, however, as a motive for letting go of future delivery holdings of wheat and for speculative selling was at least temporary fading away of general hopes of liberal export business in wheat from the United States and Canada. The shadow of this disappointment was made decidedly blacker by the reports which were circulated implying that competition from Russia was impending. It was not until trading here was ended for the day that explicit advices were at hand saying no offers of Russian wheat exports had been made, and that none appeared to be likely.

Helped by reports that the federal farm board does not want to see corn prices go beneath the present level, and that the Farmers' National Grain corporation is keeping a watchful eye on developments, the corn market today showed a firm undertone despite wheat weakness. On the other hand, corn receipts today here and elsewhere were much larger than either a week or a year ago. Oats were steadied by the relative firmness of corn.

Provisions were responsive to upturns in the value of hogs and to reports of fewer fall pigs as compared with a year back.

SAYS CONNECTICUT FARMERS HAVE HAD AVERAGE YEAR

Hail and drought caused heavy crop losses to individual farmers but the Connecticut farm income increased nearly $4,000,000 over the 1928 total, according to a statement prepared by Commissioner of Agriculture S. McLean Buckingham which will appear in a near issue of "The New England Homestead." Commissioner Buckingham's summary clearly shows that Connecticut farmers have had their ups and downs during the past year but on the whole the gross returns have been practically equal to the average for the past five years.

Commissioner Buckingham says in part: "Connecticut agriculture as a whole has witnessed an average year. The farm income during 1929, according to the best available estimate, was on a par with the average of the past five years, totaling approximately $65,000,000. This amount is reached after deducting $10,000,000 worth of hay, corn and oats which is fed to farm animals and credited to the income from milk and poultry.

Crop Values.

"Value of farm crops are estimated as follows: Milk, $23,000,000; tobacco, $13,900,000; hay, $10,000,000; poultry and poultry products, $10,000,000; vegetables, $4,000,000; potatoes, $3,744,000; corn for grain, silage and forage, $3,037,000; apples, $1,752,000; peaches, $364,000; oats, $394,000; pears, $104,000; making a total of $70,316,000. This total does not include the value of livestock products or small fruit as accurate figures for these products are not available.

"The best available estimates, based on the U. S. farm census and the 1929 crop and livestock review, places the value of other farm products as follows: Small fruits, $4,000,000; cows, sold for slaughter, $1,000,000; calves sold for veal, $750,000; beef, $750,000; swine, $500,000; bees, $300,000 and sheep, $80,000; making a grand total of $77,798,000 as the value of all products raised on Connecticut farms. However, since approximately $10,000,000 worth of farm products are fed to farm animals, the farm income is necessarily reduced to $67,798,000 as the nearest approximate estimate.

Increased Income.

"Crop incomes as a whole have shown an increase over 1928 but the several branches of the industry show more or less variation from the average. Dairy production has been greater than usual and the return per quart has been somewhat better. The increased price of fluid milk has induced an increased production which may bring about some marketing problems in 1930.

"Egg prices have been good while poultry prices have suffered slightly from an abundance of supplies but on the whole, Connecticut poultrymen have had a good year. In fruit there is a different story, production was light accompanied by disease and insect injury, particularly in peaches. Added to this apples are not keeping well in storage. Prices have helped to offset these difficulties but have only partly done so. The income for Connecticut fruit growers has been below normal.

"Vegetables suffered considerably from the dry season and this damage was not entirely offset by higher prices. The vegetable growers' returns have been smaller than usual. Individual returns from tobacco have depended on whether the grower was located in the hail damaged area or not. Those in that area suffered heavy losses while those outside benefitted by higher prices resulting from the smaller production to an extent that tobacco as a whole yielded greater financial returns in 1929 than for the five-year average. This represents an increase of more than $2,500,000 over the returns for the 1928 crop.

"Returns from potatoes were about equal to those of the five-year average but were practically double those of last year. The year 1929 as a whole has been an average year for Connecticut agriculture but for the individual farmer the results have depended upon the particular branch of the industry he was interested in.

New Enterprises.

"Among the new enterprises which are rapidly gaining in importance are the turkey industry and the sale of baby chicks from accredited flocks. Approximately 20,000 turkeys were raised in Connecticut during 1929. The agricultural co-operatives in the state have passed through the experimental stage and have demonstrated their worth, both as buying and selling organizations. During the past year they have shown a very wholesome growth not alone in numbers but in the volume of business transacted.

1929 Legislation.

"Agricultural legislation during the 1929 session was largely confined to re-enforcing the work of the department without materially changing the statutes. The only distinctly new legislation passed was the enactment of the Connecticut seed law. National legislation affecting the Connecticut farmers is largely centered around the adoption of the federal farm marketing act and the appointment of the federal farm board. In addition the standard container act of 1928, effective Nov. 1, 1929, has a direct influence because it forbids the use of several containers which have been prominent in Connecticut as well as nullifies all state, county and municipal weights per bushel of fruits and vegetables when sold in standard containers.

"It is gratifying to know that more and more farmers seeking this information and are beginning to realize that nation-wide conditions affect them as seriously as do conditions in their own immediate locality. It means that the Connecticut farmers of 1930 will have a better foundation upon which to build their business than they did in 1929. As farmers abandon the old methods of marketing as individuals and turn toward organized marketing methods, agriculture in Connecticut should become stabilized and its future assured."

BERT LARKIE WRITES "YANKEE PEDDLER TALK"

Under the title "Yankee Peddler Talk," Herbert B. Larkie of 390 Mt. Pleasant street, is the contributor of a very readable article in the current issue of Independent Salesman, which gives the selling points he has picked up in his experience gained around Norwich and vicinity.

His article follows:

By H. BRAD LARKIE

When a salesman was a "drummer" who rode the rails, reds and blinds; put up at the best hotel, said "Hello!" to all the good-looking girls; and when the only direct-to-consumer representative was the local peddler and the wandering tin wagon, I became interested in direct selling and joined the growing host of bellringers, confident of my ability to make good.

In the hope that my experiences will prove of value to others in the field I am going to tell here some of my early experiences, contrasting conditions at that time with those of the present.

It was just about thirty years ago that I started my career as a house-to-house salesman, I went out to the local gardeners and purchased a considerable quantity of garden truck and berries which I sold to the housewives in the community in which I lived. I didn't have any approach, I didn't know a darn thing about selling, but I did have nice fresh garden produce and a ready, youthful smile. However, I did not manage to sell enough garden truck or berries to set the world on fire, but I did sell enough to encourage me to stay in this business, and in fact, make it my life work. Of course, there were quite a number of my friends who laughed at me walking the streets from morning to night, but whenever the circus came to town I was always ready with the admission price and something extra for peanuts and red lemonade.

I more or less drifted from one thing to another, always selling, of course, but finally I hit upon one household article that certainly did bring in the money. It was a patent potato peeler and one of the first on the market. Incidentally, my success with this line showed me several facts about the selling business that I have never forgotten. The first is, if everybody has a real use for the article you are selling, it is not very difficult to secure interest; the second—sales resistance is lessened according to the price; third—when a salesman is selling a low-priced article with a correspondingly low profit, he must make a quick demonstration, close the sale in a hurry and move on to the next prospect. I found those things out during my first week of selling these potato peelers, and so I hit upon the following plan, which aided me in marketing several thousand of these peelers.

Over one shoulder I hung a string of peelers, some two or three hundred— they looked almost like two bunches of bananas when I walked down the street; and over the other shoulder I slung a small bag of potatoes. Armed thus like a gladiator of old, I fared forth on my daily routes. As soon as a lady opened the back door I told her that I was calling to save her time and trouble with my patented potato peeler, and proceeded to show her how it worked on a potato. That was just about all the sales talk I had and it was all I needed, for it was complete. I had an approach, a demonstration and I wasn't afraid to ask my prospects to buy—they did. Of course, some folks will say that my appearance certainly couldn't have been very dignified, walking down the street with a bag on one shoulder and a string of potato peelers on the other shoulder, like some boy with a string of catfish, but then, I wasn't trying to be very dignified; I was just trying to make money and I had learned this much about the game of life and about selling a specialty, that sometimes dignity means very little but personal satisfaction, whereas sales mean money with which to buy the necessities and luxuries of life.

For years folks have argued as to whether salesmen are "made" or "born." After thirty years in the game I have decided that they are "made" and "born." A man must be endowed with certain qualities, but he also must have the ability and temperament to receive instruction and to learn from his experiences and those of others. This latter I shall call "being made." A little incident connected with the sale of potato peelers illustrates rather conclusively that a salesman must be both born and made.

A friend of mine was very much interested in my success with these peelers and wanted to go "partners" with me. I agreed and fixed him up with a selling outfit same as my own, and we started out, taking opposite sides of the street. Of course, before we started out I gave him a short selling talk and all the necessary instructions. He started out with a great big smile, expecting to sell a large number immediately, but I noticed when we came to the end of the street, that his ever-ready smile didn't seem to be functioning so well, and I asked him how the peelers were selling. He said that he had only sold five. "What?" I asked, "only five in all those houses; I sold fifteen. What's the matter?" He told me then that everyone seemed to think they were wonderful, but he just couldn't seem to close sales. It seemed that he was afraid to ask a person to buy. He would work right up to the final sentence of his sales talk and then hem and haw and stumble around when it came to asking for money for his product. I tried to coach him, giving him more selling points, and stronger closing arguments, but at the end of the week he was ready to quit. My friend was born with the fear of asking people to buy, and he wasn't born with a temperament that would have enabled him to overcome this handicap. In other words, my point is this: a man may not be a glib talker or a smooth worker; in fact, he may be anything other than these things, but if he is born with the ability to stick to a thing and to learn, he can become a good salesman.

There are just lots and lots of people that are afraid to meet other people. Such men and women become office grinds and factory workers, where they have a few specific things to do and don't have to worry about making an impression on anyone or meeting any people. In fact, it seems that this fear element in a man's mind is his greatest handicap in becoming a successful salesman. Confidence in yourself is at least nine-tenths of the battle, the rest comes quite easily. There are quite a number of other facts about selling that I have picked up in knocking about from house to house for thirty years, but one of the most important is—a successful salesman must avoid any question, the obvious answer to which is "No." To illustrate: a salesman who walks up to a prospect and says, "You don't want to buy,"—will undoubtedly receive "No" for an answer. Another question commonly used by salesmen, "You don't need any?"— the obvious answer to this is also "No." Perhaps some who are reading this will say, "Why, no salesman uses that type of approach any more." But whatever reader says that is wrong, and all he has to do to prove that he is wrong is to stay home for two or three days and just jot down approaches used by various salesmen who call at his own home. At least 50 per cent employ such an opening sentence.

As a matter of fact, I have found it best to eliminate the word selling in my approach and I have substituted, introducing, advertising or demonstrating, rather than selling, because the moment a salesman mentions the fact that he is a salesman, he builds a very strong wall of resistance between himself and the customer. By using the three words, advertising, introducing and demonstrating, a salesman suggests to his prospect that something interesting may be forthcoming, and so holds his prospect's interest.

I have also learned that it is not well to be too insistent, but if the prospect tells you he or she is busy and hasn't any time, leave with a "Thank you," and express the hope that when you call again time will be less pressing.

I sold peelers for some little time but finally entered a retail store, taking charge of the meat department. After working for this grocer for three years, I resigned and accepted a position with a chain store, and after some time was advanced to managership of the meat department. It has always been my firm belief that whatever success I may have enjoyed in the business of retailing products to the consumer, was dependent largely on the experience gained as a Yankee peddler selling my goods from house to house. It was this contact with people of all kinds and classes that enabled me to know quite a bit about the mind of the buyer.

After some years with this chain store I received an injury, which prevented me from carrying on with this work. Now I am back again in the business of selling direct-to-the-consumer, but now with a product of my own manufacture which I sometimes sell myself locally. Most of my business though, is done through agents in surrounding towns, and I am sure that the plans, methods and suggestions that I offer these salesmen from time to time are helpful. My salesmen are better dressed than I ever was, they are better talkers and they sell more goods, but the same lessons I learned thirty years ago still hold good, and my salesmen use the unbeatable triumvirate— quick interest getting approach; rapid convincing demonstration, and "get the money."

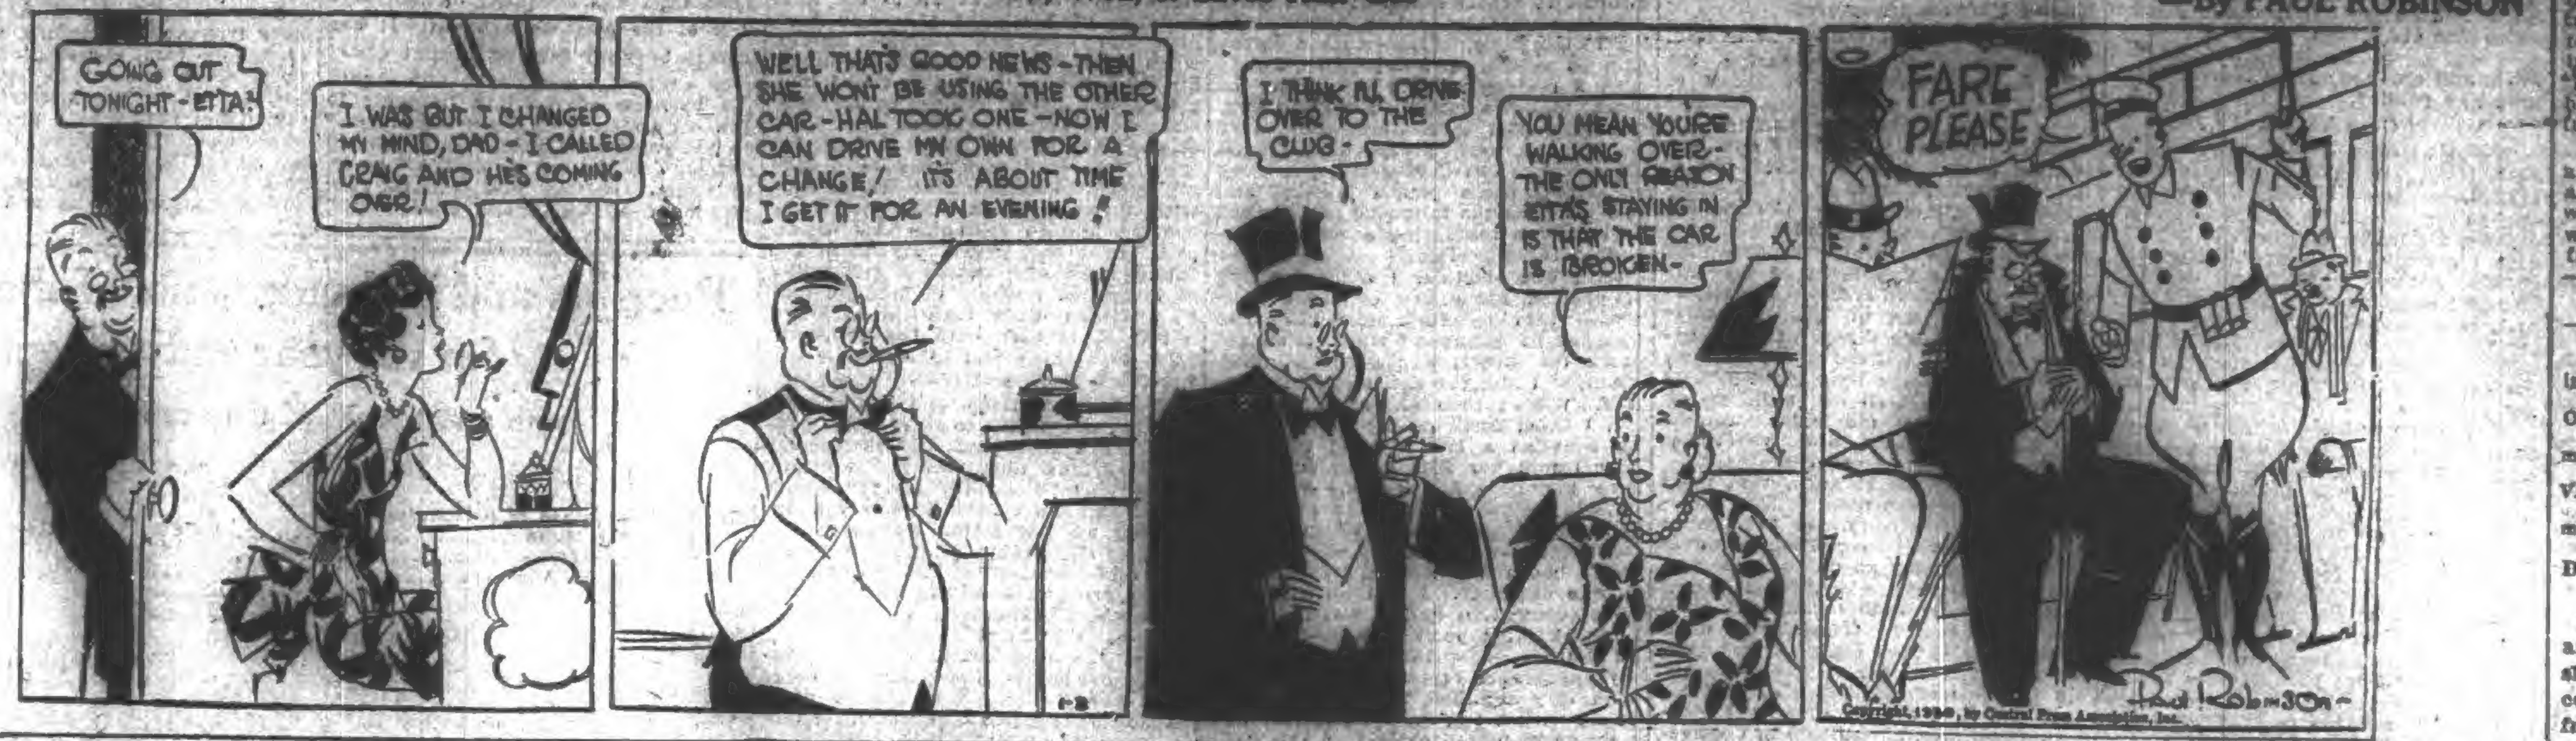
ETTA KETT

Oh, Well, It Saves Him Gas

—By PAUL ROBINSON



GOING OUT TONIGHT - ETTA?
I WAS BUT I CHANGED MY MIND, DAD - I CALLED CRAIG AND HE'S COMING OVER!
WELL THAT'S GOOD NEWS - THEN SHE WON'T BE USING THE OTHER CAR - HAL TOOK ONE - NOW I CAN DRIVE MY OWN FOR A CHANGE! IT'S ABOUT TIME I GET IT FOR AN EVENING!
I THINK I'LL DRIVE OVER TO THE CLUB -
YOU MEAN YOU'RE WALKING OVER - THE ONLY REASON ETTA'S STAYING IN IS THAT THE CAR IS BROKEN - FARE PLEASE

ANNOUNCEMENTS

Breed Theatre

Broadway Theatre

The name Cecil B. DeMille on a motion picture means the same as the sterling mark on silver or the 18-carat on gold. DeMille, veteran of film producers, has never lent his name to anything but the biggest in the screen world, as witness his "Ten Commandments," "The Covered Wagon," "The Volga Boatman," "The King of Kings" and others totalling fifty-five, every one a super-production in every sense. Now comes his newest thrill, his first talking picture, "Dynamite," which opens at the Broadway tomorrow. The theme of "Dynamite" is so daring, so tremendous that no one but DeMille would care tackle it, but with his boundless enthusiasm and dynamic force, he has turned out a masterpiece of filmcraft, exotic and thrilling to the last degree. A society debutante, anticipating her inheritance, bargains with a married friend to divorce her husband that she may have him herself. Dollars speak louder than love, and the deal goes through. At the last moment the "deb" discovers that her the terms of the will, she must be married and living with her husband to inherit the money. In desperation, she goes through a ceremony with a condemned convict, doomed to hang in seven hours. Her complacency is later shattered when at a riotously gay party, her "ghost-husband" suddenly appears to claim his bride, he having been released almost at the last moment by the confession of the real murderer. He is a coal miner and demands that she go to his humble home to live. Knowing that she must do so to gain her coveted money, she goes, as "wife in name only," but meets her lover clandestinely and often. They go to find her miner-husband and tell him the truth and find him working in the lower levels of the mine, a mile below the surface. A sudden cave-in traps all three, and they face death by suffocation. Dynamite will free them. There proves to be plenty of the giant powder but no fuses. A hammer blow will explode the charge, but also destroy the one who strikes the blow! Was ever such a situation conceived on the screen? The blow is struck, but by whom?—ah, there's the drama of it, and what a climax that is! Conrad Nagel and Julia Faye are the young society couple whose happiness is threatened by the wealthy young heart-breaker, Kay Johnson, and Charles Bickford has the role of Derk, the dynamite boss of the mine, who narrowly escaped execution. The long cast includes Robert Edeson, Leslie Fenton, Tyler Brooke, Muriel McCormac, and a host of other favorites, and the marvelous settings run the gamut from the luxury and gaiety of high society on the Long Island playgrounds of the dollar kings, to the sordid shacks and miserable dwellings of the Czech coal miners, and the gloomy depths of an actual coal mine.

KAY JOHNSON and CONRAD NAGEL in "DYNAMITE"

Norwich Music Association

The recital on Monday evening, Jan. 6, by Master Clawson Beswick Van Siclen of Philadelphia with Ernest Felix Potter at the piano, to be given before the Norwich Music association in Slater Hall annex is being anticipated with much keenness.

Master Van Siclen is 12 years old and one of the outstanding boy-sopranos of the country. He possesses a most unusual voice under marvelous control. His range is a matter of three octaves, and his coloratura control is astonishing—singing the most difficult coloratura selections with the utmost ease, certainty, grace and finish.

State-wide snow surveys are being made in California to obtain information as to the amount of run-off from the snow to be expected during the dry months from April to August.

HUMOR OF THE DAY

"My wife has the worst memory I ever heard of."

"Forgets everything, eh?"

"No, remembers everything."—Washington Star.

Waiter—A thousand pardons, signor —I thought that you were on your honeymoon.—"Passing Show."

"Mr. Marketman, is this a good cantaloupe?"

DRY LAW VANQUISHES LITTLE SWISS COLONY

LONDON, Ky., —(AP)— Prohibition and restless youth have made the sledding hard for the little Swiss colony up on a plateau eight miles from here.

When the colonists first came they were skilled in making wines and beers. Kentucky, to encourage them, quickly passed a law permitting the group to manufacture wines and beers for 25 years without taxation. The law probably would have been renewed had it not been for prohibition.

But prohibition came and with it bumps for the colony. One of its important incomes had been cut away. Where once were 250 families now are only 13.

The young Swiss, educated in American schools are all for having a look at the rest of the country. Only a handful of young men remain to take over the farms of their fathers.

The colony was founded nearly 50 years ago when Im Oberstet, a Swiss who bought 40,000 acres on the plateau for $1 an acre, organized the group in Switzerland.

Led by Paul Shenk, son of a Swiss president, and Otto Bruner, a professor in the Swiss college of agriculture, they came to Kentucky.

MASONIC CUP TO VISIT LODGES ALL OVER WORLD

EVANSTON, Ill. —(AP)— A large loving cup that is expected to go around the world in seven years has been started on its journey by the Evans Masonic lodge, No. 524 of Evanston.

It is to visit every lodge, always in the possession of a member of the fraternity. Each lodge decides which other lodge will next receive the cup. It may be sent three or 3,000 miles but it always must go toward the east.

Accompanying the cup are greetings in English, French, Spanish, German, Portuguese, Dutch, Italian and Swedish, a roll book to be signed by members of the visited lodge, and envelopes addressed to the Evans lodge, informing it of the cup's progress.

Members expect it will have no difficulty in crossing the oceans, as there are Masonic chapters on many shores.

SHAWKEY FACED WITH PROBLEM OF REBUILDING THE NEW YORK YANKEES

NEW YORK, Jan. 2.—(AP)—The New ork Yankees will give Bob Shawkey, e new manager, 33 players next onth and ask him to fit the baseball uzzle picture together. There are nough players of known worth in the ssortment to make the former world hampions contenders again.

Shawkey's first problem will be arangement of the infield. Only Lou ehrig is established. He will play rst base as usual. Tony Lazzeri is a ertainty in the line of first defense, ut whether he will again take care f second remains to be seen. He may e needed elsewhere. Mark Koenig has hown that he is a better shortstop han third baseman so he probably ill return to his former love. A genral scramble may result between Lyn ary, Jimmy Reese, Lary's former eammate, Ben Chapman, a great hitr, and the talkative Leo Durocher for he one place likely to be open. Not ven Shawkey, however, knows what at vacant place will be.

Two-thirds of the outfield will be ack, the rejuvenated Babe Ruth and arle Combs. Allan (Dusty) Cooke, reat prospect from St. Paul, has been entatively accorded Bob Meusel's forer post, more or less by acclamation, ut Sam Byrd, ball player and golfer xtraordinary, will ask that his vote e recorded in the negative. There are nly five outfielders available, Cedric urst being the fifth, and all will be etained.

One of the older school of recruits, ugene (Bubbles) Hargrave, with ten ears in the National league behind im, will bolster the catching staff fter a year as manager of St. Paul in he American association. Dickey, a ine newcomer, Bengough and Jorgens f last year's club and Bill John Karon, drafted from Springfield, Mass., omplete the receiving staff.

Manager Shawkey, who was a great itcher in his day, will have a crop of 7 pitchers, prospects and near pitchrs from which to choose his staff. oyt, Pipgras, Zachary, Heimach, ells, Pennock, Sherid and Johnson, re veterans, although the last two re young in years.

Among the recruits with the best ecords are Vernon Gomez, from the an Francisco club, and Louis Mcvey, from Oakland, of the Pacific oast league; Louis Americus Polli of t. Paul and Ivy Andrews, from Alany, of the Eastern league. Rhodes, raig and Van Pelt have had trials ith the Yankees. Edwards was a star n college and threatened to develop nto a real pitcher when he was with he Boston Braves. Henderson, late of ersey City, at times has seemed to e on the verge of becoming a sensaion.

AGGIES HAVE STIFF WORKOUT FOR SATURDAY'S GAME

STORRS, Jan. 2.—The Connecticut Aggie basketball team had its last hard workout this afternoon before the opening game of the season with East Stroudsburg Normal School which will be held Saturday evening, January 4, in Hawley armory. Tomorrow's session will be devoted chiefly to light basket shooting drill.

The five men used as regulars since the return of the squad on Monday, three days previous to the opening of college after the Christmas recess, are Captain Ray Ryan and Billy Darrows, forwards; Dan Chubbuck, center; Leo Duffy and Bev Wilson, guards. A second combination which has been used as a reserve in all workouts to date consists of Glennon and Goldberg, forwards; Tourville, center; Osterling and Flydal, guards. These men will see considerable service in the opening contest, and may replace one or more of the men who seem to hold a slight edge at present.

Ray Ryan, who previous to the Christmas recess appeared a little off his usual form, has finally struck his stride and gives every indication of having a big year on the chalked court. Ryan has starred in three major sports since his matriculation at the state college, and it has been freely predicted that he would not be able to maintain his pace through the four years. His work to date, both on the gridiron and basketball floor, has conclusively refuted this assumption.

The entire Aggie squad is in excellent shape, particularly due to an innovation in training rules. The squad was this year permitted to break training during the Christmas recess, up to and including Christmas day. This lapse in strict training served to relieve tension in the squad which consists, for the most part, of men who were on the football squad and who have been in training since their arrival at Storrs in September. The practice during the recent holidays was designed to take up any slack in the squad, and it is now in excellent condition for the opening game on Saturday.

THE WELL KNOWN SHIRES IS BARRED IN MICHIGAN

DETROIT, Jan. 2.—(AP)—The Michigan state boxing commission, which from the first has never looked with a kindly eye upon the pugilistic activities of Art Shires late today suspended the White Sox first baseman from Michigan rings.

The action was taken after the commission had been told by the manager of "Battling" Criss, a sand, well shoveler from Rockwood, Mich., that a proposition had been made for Criss to "take a dive" in a scheduled four round preliminary last night.

Chairman James Brown of the commission, who announced the suspension, declined to reveal the identity of persons said to have approached the manager, Bandes Gildersleeve, with the proposition nearly a week ago.

Brown said he had advised promoters in other Michigan cities of the ruling and that a recommendation will be made to the National Boxing association that Shires be barred in other states controlled by that body.

The Shires-Criss bout was called off yesterday morning with the announcement that Shires was ill in his hotel room, suffering from a cold.

The baseball pugilist was examined by a physician who reported him unable to fight.

The commission then ruled that when he was able to go into the ring Shires must meet Criss before any other opponent. Previously the official body had taken an interest in Art's affairs by refusing to let a promoter match him in a main bout. The featherweight fight for which Shires was to have been a preliminary also was called off when Shires was reported ill.

Final disposition of the case will be made January 9 at Lansing, Brown said.

AMERICANS SWAMP THEIR METROPOLITAN RIVAL 7 TO 1

NEW YORK, Jan. 2—(AP)—The New York Americans rose to new heights tonight to defeat the New York Rangers, 7 to 1, in the second game of the year between the local National Hockey league rivals. The victory evened the annual series, wiping out an earlier Ranger triumph.

The superb American defense finally found an offense to match, and after the first period, the Rangers were hardly in the game. They took an early lead, but the Americans tied it up near the end of the first period, made it 3-1 in the second then added four more goals in the final period. Even when they were short two men on penalties the American kept the Ranger attack helpless.

Benny Grant, the Toronto youngster who is substituting for Worters, gave a remarkable exhibition of goal tending behind the strong defensive wall.

Homes was the leader of the American scorers, getting two unassisted goals a half minute apart and aiding in two more. McVeigh also tallied twice while Sheppard, Conacher and Patterson got the other American goals. Murdoch sank the lone Ranger tally.

PIRATES WIN FURIOUS GAME FROM OTTAWA

PITTSBURGH, Pa., Jan. 2—(AP)—Reenforced by the acquisition of Gordon Fraser and Jess Spring, the Pittsburgh Pirates fought up to the front in a furiously contested National League hockey game tonight, defeating the Ottawa Senators 3 to 1.

Gagne got Ottawa off to an early advantage with a goal from scrimmage, but Jarvis White and Milks, backed up by R. Smith, Briden and Lowrey, soon turned the tide for Pittsburgh.

Connor, Kilrea, Finnigan and Clancy, fought hard for the visitors, but their efforts were fruitless against Goalie Joe Miller of Pittsburgh in the few times they penetrated R. Smith and Darragh.

INDIANA CHAMPS AT PLAINFIELD TONIGHT

CAPTAIN HILLIGROSS

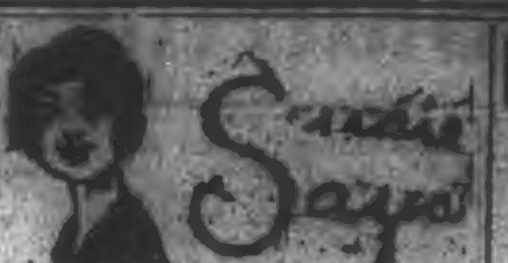
When the Phi Delta basketball five, champions of Indiana, clash with the Plainfield Pros at the Plainfield Community house this evening there will be a display of as brilliant basketball as has ever been seen in this section. The Indiana team are not champions by any fluke, they earned the title by fast and hard playing against some of the fastest basketball teams in the mid-west. A record of 403 wins against 93 losses in some 500 games speaks for itself and shows the public that Plainfield is speaking into fast company tonight.

Captain Hilligross of the Indiana team, who plays a forward position is one of the high scoring men of the semi-professional teams in the mid-west. He is supported by a strong cast of players that include Del Winship, Bill Thompson, Johnny Farr and Nick Jorris, all known throughout the mid-west and east as basketeers of the first magnitude. The Phi Delta team is an aggregation of basketball players well drilled in the fine points of the game and their team work is something that attracts immediate attention from the fans.

Manager Salisbury of the Plainfield team is planning to send as strong a team against the invaders as possible, probably starting Brusso and Kasper in the forward positions with Conway at center, Dissinger, Bernot or Williams in the guards. This team has functioned well during the past few weeks and will be playing a stiff game in there tonight.

A fast preliminary between the Buddies and the Taftville Shyma five is slated for 8 o'clock and dancing will follow the main game. The probable lineups:

Plainfield.	Indiana.
Brusso, rf	Jorris, rf
Kasper, lf	Hilligross, lf
Conway, c	Farr, c
Bernot, rg	Thompson, rg
Williams, lg	Winship, lg



If there's never another New Year's party that will be too many.

And I know a hundred more just like me. Of course that's the general feeling after welcoming the New Year in. But you'll do it again, don't doubt it.

There's always that feeling of remorse on the morning after. It's just as certain as the well known dark brown taste and the burning desire for ice water.

Of course a New Year's celebration, if you can call it that, has a different aftermath for all of us. I know one party in town who went home and dumped out ten gallons of three-year-old cider brandy that he had been hoarding.

And I'll bet within a week if not sooner he'll be kicking himself that he did it. Then there is a certain person in town who pulled a fast one on the wife, and from all appearances got away with it.

Seems the wife had a very strong aversion to New Year's parties and all that goes with them, and she knew her hubby. Friend hubby had secured permission to go out with the understanding that he must be home before 1 o'clock and strictly sober.

Well, at New Year's parties the time slips by very quickly and pleasantly until the small hours of the morning. Friend husband noted that he had overstayed his time by several hours.

He gained his home all right but as he quietly let himself in at the front door he remembered that his chances of getting to his room at the head of the stairs were slim without being heard. Every board in the stairway squeaked, and how.

He pondered a few minutes, then went to the door opened and pressed the doorbell several times. Then he waited until he heard his wife call "John, John, somebody's at the door." "All right, dearie," says he, "I'll see who it is."

He opened the door and mumbled something in a deep bass voice and then in his natural tone says, "Oh, that's all right, Mr. Smith, your house is the next one above," and then slams the door and trudges upstairs.

As he passes the wife's door she calls out, "Isn't it terrible that Mr. Smith should be coming home so late and in such a condition. I'm glad you were in early, dear." And friend husband chuckles and says, "So am I."

But what a panning Mr. Smith is going to get when the sewing circle meets again. Oh, boy.

BACON ACADEMY WINS EASY GAME FROM LYMAN

(Special to The Bulletin)

COLCHESTER, Conn., Jan. 2.—Bacon academy defeated the strong Lyman Memorial high basketball team from Lebanon in a fast and exciting game in the New Park hall Thursday evening by a score of 20 to 9. The Bacon boys gained a lead in the first half which the visitors were never able to overcome. Levine and Kop starred for Bacon academy, while Abel was the best for Lebanon. There was an unusually large crowd present from Colchester, Lebanon and surrounding towns. The gate receipts were the most taken in at a basketball game in Colchester for several years.

On Friday evening, Jan. 1, the Bacon academy team will play the Woodstock academy five in Woodstock. In the preliminary the Bacon academy girls will play the Woodstock girls' five.

In the preliminary game tonight the Colchester Shamrocks won from the Michigan college quintet, composed of men who are spending the holiday vacation at their homes here. The score was 26 to 14. The Shamrocks made an unusually good showing considering the fact that they were handicapped by the absence of Goodrich, at center, and Gregory at guard. Weith, a new find for the Shamrocks, made a good showing, he being a former Bacon academy star. Several of the college quintet are members of varsity teams and the Shamrocks feel elated over the win. Several of the players on the Shamrock team competed at the Storrs tournament in 1928 and Gyome was mentioned as an all-state guard. Manager Joseph Falk of the Shamrocks announces that his team will play the West Ends of Willimantic in Colchester, Jan. 11.

PIQUETTE SIGNED TO BOX BEAUREGARD IN SHYMA MAIN BOUT ON JAN. 24

Matchmaker Leo P. Flynn has signed his main bout for the Shyma club card at Parish hall on the evening of Friday, Jan. 24, and it looks like a real big attraction. Mr. Flynn was fortunate in being able to secure the signature of Lou Piquette of Bridgeport on a contract to box Al Beauregard of Taftville in this star attraction.

Lou Piquette is a youngster who is rapidly mounting the ladder to pugilistic heights and his work is attracting plenty of attention wherever he boxes. Piquette has met the Taftville boy once before, gaining a hairline decision over Beauregard in a bout at Bridgeport last year. Beauregard is more than pleased at the possibility of getting another crack at the Bridgeport lad. To use Beauregard's own words he says "There's going to be plenty of leather pushing when us two Frenchmen get in the same ring again. Somebody's going to be carried out."

AL BEAUREGARD

Piquette has built up quite a reputation since he boxed Beauregard having beaten Johnny Farrell of New York twice, Vincent LaBelle of Middletown, knocked out Marty Gallagher of New York in the first round, outpointed Johnny Pena of Porto Rico and gave Sammy Gelber the New York battler the hardest fight of his career and also fought a 15 round draw with Jack Zeramby. After beating Chico Gonzales at Mitchel Field he took on Joe Ryder, of New York, one of the best lightweights in the metropolitan district and gave him a great battle. A boy with a record like that should be able to give Beauregard a real stiff battle.

The only other bout on the card that is sure is the four-round curtain raiser in which Mush Moriarty, local pride, is to take on "Shires" Beauregard of Taftville. Minnow Beauregard, as perhaps he is better known, has settled down to intensive training after the New Year holiday and expects to give Moriarty one of the best trimmings that the local Irishman ever took. "Shires" is training with his brother, Al, and although he outweighs the youngster by many pounds their practice sessions are as fierce and fast as any real bout.

N. Y. COMMISSION PANNED BY QUAKER CITY VETERANS

PHILADELPHIA, Jan. 2—(AP)—Criticism of the New York boxing commission for abolishing the junior lightweight title recently won by Benny Bass, of this city, was contained in a resolution adopted today by directors of the Veterans Athletes of Philadelphia.

"This board," the resolution said, "deplored the creation of intermediate titles. The New York boxing commission disregarded the trait of the ring, has violated every rule in relation to matches, weights and good sportsmanship incident to pugilism and has now climaxed its arbitrary actions by attempting to deprive a courageous magnificent champion, Benny Bass, of a title which they themselves instituted.

"We place ourselves on record as resenting the action of the New York boxing commission as an affront to sportsmanship. We trust that the Pennsylvania commission will refuse to have any further dealings with a triumvirate so lacking in sense of fair play.

"We congratulate Benny Bass on his magnificent triumph and designate him as a special guest of honor of the Veteran Athletes on February 1."

Directors of the veterans organization include Joseph F. Lehecka, Lafayette; J. R. "Lad" Wray, University of Pennsylvania; Louis Little, Columbia; Eddie Collins, captain of the world's champion Philadelphia Athletics; Harry Stuhldreher, Villanova; Ralph Beaver Strassburger, Norristown Publish; Louis J. Kolb.

The new West Point gridiron chief, who was graduated from the cavalry school at Fort Riley, Kas., and the staff school at Fort Leavenworth, Kas., has been Army line coach the last four years.

Jones will be stationed at the field artillery school at Fort Sill, Okla., after the end of the present scholastic year at West Point.

SHARKEY REFUSES TO BOX GRIFFITHS AT MIAMI

BOSTON, Jan. 2.—(AP)—W. F. Carey, president of the Madison Square Garden corporation, was unable to persuade Jack Sharkey to meet "Tuffy" Griffiths in next month's Miami bout during a four hour conference here tonight with the Boston heavyweight and Johnny Buckley, his manager. When the discussion ended, Carey told newspapermen that his plans prevented him from making any kind of a statement regarding his long talk with Sharkey and his advisers.

A member of the Sharkey party, however, said that Carey had tried to "cram Griffiths down Jack's throat" and that the Boston heavyweight had refused to accept him as his next opponent.

Sharkey, according to this information, told Carey he would agree to meet either Phil Scott or Vittorio Campolo and then left the conference. After his departure, Buckley and Carey talked for more than an hour without reaching any agreement.

After refusing to discuss the conference Carey said that he did not expect to be able to announce Sharkey's next opponent before he returned to New York. He admitted that he had arranged another meeting with Sharkey and Buckley but declined to disclose his plans.

Sharkey has already made arrangements to leave for Miami tomorrow night. He will be accompanied by his wife and their three children and grand parents.

ALTEX FIVE TAKES PLACE OF NORWALK AT Y SATURDAY

Owing to injuries and sickness the Norwalk Y. M. C. A. will not be able to appear here Saturday night. The game has been postponed to March 1st.

The Altex of New London will play the Norwich team here on Saturday night. The Altex are tied with the Sub Base for first place in the New London Y. M. C. A. house league. In an early season meeting the Altex defeated Norwich by one point in a fast and furious game. Norwich is out to even up the score in games.

The local boys will be at their full strength with Brown back from Toledo, Ohio. Pingree will also be fully recovered, and these two boys are hard to stop when they get going.

The crowds have been larger this season than at any time last year. The state league games have all been close, and there is no team in the league considered "weak." Saturday's game will give the locals a chance to see just how much of a chance they would have of winning the championship if New London Y. M. C. A. was in the State league.

The standing of the State league is as follows to Dec. 30th:

	G.	W.	L.	P.C.
Middletown	4	4	0	1.000
Norwich	5	4	1	.800
Bridgeport	5	4	1	.800
Greenwich	4	3	1	.750
Ansonia	4	2	2	.500
Norwalk	5	2	3	.400
Winsted	4	1	3	.250

PROVIDENCE INCREASES LEAD BY DEFEATING ARROWS

PHILADELPHIA, Jan. 2.—(AP)—The league leading Providence Reds increased their point total in the Canadian-American ice hockey race tonight by defeating the Philadelphia Arrows 3 to 1 in one of the fastest games here this season.

ADD PROVIDENCE INCREASES —.

Providence took the lead in the first period when L. Murray, a substitute, raced through the Arrows' defense to score a clean-cut goal. Andrews tied the score in the second period, but the visitors again went into the lead early in the third period. With only four minutes to play, the Arrows took all their defense men from the ice and sent in an entire team of forwards in a vain attempt to overtake the speedy Reds. It was while the defense men were absent that Providence scored its final goal.

Yale Beats Georgetown

NEW HAVEN, Jan. 2.—(AP)— Yale defeated Georgetown, 26 to 23 here tonight, to win the annual Yale vacation basketball tournament. The game was close throughout, with the lead see-sawing back and forth until the last few minutes of play.

Georgetown was in the lead when the second half opened, with the score at 13-12.

ARMORY A. A. VS. P. C. GIANTS TONIGHT

There will be plenty of action at the state armory, in Danielson, tonight when the Armory A. A. meets the Philadelphia Colored Giants. This is one of the best attractions to appear in this part of the state in some time.

The Colored Giants have with them the famous Nick Altrock of baseball in the person of Berthard. He has the reputation of being the best comedian on the basketball court in the country as he keeps the crowd laughing from start to finish. Aside from being a comedian he is as good a player as there is on the team. The Giants hold victories over the fastest teams in the country.

As there was a rumor started that reserved seats were on sale for the game the management wishes to state that there are no reserved seats as there are plenty to accommodate 800 people if necessary. There will be no change in the price of admission.

There will be a new man in the Danielson lineup tonight besides the regulars. There will also be a fast preliminary at 7.45 between the fast Radio Five of Danielson and a Putnam team as there is plenty of rivalry between these two teams. This game will be well worth seeing. Dancing will follow immediately after the main game.

CLOSE RACE EXPECTED IN COLLEGE BASKETBALL LOOP

PHILADELPHIA, Jan. 2.—(AP)—The path to the eastern Intercollegiate basketball title, competition for which will open here Saturday night, will not be strewn with roses, judging from the calibre of material on the squads of the six teams composing the league.

Yale opens the season with Pennsylvania, which won the championship for the second successive year last season. Each team in the league is carded for two games with each of the other members, the season concluding March 15.

Yale, Columbia and Cornell are expected to provide the sternest opposition to the Pennsylvania quintet.

Elmer Ripley, who had a successful coaching regime at Georgetown before moving up to New Haven, has one of the best squads Yale has had in years. Albie Booth, the dynamic atom of the gridiron, is among the many candidates who hope to give Yale a title on the court. Last year Booth was captain of the freshman team and above the average as a scoring guard. From last year's squad, Coach Ripley has Captain Gus Nanry, Ed Horowitz, Lou Nassau, a forward, Bayer, varsity baseball captain and a guard on the court, Joseph Townsend, captain of the freshman five of two years ago, and Farley, Patterson and Freeman.

Pennsylvania, with four veterans and excellent material from last year's freshman team, has a formidable squad for the defense of its title. Captain Edward Obley and Albert Brodbeck, forwards, James Peterson, center, and Thomas Magner, guard, remain from last year. Fred Ullrich, a forward, and Leonard Tanger, a guard, from the freshman team of last season, have made regular places on the squad. In addition, Coach McNichol has Al Ushka, from last year's squad.

Dan Meenan, at Columbia, has six veterans and six former freshmen as a nucleus for his squad. Gregory and Ballin, centers, and Obey and McGurk, forwards, and Captain Tys and Middleton, guards, are the Columbia veterans.

Coach Dolly Stark, National league umpire, lost nine of his Dartmouth prospects by graduation and ineligibility yet he expects to have a contending team throughout the season. From last year, Stark has Captain John Cheney, Fred Schmidt and Bob Biesel.

Albert Wittmer, Princeton's coach, has started the season with his brother Edward, captain of the team; Paul Carey, who has been switched from forward to guard; Red Bowen, center and guard, and Dinovics, forward, all veterans. Johnson, a substitute center last season, also is available.

Cornell may be the dark horse. Howard Ortner, skilled in tutoring basketball players, has four veterans and several freshmen who with game experience may form a combination that will be a constant threat. Earl Bessemer and R. W. Lewis, guards, W. Murphy and George Hall, forwards from last year, were instrumental in Cornell finishing in a tie for third place last season.

LOMSKI-ROSENBLOOM BOUT TONIGHT STIRS LITTLE INTEREST

NEW YORK, Jan. 2.—(AP)—Two of the best light-heavyweights in the boxing business, Maxie Rosenbloom of Harlem and Leo Lomski of Aberdeen, Wash., tangle for the fourth time tomorrow night in Madison Square Garden with nothing more than the "rubber" decision at stake.

The elimination contest ordered by the New York state athletic commission to provide a successor to the retired Tommy Loughran never did take Lomski into consideration. Rosenbloom, the slapstick, acrobatic star, lost his standing among the "favored four" by dropping a close decision in Buffalo to Jimmy Slattery, also overlooked in the early nominations. Slattery and Lou Scozza, also of Buffalo, must fight now for recognition here as the new titleholder.

Rosenbloom and Lomski have fought on three previous occasions. Leo won one bout, Rosenbloom one and another was a draw. Tomorrow night's ten-round feature should result in a definite edge one way or the other. Rosenbloom, fighting now in his best form, is a 6 to 5 favorite over the stiff-punching westerner who has not appeared to his former advantage of late.

Primo Carnera, the mastadonic Italian heavyweight, will attend the show as the Garden's guest.

GIANTS TO PLAY SLATE OF 23 EXHIBITION GAMES

NEW YORK, Jan. 2.—(AP)—The New York Giants today announced an exhibition game schedule of 23 games, opening March 8 and closing April 14. Two dates are open and the number of practice tilts will be increased to 25. Sixteen games will be played with the Chicago White Sox. The Sox and Giants train at San Antonio, Texas.

Two games will be played with the Cleveland Indians, the early major league opposition other than the White Sox thus far booked. Only two minor league clubs appear on the schedule, Memphis, of the Southern association, and Shreveport, of the Texas league. The exhibition season will be started on close-by college teams, the University of Texas and the Army.

Pitchers and catchers will report at San Antonio, Feb. 15, with the outfielders and infielders following two weeks later.

GONZALES GIVEN HIS RELEASE BY THE CUBS

CHICAGO, Jan. 2—(AP)—Mike Gonzales, one of the Cuba's first contributions to major league baseball, became a free agent today as the Cubs gave him his unconditional release.

Thirty-eight years old, and hampered by a weakened wing, the veteran Cuban backstop probably passed out of the major picture for good after 14 years of service.

Gonzales' release indicated the Cubs were convinced that Leo "Gabby" Hartnett's right arm has healed and that he would be ready to take his turn behind the plate in the 1930 championship drive.

Hartnett, who was out all of last season, recently pronounced his wing in good shape again.

Although Gonzales never was an exceptional hitter, he was a brilliant catcher. In his 14 years of major league service he compiled an all-time fielding record of [illegible]. His best fielding season was with the Cubs in 1926, when he averaged .982.

WALLACE SHARE OF PURSE ORDERED HELD

MILWAUKEE, Wis., Jan. 2—(AP)—The purse of Billy Wallace, lightweight, who lost to King Tut, of Minneapolis, in a bout here New Year's day, was ordered withheld today by the state boxing commission pending a hearing of claims the Philadelphian could have continued instead of quitting at the end of the eighth round because of injuries.

Tut was declared winner by a technical knockout at the beginning of the eighth round when Wallace failed to respond to the bell, claiming his back had been injured in a fall through the ropes. The boxing commission is to hear testimony of doctors who examined Wallace, to determine the extent of his injuries. It will also hear charges that Wallace held too much and failed to heed the referee's warnings.

COUGARS STRIKE BACK AND BLANKS MONTREAL

DETROIT, Jan. 2.—(AP)—Detroit's Cougars came out of the doldrums here tonight to blank Montreal's league leading Canadiens, 4 to 0, in a rough National league hockey game that brought Detroit a smashing victory after three successive defeats during the past week and a half.

The Cougars held a slim one-goal margin for two and a half periods and their lead was threatened every minute. At the turning point of the final period, however, the Canadiens, who played a hard game with the Chicago Blackhawks last night, tired and the Cougars piled up three more goals.

Bill Beveridge, Cougar goalie, made a dozen sensational saves during the play, his work being mainly responsible for Detroit blanking the hard skating Montreal outfit.

CAVANAUGH TO BE HELD AS COACH AT FORDHAM

NEW YORK, Jan. 2.—(AP)—Fordham university today announced the reengagement of Major Frank W. Cavanaugh as head football coach for the 1930 season.

The "iron major" who turned out an undefeated eleven at Fordham in 1929, declared two months ago that he did not expect to renew his contract, but university officials said today they had no difficulty arranging terms for a new one-year agreement.

Cavanaugh, one of the country's veteran coaches, has served at Fordham for three seasons and before that turned out winning teams at Boston college and Dartmouth.

Only two members of the 1929 Fordham team will be graduated in June. Cavanaugh will have a formidable array of veterans headed by Tony Siano, re-elected captain, with which to tackle a schedule listing seven major games in succession.

DISAPPOINTED SUITOR DRINKS IODINE IN DANIELSON

(Special to The Bulletin)

DANIELSON, Jan. 2—Jilted by a young woman, resident on the West Side, Thomas Muscatelle, of Thornton, R. I., drank part of a two-ounce bottle of iodine in a telephone booth in Woodward's drug store tonight and fell out unconscious on the floor in the store. A. A. Bonneville, the proprietor, a registered pharmacist, gave the man first-aid treatment and a physician was afterwards summoned to care for him. After a considerable period of time, Muscatelle regained something approximating his normal condition and later in the evening he was taken home by his father, who was summoned here by telephone.

Muscatelle had called the young woman on the telephone just prior to drinking the iodine, which he had purchased at another drugstore in town, and she had refused to talk with him.

REQUIRING QUALITY SEAL ON STATE'S BEST EGGS

Producers of Connecticut new-laid fancy eggs will be obliged to seal all cartons with the New England Quality Label, according to new rules and regulations issued by the state department of agriculture. The new rule which became effective Jan. 1 is a step toward standardization so that consumers throughout the state may readily recognize the product in any market by the label which used to seal the carton before the eggs leave the candling plant.

During the past year, 18 new poultrymen secured registry numbers from the department of agriculture to sell Connecticut new-laid fancy eggs. This made a total of 81 producers selling this product at the expiration of the registry number on Dec. 31, 1929, with a total of 189,771 birds in their flocks. The number of birds enrolled by producers of this grade of eggs increased more than 17,000 during the year.

Nearly three-quarters of a million New England labels have been placed on egg cartons since the inauguration of this service in August, 1928. During the past year 59 producers used 596,000 labels. While the remaining producers of Connecticut new-laid fancy eggs represent but a small proportion of the total number of hens, it is anticipated that through their use of the label in the future, together with the increasing popularity of the product, that the number of labels used in 1930 will go well toward the million mark.

More than 100,000 of the standard egg cartons have been used during the past year. In a letter sent to producers, Sidney A. Edwards, director of the bureau of markets of the state department of agriculture, calls attention to the fact that a few individuals are still using a non-standard carton. This he explains is not helping out the general situation so far as the standard appearance on the market is concerned. He expresses the hope that producers will voluntarily see the benefit to be derived from marketing all Connecticut new-laid fancy eggs in a standard box.

TRUMBULL HIGHWAY IS TO BE POPULAR ROUTE

That section of the Jonathan Trumbull Memorial highway which includes an uncompleted part of about eight miles between Andover, Columbia and Lebanon and has been in process of construction during the past summer, is practically completed. It is admitted to be one of the best pieces of water-bound macadam roads in eastern Connecticut and since its opening for automobile traveling its use has greatly increased. It has attracted a large part of the travel between Manchester, Rockville and Norwich and New London which it is expected will be very heavy after cold weather has passed. It is from 18 to 20 feet wide and all banks are fully protected with heavy posts and wire cables.

The road intersects the recently completed highway leading from New Haven and Middletown to Willimantic, crossing the Hartford-New London state highway at Marlboro and the Jonathan Trumbull Memorial highway at Columbia Center.

The Columbia Center crossing is still considered dangerous by residents in that locality. At the northwest corner is an old building used as a store and restaurant and very close to the line of the highway leading from New Haven. This building is so situated that approaching drivers cannot see other cars. Several accidents have already happened, although the motorists have escaped serious injury. A few days ago a car en route for Norwich on the Trumbull road collided with another headed for Willimantic on the New Haven-Willimantic road. They came together exactly at the center of the crossing. The car headed toward Willimantic was driven by Harold F. Carlson of Milton, Mass., and the one headed for Norwich was being driven by Theodore Lird of Hartford.

It is the general feeling there that the store building which obstructs the sight line should be moved 15 or 20 feet to the north, which would allow a clear sight for nearly a half mile.

Heating Concern Brings Suit

On a claim to collect for heating equipment which was installed in the Hollandersky block at 125-131 Bank street, New London, the Boynton company of Boston has brought suit in the superior court for $4,000 damages against Perry J. and Meyer H. Hollandersky and the William Van Kuren company, all of New London. It is claimed that the Van Kuren company installed the material in the building.

TUBERCULOSIS BOARD SEEKS PRICE ON McCOOK LAND

In preparation for the institution of condemnation proceedings under authority vested in the state tuberculosis commission, a formal inquiry has been directed to the McCook heirs in behalf of the commission, asking for what price they will sell about 390 feet of beach frontage at Niantic, it was learned this week.

If the McCooks refuse to quote a figure within a reasonable time or quote an excessive price then the machinery of condemnation will be resorted to by the state again, it was stated Wednesday. The commission is now awaiting a reply.

The commission has been endeavoring for six years to acquire the property, which adjoins the Seaside sanatorium on the east for the extension of its facilities for the treatment of children afflicted with bone tuberculosis. Since 1923, the McCooks have contested the commission's efforts by refusing to sell and by fighting in court.

Under special authority given by the legislature and with special counsel the commission undertook to acquire the land through condemnation proceedings, but during last summer the supreme court handed down a decision against the procedure. This decision affected hundreds of bills passed by the legislature and resulted in the general assembly being convened in special session to validate acts that governors had failed to sign within three days after adjournment of various sessions of the legislature.

The commission has the power to acquire land by condemnation and it is to be under this regularly constituted authority that the new proceedings are to be instituted.

NEW LONDON, LYME AND GROTON FORECLOSURE SUITS

New suits for the superior court, which are returnable in January and were filed here Thursday with Clerk John H. Walker, included the following:

Foreclosure of property situated along the westerly side of the highway between Mystic and Noank, owned by Frank L. Carpenter of Groton is sought in a petition brought by William C. Reed, trustee, of Philadelphia, against Carpenter. Reed claims to hold a $2,300 mortgage on the premises.

Foreclosure of property in the third school district, town of Lyme, is sought by Francis M. Simmonds of Great Neck, L. I., and William B. Dinsmore and Harry C. Barker of Staatsburg, N. Y., as executors under the will of William B. Dinsmore, late of Tuxedo Park, N. Y., in a suit against George C. Patton of New York city. Patton is alleged to have given his note for $1,000 secured by the premises sought to be foreclosed.

In the report of Clerk Yerrington, which concerned the yearly activities, as to members received into the church, letters of dismissal to other churches, baptisms, deaths, etc., a tribute was paid the wonderful life and helpful influences of a beloved member, the late Mrs. Mary Chapman Bailey, wife of the pastor. It was the decision of the church that the annual meeting of the League of Service and the yearly meeting of the church proper be combined; so at this point, Rev. Mr. Bailey relinquished the chair to Henry T. Frazier, president of the league.

Mrs. Sarah W. Chapin and Mrs. Walter T. Clark were elected members of the standing committee, for a term of three years, to succeed Miss Jennie L. NEW ENDEAVOR TO TIGHTEN UP DRY LAW ENFORCEMENT

Would Make Person Giving Bootlegger an Order Guilty of Conspiracy—Agreement Reached to Reduce This Year's Output of Alcohol by 15 Per Cent—Secretary Mellon Upholds Killings by Coast Guard of Three Members of the Black Duck Crew—Urges Transferal of Entire Dry Enforcement From the Treasury to the Justice Department.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 3.—(AP)— More stringent prohibition enforcement policies were undertaken today by the justice and treasury departments as the capital's controversy over the liquor situation continued to see them.

The department of justice asked the supreme court to rule that when a person gives a bootlegger an order requiring transportation of the liquor, he is guilty of conspiracy with the bootlegger to violate the prohibition law.

Prohibition Commissioner Doran announced that an agreement had been entered into the with the industrial alcohol manufacturers to reduce this year's output of alcohol by 15 per cent. Leaks of industrial alcohol have been pointed to by dry leaders as the main problem of prohibition enforcement.

Secretary Mellon returned to his post and announced that he was standing behind the coast guard crew which killed three men on the rum runner Black Duck in a chase off Newport last Sunday. He insisted the guardsmen acted wholly within the law.

At the senate, where the quarreling of republican drys over the Hoover administration enforcement policies started the agitation over prohibition, the statement making ceased, as each side watched developments.

There were indications that Senator Fess, of Ohio, would be the administration choice as chairman of the proposed joint congressional committee to study re-organization of the enforcement machinery—a post that Senator Fess has proposed be tendered to Senator Borah, of Idaho, chief critic of the Hoover enforcement program.

Senator Borah denied widely published reports that Mrs. Mabel Walker Willebrandt, former assistant attorney general in charge of prohibition cases, was the source of his information about conditions of dry enforcement of which he has complained so severely.

Solicitor General Hughes prepared the brief for the supreme court, asking it to reverse the decision of the circuit court of appeals which held that Alfred E. Norris, a New York banker, was not guilty of conspiracy in ordering liquor from a Philadelphian.

The treasury is making an independent investigation into the shooting of Black Duck smugglers. T. F. Finnegan, collector of customs at Boston; Joseph P. McKenna, special customs agent from Washington; and George N. Murphy, customs agent for Providence, are conducting the inquiry.

Assistant Secretary Lowman said the cases of the coast guard crew had been referred to the district attorney at Providence, R. I., and that the advice of this attorney would govern the course of the coast guard in response to the request that the men testify at an inquest in Newport.

Secretary Mellon asserted that all reports of the coast guard indicated that "everything was regular and that they were justified in doing what they were doing."

"Our men," he said, "only use force where it is absolutely necessary. The coast guard gave this boat warning and it was endeavoring to escape and the coast guard could not do less than they did."

Mellon also proposed today that all of prohibition enforcement be transferred from the treasury to the justice department. President Hoover has suggested that all of the enforcement machinery be transferred to justice except that dealing with the industrial alcohol permits, but Mellon would put this in the justice department too. The treasury secretary had no comment to offer on the public demands of Senators Norris, of Nebraska, and Brookhart of Iowa, republicans, for his resignation as chief enforcement officer.

THREE MEN HANGED IN CALIFORNIA YESTERDAY

SAN FRANCISCO, Jan. 3—(AP)—Three men died on the gallows in California today. Anthony Brown and Roy E. Stokes were executed at Folsom prison for participation in the fatal riot there on Thanksgiving day, 1927, while Louis Lazarus, convicted Oakland bank robber, was hanged at San Quentin penitentiary.

Brown and Stokes, two of six convicts sentenced to death as ringleaders of the Folsom outbreak which cost 11 lives, exhibited an air of braggadocio up to the last and died unflinchingly. They refused the ministrations of the prison chaplain.

Lazarus walked up the scaffold with a sickly smile on his face and appeared resigned to his fate. Through Rabbi Rudolph Coffee of Oakland he sent word to his mother that he went to his death smiling.

Lazarus, George Costello and William O'Brien were sentenced to death for slaying William McFarlin, a teller, in an attempted robbery of the Seventh street branch of the Oakland bank in 1928. Costello was hanged December 12 and O'Brien is awaiting decision on an appeal.

Before he died, Lazarus took full blame for the killing and said O'Brien "should not hang."

Brown entered the death chamber smoking a cigarette. He eyed the crowd of witnesses with a half smile of disdain. His last words to the warden were "make it snappy."

Ten minutes late Stokes was brought from the death row. As he neared the chamber he smiled and turning to Warden Court Smith said in a loud voice.

"Have a —— of bunch up here today."

Walter E. Burke and James Gregg are scheduled to hang at Folsom next Friday for their part in the 1927 riot.

TWO DEATHS CAUSED BY A NEW YORK HOTEL FIRE

NEW YORK, Jan. 3—(AP)—A man and a woman died tonight in a fire which swept through the air and elevator shafts of the annex building of the fashionable apartment hotel Marguery. Eight firemen were overcome fighting the blaze.

The fire was preceded by an explosion in the sub-basement and soon the flames shot up through the shafts to the roof of the 11-story building.

Mrs. Louis Leichtenheim, 60, died of a heart attack after she had walked to the street from her apartment.

The body of a man believed to be William Cass, an engineer in the building, was found in an elevator which had stopped on the fourth floor.

As smoke and flames swept through the building, the lights went out and the elevators stopped running. Firemen, who answered two alarms, ordered all persons out. Police carried from the building several persons who had been rendered unconscious by the smoke.

The hotel occupies an entire block between Park and Madison avenues and 47th and 48th streets. Fire Chief Kenyon said the fire probably started from a short circuit in the sub-basement. No estimate of the danger was obtainable.

Encourag[illegible] Report Of U[illegible] Treasury

WASHINGTON, Jan. 3.—(AP)— Increased income tax payments which totalled $1,185,317,860 in the last six months, enabled the government to start the 1930 calendar year more than $260,000,000 ahead of last year, when there was a treasury deficit of $163,475,696.

Figures for the first six months of the 1930 fiscal year made public by the treasury today showed that the public debt had been decreased $1,008,000,000 to a total of $16,300,931,501 in the last 12 months; that there was a surplus in the treasury on December 31 of $91,644,655; that the receipts for the six months were $2,077,539,516, an increase of $209,900,441 over the same period a year ago, and that income tax collections were $172,522,000 greater than in the first six months of the 1929 fiscal year.

Though the government finished the last calendar year more than $260,000,000 better off than the previous year, it was $35,410,850 behind last year in sinking fund requirements, which must be made up before next June 30. Up to the present only $274,514,950 has been set aside for sinking fund purposes.

The entering of the second half of the present fiscal year with a surplus of $91,644,655, was believed to indicate that Secretary Mellon's prediction that the government would end the fiscal year with a surplus of $225,000,000 might be fulfilled, despite a decrease of $160,000,000 in income tax due to the one per cent reduction granted on 1929 incomes.

Only part of the reduction will have to come from payments during the present fiscal year and indications were said at the treasury to point to continued heavy income tax receipts in the March and June payments on 1929 incomes.

The income of the government as shown by figures issued today is keeping up with estimates made by the treasury, which predicted that the total for the year would be $4,249,000,000. While the amount already received is little less than half the expected total, the heaviest income tax payments are yet to be made.

The total expenditures of the government were estimated at $4,023,000,000 and the statement showed that on December 31, the government had spent $1,985,000,000, or little less than half the amount.

Report Of National Campaign Expenses

Republican Committee Has Balance of $136,363 — Democratic Committee in the Hole $449,686.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 3—(AP)—Congress learned that the republican national committee has a balance of $136,363 and the democratic national committee has outstanding obligations of $449,686, in reports made today to William Tyler Page, clerk of the house of representatives.

In the documents filed in accordance with the law, the anti-saloon league also stated its financial condition as of December 31—showing that its treasury then was empty.

The statement of James W. Gerard, treasurer of the democratic committee, showed the democrats had reduced their obligations from $1,600,000 since December 31, 1928, after the Hoover-Smith presidential campaign, to $449,686 on the Dec. 31, 1929. The cash on hand as the year ended totalled $15,404.

During the past year, receipts of the democratic committee amounted to $1,462,203 and the expenditures to $1,446,798. The year previous the democrats received $5,444,958, including loans amounting to $1,600,000, and expended $5,342,348.

Of the present outstanding obligation, $375,000 is owed to the Bankers Trust Co., of New York, and $70,000 to John J. Raskob, chairman of the national committee, for loans. The remainder is owed for furnishings of the Washington office and for interest.

The report of J. R. Nutt, treasurer of the republican national committee, showed no outstanding obligations. The receipts for the year amounted to $49,411 and the expenditures totalled $198,685.

During the campaign year 1928, contributions to the republican committee, amounted to $6,541,748 and expenditures to $6,256,111.

The anti-saloon league report, filed by Edward B. Dunford, treasurer, showed campaign expenditures and receipts for 1929 each to amount to $11,927, the expenditures including $2,541 in campaign contributions which were transferred to the general fund of the organization.

The largest contribution to the democratic fund in the last quarter of 1929 came from the Texas state democratic executive committee and amounted to $3,419. The second largest donation was $2,500 from Mrs. Charles Cary Rumsey, of Middleburg, Va., and the third largest was $100 from Mrs. F. Winn and friends of Philadelphia.

The remainder of the contributions were grouped with those giving less than $100 each and were not carried individually. The other contributors were announced in quarterly reports.

Among contributors to the anti-saloon league fund were James M. Gamble, Cincinnati, $300; William Albert Harbison, New York, $250,; H. W. Eakins, Springfield, Ohio, $120, and $8,516 in contributions of $100 or less. The report showed that some funds were transferred to the anti-saloon league of Michigan, Nebraska, and Kentucky for miscellaneous purposes.

NATIONAL CAPITOL WAS DAMAGED ABOUT $3,000 BY FIRE LAST NIGHT

WASHINGTON, Jan. 3—(AP)—Flames shot skyward from the capitol of the United States tonight in a blaze more spectacular than that which ruined the white house executive offices on Christmas eve.

After forty-five minutes of desperate work, firemen extinguished the fire in the artists' studio on the top floor of the house side to the west of the huge white dome. For a while destruction of the document room where historic records of the nation are stored was threatened. These were damaged by water and smoke.

Carl Moberly, one of the artists, was carried unconscious from the studio. Investigation of the cause of the fire late tonight was awaiting his recovery.

Flames shot from the room upon the dome of the capitol as firemen sped from every corner of the city. Within a few minutes, throngs were banking the lawns of the capitol to watch the fire-fighters scaling the walls in the glare of hundreds of lights which illuminate the dome.

David S. Lynn, the capitol architect, and police immediately began an investigation to determine the cause of the blaze. It was said that a lighted cigarette might have been responsible.

The alarm was turned in at 7 p. m. by members of the capitol police force whose attention had been attracted by smoke some time before the source was determined. A general alarm brought companies from all corners of the city.

Fire Chief Watson announced the flames had been extinguished 45 minutes later. He estimated the damage as slight, and the figure was placed at $3,000 by Mr. Lynn.

SURVEY INDICATES YEAR OF BUSINESS PROGRESS

Public Works, Railroad and Utilities Construction Calls For Expenditure of $4,700,000,000—President Hoover Says the Report Does Not Include Industrial and Factory Output—Survey Made by the Department of Commerce is Complete as to 16 States and Partial as to 13 More.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 3—(AP)—President Hoover said today that the campaign for increase in construction and improvement work to take up unemployment was showing most encouraging results with indications that the undertakings would be larger in 1930 than in 1929.

His statement, made at the regular Friday press conference, was based upon surveys and reports from a number of state governors and the railway and public utilities industries which show a total contemplated expenditure of $4,700,000,000.

Complete returns from 16 states and partial returns from 13 others showed that the total value of the public works to be undertaken by those states and the counties and municipalities within them, together with federal government public works, would total $1,560,000,000.

The president's statement follows:

"Our drive for increase in construction and improvement work to take up unemployment is showing most encouraging results, and it looks as if the work undertaken will be larger for 1930 than for 1929.

"The department of commerce now has complete returns from the governors of 16 states covering public works to be undertaken in 1930 by the state, municipal and county authorities. They have partial returns from 13 more states. The total so far reported, and including the federal government, is about $1,550,000,000 and in nearly all cases larger than for 1929. The surveys are coming in daily, and should be completed by mid-January.

"The preliminary estimate of the railways for construction and betterments for 1930 was $1,050,000,000 and for the public utilities $2,100,000,000 includinf the telephones.

"The total of these items so far is $4,700,000,000. This does not include the balance of the state's industrial and county work, nor the building construction, nor the industrial and factory improvements, which latter are now under survey by the special business committee.

"The steel companies informed me this morning that the effect of the drive is already showing in their orders which are beyond their expectations."

The work thus initiated is being carried forward by an executive committee of 21 business leaders, which gathered early last month. This committee will meet here between January 20 and 25 to consider, from a general viewpoint, further steps that may may be taken to maintain national business equilibrium.

A statement today by the chamber of commerce of the United States said that business as reflected in reports received from members of the national business survey conference committee disclosed no loss of the momentum it had on December 5, and indicated that plans were being made with confidence to meet the problems of 1930.

"Since the conference met on December 5 there has ben an absence of development which would justify concern," the statement said. "The developments of this four week period have been calculated to increase confidence as to what lies ahead.

"On the side of production, industry generally shows a disposition to base its programs on anticipated normal business activities during the new year. In the field of distribution the reports reveal an active end-of-the-year season which closes with inventories low and the usual spring pick-up expected.

"Staple lines of consumer goods maintained reasonably normal levels and in some cases show advances. Construction and related supply and equipment industries wait to some extent upon the arrangement of credit facilities but look forward to expanding building and improvement programs with the arrival of favorable conditions."

Pilots of two navy planes spotted the wreckage. Immediately, water craft engaged in the search sped to the scene and dropped grappling hooks in an attempt to lift the locked remnants of the two air cruisers.

NO ARRESTS YET FOR SEAT PLEASANT BOMBING

SEAT PLEASANT, Md., Jan. 3.—(AP)—Expectations of police that an arrest would be made in the New Year's day bombing, which took the lives of a young bride and her infant sister, had not been fulfilled tonight as preparations went forward to bury the victims of the fatal Christmas package in the same grave.

Despite three days' investigation by Maryland and District of Columbia authorities the identity of the person who sent the gaily-wrapped high explosives to the bride of Herman Brady at the home of her father, remained hidden behind the flimsy evidence left in the wrecked home.

Two suspects were said to have been placed under surveillance, but the few nails, a small coiled spring, bits of brown paper in which the dynamite was wrapped and tales of jealousy surrounding the marriage of the slain bride apparently had not provided the investigators with the evidence they needed to make an arrest.

WILLIMANTIC, Jan. 3.—Fire took toll of property estimated at $[illegible] in value in Willimantic during the year 1929. That figure is revealed in summing up the fire losses as shown in the records of Acting Chief Michael J. [illegible].

Out of a total of [illegible] fire calls, the great majority of them of the still, or telephone kind, there were 44 losses reported. The results of that month alone indicate somewhat of a laxity on the part of property owners in having chimneys and flues properly cleaned, about 60 per cent of the calls being for chimney fires. Several of the fires, some of which caused property damage, were caused by children playing with matches or carelessly-thrown cigarettes.

January—[illegible] calls; three losses amounting to $[illegible].

February—[illegible] calls; five losses amounting to $[illegible].

JEWETT CITY

MARVELOUS BOAT TRAIN A MAIL TRAIN NO LONGER

(Special to The Bulletin)

JEWETT CITY, Jan. 3.—Postmaster W. T. Crumb has received notification from the post office department that beginning Monday next the make-up of the morning train, which has served this section for much more than a half century, will not include express and postal service. Train 704 will now be operated as a No. 1 freight, and on the same schedule. All mail dispatches in and out of Jewett City will now be accomplished by overland truck service. The one-time ornate, and nothing short of wonderful, Boat Train, thus makes its last run as a mail train. This passing, which is now but little deplored, has not figured among the lists of sudden or violent deaths, but has been a slow failing and wasting away, what might be classed as a demise by easy stages. All through the 70's and 80's this flying night express never deigned to stop at the little village of Jewett City but went through at a sixty-mile clip, like a ball of fire in a cloud of smoke and dust. Such knights of the throttle as Bill Cooper, Thomas O'Neil and Pat Fitzgerald, sitting up on the high seat of the old Sagamore and Shetucket, used to open her up, coming down the straight line below Joe Roode's saw mill and through Tadpole pond. When she flew down by the old station hitting on everything, with the warning whistle shrieking, the night boat train was sure some sight to see.

One night, the division superintendent, P. St. Michael Andrews, agreed to have the boat train stop that the late James O. Sweet might catch the night boat for New York. The station agent here then was the late S. E. Phinney and he let it be known to a few close friends that the boat train was going to stop. Wildfire was slow stuff compared to the way this news went through the village streets. The train was due here then at 10:17 p. m. By 9:30, the road in front of the old hotel was black with people. Ira Lewis stood on the top stair, while John Sharkey, the section boss, walked up and down with a red lantern. O'Neil came around the bend above Granny Avery's pond as though his next stop was to be Norwich. Mr. Sharkey waved his light, fire flew from the shrieking brake shoes, the natives' eyes stood out, nobody spoke. The great night boat train stopped. Conductor Chaffee stepped down—Mr. Sweet hurried aboard.

The big Sagamore gave a couple of blasts as the spinning drivers slipped, then caught, and in a great cloud of steam the crack train of the Norwich-Worcester, was lost in the darkness below the town.

During the late 90's, the boat train made a regular stop here, and so became a fine local accommodation. Of late, this once premier, de luxe, combination of railroad equipment, has degenerated into a mixed train, with a make-up as uncertain as was its schedule. Some of the still admiring old-timers regret to see the passing of a train that was once so grand and fine, and are sorry today that, actually its time has come, and the signal has been given for Curtain.

TO DISCUSS PLAN OF RAISING C. OF C. DUES

(Special to The Bulletin)

DANIELSON, Jan. 3.—President W. H. G. Herklots of the chamber of commerce called a meeting of the board of directors of the organization late this afternoon to discuss, among other things, the advisability of recommending to the members when the first monthly meeting of the year is held next Tuesday evening that the dues be changed from a flat $5 per year to a graduated scale, under which some members would pay as high as $25 per year, while others will pay lesser amounts down to $5. President Herklots will give a detailed explanation at next Tuesday evening's meeting as to why the changes are being recommended and as to why membership seats should be grouped and classified.

Under the plan he proposes the chamber would have a fund of about $1,000. Given this fund, it would be unnecessary, as has been the case in the past, to go to this or that merchant and ask for contributions from time to time throughout the year to meet the cost of one proposition or another. Mr. Herklots said this afternoon that he feels that those who likely would come in the $25 membership class would, at the end of the year, be money in pocket, for this group always contributes the most generously on what might be termed special assessments. The matter will be presented in detail next Monday evening. Mr. Herklots proposes to make the chamber of commerce an active and efficient agency for advertising the town's interests during the present year.

The Alice-Eleanor shop announces an alteration sale. The entire stock of dresses, underwear, hosiery, gloves, leather bags, handkerchiefs, house dresses, linens, bathrobes and negligees offered in this special sale at 20 per cent discount from regular prices. Also special reductions on silk and wool dresses. Lot of $16.50 and $25 dresses for $9.98. Another lot of $25 dresses at $12.98. Still another lot at 20 per cent of regular prices.—adv.

Inquiry at sources where information relative to the subject is likely to be accurate indicates that there is much less unemployment in Danielson and other parts of the town of Killingly than was the case a year ago in January. This is aside from temporary short time in some of the town's manufacturing plants, and temporary it is. The forecast is for even better business here in 1930 than in 1929.

An objective of those who spend thought and time on the never-ending search for new industries for this town is to induce some silk manufacturing concern to locate here. The town has available plants for such an industry. It also is in a position to say to the owner or owners of any such concern that might be interested in coming here that this community is practically immune to labor troubles, the bane of the lives of silk manufacturers in centers where such industries are largely concentrated. Danielson is about the only sizeable community in eastern Connecticut that has no silk industry.

High temperature, heavy rain and fog combined today to further cut the ice that had formed on ponds and lakes from which the annual ice supply is taken for Danielson. As things were late this afternoon there is little prospect of getting ice within the next fortnight, even with plenty of cold weather meanwhile.

The borough, as soon as suitable weather arrives in the spring, will resume its sidewalk building program, inaugurated last fall when a walk was built along the easterly side of Mechanic street, one of the longest streets in the borough. Much sidewalk building is planned to be carried out this year in the central sections of the borough. Half of the cost of the walks will be paid by the borough, half by the abutting property owners.

Local people were present at the semi-public installation of the newly elected and appointed officers of Laurel court, No. 1, Order of Amaranth, at Springfield. The following officers of Harmony court of Danielson were in attendance: R. M. Annie B. Knox, R. P. Sidney W. Bard, secretary, Catharine K. Bard, assistant matron, Ethel W. Parkhurst, M. in E. Ethel G. Ingalls, Past R. P. Norman D. Parkhurst. A large number witnessed the impressive ceremony. Mrs. Ethel G. Ingalls, grand marshal of the Order of the Eastern Star of the state of Connecticut, is to install the officers of Betty Putnam chapter of Woodstock next Monday evening and the officers of Faith chapter of Jewett City next Thursday evening.

Dr. James L. Gardner, one of eastern Connecticut's oldest practicing physicians, is critically ill at his home in Central Village. Sergeant George L. Gardner of the Danielson state police barracks is a son of Dr. Gardner's.

Business men here were generally interested today in the announcement that the New Haven road is to discontinue operating the boat trains. It appeared to be generally conceded, too, that the transporting of mails, express and the lighter shipments of freight by truck will be just as satisfactorily conducted on the new arrangement as under the old. It is not to be understood that all freight that comes into Danielson will come by truck. Much freight that comes into Danielson will come by truck. Much freight will continue to come in by train.

Newly elected officers of Dorcas Rebekah lodge are: Mrs. Eva Bradford, noble grand; Mrs. Delia C Weeks, vice-grand; Mrs. Pearl M Horton, recording secretary; Miss Annie L. Page, financial secretary; Mrs Grace Ennis, treasurer; Winthrop E. Short, trustee for three years. The officers are to be installed on Friday evening of next week.

J. W. Powdrell, president of Powdrell & Alexander, will be the speaker at the regular monthly meeting of the chamber of commerce to be held next Tuesday evening. This is to be an open meeting, and President W. H. G. Herklots of the chamber is anxious that numbers of citizens avail themselves of the opportunity to be present. Various matters having to do with plans for the advancement of the welfare of Danielson during 1930 are to be discussed.

Clergymen from Danielson and other places in this vicinity were at Trinity church, Norwich, today by invitation of the Episcopal churches of that city and of Yantic to attend a meeting of the New London county ministry. There were morning and afternoon sessions at which church problems were discussed. Several of Danielson's churches were represented.

Dr. W. H. Judson, health officer, said this afternoon that there are no cases of diphtheria in his jurisdiction. One case has been reported from the West Side.

The first session of the Killingly town court this year was held this morning. Judge W. Fenner Woodward imposed a fine upon a man presented on an intoxication charge.

Miss Jeanette Gareau has resigned as teacher of the school in the valley district of Killingly and has been succeeded by Miss Reubenna Hicky, a graduate of the Worcester Normal school.

Edward N. Curtis today announced the purchase of the business of the Ennis Danielson-Providence motor trucking business, which is to be consolidated with that of the Curtis Transportation business of Danielson.

Mrs. Alphonsine Piuze has returned to her home here, after spending the holiday season with relatives in Stamford.

There was a program and refreshments were served incident to the holding of the annual meeting of the Westfield Men's club this evening.

Belated registrations continue to come through, day by day, for Danielson motorists. Some cars that have been out of service since the end of the year are now in use again.

Tuesday next, members of the Fortnightly club are to meet with Mrs. J. H. Smith of Broad street.

Thomas Muscatelle of Thornton, R. I., who drank iodine in a drug store here last evening, was reported today to be quite fully recovered from the effects of his indiscretion.

PUTNAM

MCGARRY DENIES HE IS SEEKING POLICE CAPTAINCY

(Special to The Bulletin.)

PUTNAM, Jan. 3.—In a statement late this afternoon Captain John J. McGarry, commanding officer of the city's national guard unit emphatically denied rumors to the effect that he had made application for the appointment to the captaincy of the Putnam police department. Captain McGarry said that he had learned of the various rumors concerning his so-called ambitions for the police department but asserted that all were without foundation. Although Captain McGarry denied that he had applied for appointment to the office made vacant by the death of Captain William J. Jarvis, he did not make any further statements as to his intentions for the future in regards to the police captaincy. Captain McGarry is a well known Putnam business man, an ex-mayor having served two terms as chief executive of the city and has been commanding officer of the headquarters company of National Guard since the organization of the outfit. He has an excellent military record and is regarded as a strong candidate, should he allow his name to be presented to the common council when the matter of appointing a new police head is acted upon at Monday's meeting.

Another prominent figure among the candidates mentioned for the captaincy is Albert Marion, a well known resident of the north end of the city. Mr. Marion like others has not openly declared himself a candidate for the office but the prospect of his candidacy is being widely discussed throughout the town. But as the time for the filling of the vacancy approaches, Sergeant George H. Liard, acting head of the department seems to be leading the race by a safe margin, according to unconfirmed reports.

A general order posted in the offices of the New Haven railroad this week to the effect that after Saturday, January 4, the age old boat trains of the Norwich branch will be no more, has caused a great deal of sentimental regret among many people of this city who in the by-gone years enjoyed their Sunday evening jaunts to the depot just to get a fleeting glance of the train as it passed through this city. Then when the train was scheduled for a stop at Putnam the platform was filled evenings with a curious group bent upon watching who got on and who got off of the train enroute to New London to meet the boat for New York.

A few years ago, with the advent of motor coach transportation the New Haven officials began the removing of regular trains between New London and Worcester and at last the passenger accommodations of the 60 year old boat train were tossed to the ages when the train became a combination mail, baggage express and freight hauling. So with the passing of the boat train went the last line of passenger service on the Norwich branch, with the exception of the State of Maine express which makes the run at early morning hours making stops only at the stations of New London, Norwich, Putnam and Worcester.

A general alarm from box 41 at 6:05 o'clock this morning was for a fire in the Peloquin rooming chambers on Livery street. The blaze was in a bed which had taken fire when a roomer before arising attempted to enjoy an early morning smoke and dropped a lighted match or sparks into the bedclothes. Before the arrival of the firemen the flames and smoke pouring from the window presented the aspect of a serious fire, but a pail of water quickly subdued the fire. Apparatus at the Central and Smith street fire stations responded to the alarm but their services were not required.

Members of the age old Putnam Horse Theft Detecting society, organized many years ago to aid inefficient constabularies in the apprehension of horse thieves, will meet on Monday, January 6 in the community rooms of the Putnam Savings bank for the purpose of disbanding. The society in its early years was proficient in its ambitions and in more than one instance led to the undoing of a horse thief which at the time was considered a serious crime. The advent of the automobile quickly spelled the end of this society and in recent years its annual meetings have been nothing less than a time honored custom. It is believed that much interest will be manifest in what will perhaps be the final meeting of the organization, since announcement of the session will bring together veterans who in the days of horses and carriages contributed freely of time and money to maintain protection for the horse owners.

At a meeting of the North Eastern Fish and Game club held Thursday evening at the Odd Fellows hall on Pomfret street, E. C. Rogers of Main street, Byron Morse of Woodstock avenue, L. M. Woodward of South Main street, Allen Kenyon of Sabin street and Irving Paine of Pomfret and George Whitney of Thompson were named as delegates to attend the annual meeting of Connecticut Fish and Game societies to be held in Seymour on January 10. Among the major topics to be discussed at the state gathering will be legislation that will further the aims of the sporting men.

Town Clerk Henry N. Benoit said this afternoon that the increased rate applicable to hunting and fishing licenses for the present year is being favorably received by sportsmen. The rates were increased by an act of the 1929 session of the legislature, in order to procure additional revenue for the state department of fisheries and game to be used in the stocking of ponds, brooks and game preserves. Already several sportsmen have applied for a renewal of their hunting and fishing permits and have done so without complaint as to the increased charge, Mr. Benoit said.

Friday was the 18th day since record of any arrest for any violation whatsoever, has been entered on the blotters at the local police station.

Acting Captain of Police George H. Liard said yesterday that the present state of tranquility in police affairs is one of the longest in several years.

In regards to vital statistics of the towns of Putnam history, repeated itself during 1929 by registering 28 more births than deaths. Figures were obtained from records at the town clerk's office. During the year there were 184 births recorded and 156 deaths occurred. These figures are considerably in advance of the statistics compiled during the preceding year.

The town records also showed that Dan Cupid, love's champion, scored 125 knockouts during the year of 1929, which indeed is a record for a year's activities in Putnam. Town Clerk Benoit said that the number of marriages taking place here during the past year exceeded the record of 1923 by almost 25 weddings. From indications the death rate in the town has not increased during the past year but the birth rate and the number of marriages has increased by a substantial margin, Mr. Benoit said.

Mrs. Prescott B. Cummings of Eastham, Mass., has arrived in Pomfret where she will spend the remainder of the winter.

Officer Alphonse Dubrieul, a supernumerary patrolman is doing duty in the shopping district nights until the appointment of new officers in the police department which will take place on Monday evening at the first meeting of the new council of city government.

M. E. PASTOR TO ANSWER SERIES OF LIVE QUESTIONS

Sunday evening at seven o'clock, Rev. A. Elwyn Tingley has invited the Baptist young people to attend the M. E. church service. Mr. Tingley will speak on Susan Claspwell's book, "The Girl Who Strayed Away." After the sermon the following questions will be answered:

"Is it right for government agents to use arms in capturing suspected rum runners? Should a minister use tobacco? Should not the clergy give more time to preaching the Gospel and to intercessory prayer than to fads and fancies? Why are there always some people who are useless in any church? Name a new book on the Life of Christ. Why are so many devices necessary to finance our churches? Is divorce wrong, and should a Christian minister marry anyone who has been divorced? Is the radio hurting the churches? How can the Protestant church prosper when it was started by a bad man like Henry the Eighth? How may we hold young people in the church?

Sunday evening on account of stormy weather the boys of the Young People's church attended the Baptist young people's meeting, at Danielson, inviting them to have part in the young people's dedication service Jan. 12th.

There was a New Year's eve social and watch night service at the Baptist church. There were business and devotions and stories of study at New England Conservatory of Music and Brown university, Northeastern and Bates, by Miss Ruth Goldberg, Charles Roper, Herbert Codlin and R. W. E. DeWolfe. Refreshments served included salted peanuts, tangerines, bananas, cake, saltines and hot chocolate. Games were played and the old year closed as the new year opened with a watch service, ending with the Doxology played by Dorothy Mortimer, and with prayer by the pastor.

LEONARD BRIDGE

Friends and neighbors of Mrs. Julia Geer were sorry to hear that she is confined to her bed with a broken hip sustained early Sunday evening when she slipped and fell while descending the stairs from her son's, Clarence Geer's apartment to that of her other son, Elmer Geer, who lives on the ground floor of the Geer homestead. Dr. Edward J. Howland of Colchester reduced the fracture. Mrs. Geer is resting as comfortably as can be expected.

Mr. and Mrs. Amos J. Lillie of South Manchester have been visiting at Rexford Cummings'.

Mr. and Mrs. Elmer Geer and son Harold spent Christmas day with Mrs. Geer's sister, Mrs. Wesley Porter, at South Manchester.

MAIL BY TRUCKS

Norwich has received the announcement that it is going to experience a change in the method of receiving its mail and that starting next week it is to be served by truck instead of by train.

So far as known this is a change which is being made without consultation of the people of Norwich or any of the other communities which are to be served by truck. Under the circumstances, wouldn't it be an excellent idea if the business men of Norwich, or the chamber of commerce, looked into this a bit and ascertained whether this is going to be an advantage or a detriment?

Norwich knows that every time it has experienced the loss of railroad postal service it has gotten less satisfactory mail service. It has experienced the loss of trains and the consequent loss of mails without making what might be called a man-sized protest. It has suffered for a long time in silence and now it is faced with the statement that what railroad mail service we have on the New Haven road is to be taken away and truck service substituted.

Is this going to be what we need? Are we going to get service between postoffices or are we going to have our mail which should be sorted en route carried to some one point to be sorted and sent back over the route the next day? [illegible] witnessed the passing of the trains because it has been recognized that autos have been taking away the business, but with the trains have gone the mails and before the situation becomes any worse and before we get pushed into the classification of Voluntown as a postoffice isn't it time to find out just what sort of a mail service we are going to face when served by trucks?

Norwich and the points along the Norwich & Worcester road need not poorer but better mail service. Are we [illegible] to our existing and possibly increasing handicaps?

TIMBERLAND PROTECTION

If we can judge by statements made to the Society of American Foresters at Des Moines this week, the forest situation in this country has not been greatly improved as the result of the efforts which have been made. As a matter of fact, it seems to be growing steadily worse with most discouraging prospects unless something effective is done.

In the past, stress has been laid upon efforts in the way of reforestation. Now the demand is for the regulation of lumbering and the stopping of devastation.

At Des Moines it was pointed out in a report by Major G. P. Ahern and Gifford Pinchot that forest devastation on privately owned timberlands, where most of the destruction goes on, is among the most serious of all dangers to our future prosperity. Today forest destruction is six times greater than forest growth. With this devastation there must also be considered the loss by fire. What that means can be grasped when it is stated that each year with unregulated cutting and uncontrolled fires forest land half as large again as Connecticut is devastated.

When we stop to realize this and add to it the fact that many of the states import nine-tenths of the lumber they use, and the knowledge that we have long since exhausted the most of our wood pulp timber supply and are constantly feeling the tightening grip of Canada in this respect, we can appreciate the tremendous rise in the actual present money cost which devastation is causing. Further than that, the fact cannot be dodged that the consumer is paying for all this.

If the statements in the report referred to are correct the trouble lies in the manner in which the commercial timberland owners are disregarding the public interest. It seems to be a case of getting out the profits without regard for the consequences and with no thought of the public welfare concerning the timber of the future.

Regulation of this business is what is demanded. This doesn't refer to the farm woodlots or cutting on small areas, which is a state problem, but lumbering on large commercial timberlands. It is only what other countries have been forced to do, what it is claimed can be done constitutionally and what, if it is going to be done, should be started before the waste is piled up any higher. This, with reforestation efforts, should work to a decided benefit.

THE INDIAN SITUATION

The question of independence for India is not a new one before the British government. It has been raised before and each time it has been handled in a manner to meet the situation temporarily. But India hasn't gotten what it sought, and it is not probable that it will this time. In fact, it is evident that it would be satisfied for [illegible] assurance as to when it might expect it.

Two years ago a congress of nationalists in India named a committee to draw up a constitution and try to bring the various factions in India together. There was an approval of the constitution less than a year ago at a conference where the several parties assembled and it has been pointed out that the document has been drafted in such a form that it will meet the situation whether there should be actual independence or just a dominion government established.

In addition to that, the British have had a commission making a study of the situation in India. To an extent there has been shown a disposition to make certain concessions in the way of increased home rule, but the report has been of such a character as to give no very definite information. It hasn't taken any decisive position for or against the idea of a dominion government. As might be expected, it does not recommend independence for India.

It was desired by the leaders in India that the British government should come to a decision by the first of this year. That having been regarded as unlikely, the latest conference of the Indians at Lahore is the result, and it gives an impressive indication of the determination that is back of the movement. The attempt at assassination of Lord Irwin, the British viceroy of India, doesn't display the right sort of attitude. It is enough to cool British sentiment and make it felt that India is not ready for any much greater degree of self-government, but the demand for a change there cannot be judged by any such deplorable affair. The British must understand that there is a real problem there which cannot be downed by trying to sidestep it.

SAFER FLYING MACHINES

While the desire was to obtain one, it will probably not be claimed by the Guggenheim fund that it has obtained a "foolproof" airplane as the result of the competition which it started. There failed to develop as much of a contest as was expected or desired, but the judges found it possible to make an award. The meaning of this is that there had been a sufficient advancement in safer airplanes to warrant the giving of the prize although there was not the participation nor the keen competition that was sought.

As for the need of a foolproof airplane there can be no question. It has been long apparent that flying is going to increase from year to year. Perhaps its increase will not be as rapid as has been the case with automobiles but the continued demonstration of what can be done in navigating the air has created an interest and a desire to participate. More are anxious to fly and the number would be even greater if there was more certainty that accidents would not occur.

Airplane accidents are of a kind which the average person does not like to contemplate. Likewise flying is an experience that is out of the ordinary, something that does not appeal to many, but which would be indulged in freely by large numbers if there was greater assurance that all would be well.

Thus it [illegible] though the Guggenheim competition has not resulted in all that was expected, it has, nevertheless, resulted in an advancement, a development that gives increased assurance that certain difficulties which have been apparent can be eliminated under the control of a skillful pilot. Naturally there is interest that it is an American plane that has won.

The competition has served to direct attention to certain weaknesses disclosed in flying. The plane that has been awarded the prize has done well in meeting the tests. The competition must be regarded as one that has made progress even though it has not reached the coveted goal. This will mean that others will continue to strive for the mark that has been set and in that endeavor new achievements are to be expected through the incorporation of new ideals or the development of new types which gave promise but which have not as yet met requirements.

NO MORE WORLD WARS

When General Jan Smuts arrived here from South Africa it was not as a stranger. He is known for the part which he has played in connection with war and government in South Africa and for the service which he has rendered in the World war and the peace that followed.

Thus, when he speaks concerning peace, he speaks with understanding and is certain to secure an attentive audience. General Smuts has made it clear that he is an ardent supporter of the league of nations. Because of that he does not deny the people of this country a right to their own views in respect thereto. He doesn't try to force his opinions upon others but he is strong in the belief that even though the United States is not a member of the league, and as he will probably admit shows no prospects of being, it can cooperate with the league in peace movements for the general good of mankind.

As to that there will be no disagreement. In fact, this country has already demonstrated that it is always anxious to do what it can in behalf of international peace. It has been instrumental in instituting action that has had this very thing for its purpose and it is impossible to overlook in this connection the value that is attached to the Kellogg peace pact. It may be belittled by some but it is, nevertheless, a step in the right direction.

General Smuts is sincere in his efforts to spread the gospel of peace, and yet he is not unmindful of the difficulties involved. He believes, however, that while it may not be easy to end all war that there will be no more World wars. In that view he will be generally supported. Today sentiment is strongly against war and efforts will be directed to all possible preventive measures. The great problem is to carry the education to the point where war will be resisted when some crucial test is faced.

EDITORIAL NOTES

The results of the Christmas trade will not be definitely determined until the January checks are received.

Three days are long enough to prove to some people that it is easier to make resolutions than to keep them.

Along with January comes the opening of state legislatures and gubernatorial addresses on conditions and needs.

THE MAN WHO TALKS

We are now fairly launched on a new period of time, but so far as human vision can detect there is no radical difference between the last day of the old year and the first day of the new as far as general winter conditions are concerned. But business affairs which involve the receiving and expenditure of money are greatly modified by the time element. If a man is hard pressed for money and has a note that is due on the last day of December, it makes a good deal of difference whether that last day of December is 1929 or 1930. What would our banks do, and all other financial institutions were there no convenient time divisions? It might, however, be a joy to a certain type of character that dreads the supposed humiliation of growing old. But whether you use figures or not to express age you cannot, by the use of paint or putty make an old face look young. Whatever you do Old Father Time leaves his mark.

Of course the main distinction between the last day of the old year and the first day of the new is in our attitude of mind. On December 31, 1929, every normal individual who has arrived at an age when he can reflect with mature deliberation becomes introspective. The mind goes back over the year that is rapidly closing. This is something we can hardly help doing even if we are disposed to do so. The following are some of the questions that arise: In the main has the year been a success or a failure? Have I realized what I set out to get at the beginning of the year? Along what lines have I reached the mark that I set out to get last January? Have I done as well in school as I decided to do when the school year began? If not where does the blame lie? Have I risen in my trade as I said I would months ago? Have I succeeded in letting rum alone as I resolved? This is a season for heart searching.

If the last day of the old year is naturally one of reflection, the first day of the new year is just as likely to be one of anticipation. We lay out the general outline of our plans, mark out the lines of our policy in dealing with this, that and the other thing, and in our enthusiasm build our air castles. Now some of these, at the very least, will succeed; others will fall to the ground because a kindly Providence sees that they would do us harm. But if some of the really good things marked out fail of realization it will be partly due to the fact that we have let our own commendable enthusiasm die out. We must realize that nothing worth while will be accomplished apart from the very "blood of our souls." Unless we throw ourselves, body, soul and spirit into what we do, there will be no constructive work. "Let us do with our might what our hands find to do."

Another great value of this seasonal reflection upon the past record is that we can see our failures more clearly from the distant standpoint. Their outlines are more clear cut as seen from the vantage ground of December 31. I have enough faith in the human race to believe that the majority of people want to cut down their tendencies to wrong thinking and acting to a minimum. If this feeling takes hold of them they will look without flinching on all four sides of their errors, and say with grim determination, "never again!" It may somewhat ruffle one's pride to do this, but if there is a genuine desire to escape the same error again, pride and feeling will be thrown to the winds. I am fully convinced that there is more of this earnest desire for self improvement [illegible] they get the credit for. Unfortunately we are more apt to keep tabs on a man's failings than his virtues.

It is a great satisfaction to realize that there is a steady improvement in the general conditions of human life. It is difficult to recall a single important feature of human life that is not growing better year by year. Evidence of this is on every hand. Compare the conditions of labor today with what they were when men of in middle life were boys! Think of the long hours, the small wages, the absolute control of capital. What a change for the better has come to the workingman in recent years! Compare also the opportunity for a liberal education for the boys and girls of this age with what it was in the middle and latter part of the nineteenth century. There is no phase of human life that does not have better chances "of life, health and happiness" today than it did fifty years ago. And yet the pessimist still harks back to "the good old times." As a matter of fact the best times are now.

Was Alexander Pope right or wrong when he penned this immortal passage: "Hope springs eternal in the human breast"? This at least is absolutely true that every normal mind hopes for the best, and yet it is unfortunately a fact that few comparatively act at all times as to reasonably expect the best results. There is a mighty wide gulf between our hoping for the best results and our efforts to get them! We all of us hope to have good health during this new year, but in all human probability a large proportion—possibly not the majority—will smash every known law of hygiene before March first, and will whine about their hard luck. How many will snivel over their indigestion who usually bolt their food like certain animals that are kept in pens! O what an uplift to human society it would be if for one year every person would strive to reach what he hopes for!

Beyond all question the roses will be handed to you by kind old Dame Nature during 1930, but don't forget one thing, and that is there will be some thorns attached. Sharp thorns and sweet perfumes are near neighbors. The Almighty is pleased when you and I enjoy the perfume which He has made inherent in the rose, and it may be that He has also given it the thorn to stimulate our intuitions: to make us alert in the presence of danger. Life needs to be full of suggestions that put us on guard against the harmful. The little newsboy in our big cities is made keen and resourceful because there is so much he has to overcome. By overcoming one has greater power to overcome. The year of 1930 will call forth every power we possess, and the reward will become proportionate to the intelligent struggle we put forth to meet these obligations.

Above all we ought to realize that in our efforts to make the year of 1930 successful we have something more than our own unaided faculties to lean upon. Most of the failures of life are due to two things: first, the lack of energy, and secondly, the want of faith. The highest success in this life cannot be attained if either energy or faith is lacking. The reward for using the strength we have in a rational and for a reasonable object is more strength. But most of all we ought to take hold of the infinite hand that is outstretched before us, because there are many hard spots in life that we cannot go through by ourselves alone. To go alone would be like taking a great steamer for Europe with no captain and crew to guide us. Whatever failures we may make this year, we must not fail here. When the human soul is joined with the divine there can be no such thing as failure.

LATE "YANK" ADAMS, NORWICH MAN, WAS MIRACLE BILLIARDIST

Col. Frank B. Adams, who died last Sunday in New York, aged 81, was for 20 years or so the champion finger-billiardist of America. Members of the Arcanum club vividly recall the exhibition he gave there years ago on one of his visits to this city, where he was born and reared. As far back as April 24, 1874, The Bulletin printed an item copied from the Bangor Daily Commercial, which said:

"Frank B. Adams of Norwich, Conn., in a game of billiards at the Bangor hotel scored 1,300 points, he using his fingers and the gentleman who was his opponent employing the cue. This is said to be the biggest run yet made."

On May 8, 1874, The Bulletin also printed the following, credited to the Toledo Blade:

"This forenoon one of the most remarkable exhibitions of billiard finger shots which it is possible to conceive of was given by Frank B. Adams of Norwich, Conn., at the warehouse of O. D. Benjamin on Madison street. Mr. Adams challenged any one in the hall to so place a ball or number of balls in position where a count would seem impossible. Several very difficult positions were selected, but with apparent ease the ball was made to carom and jump around the table, down upon the object balls just in the right time, and with so delicate a touch that it seemed to be a thing of life.

"Nothing was too complicated or difficult. Caroms, draws, masses, follows, and even rail shots were executed with the greatest ease and effect. Mr. Adams is stopping for the present at the American house and is in no way connected with the billiard or sporting world, merely playing for the amusement of himself and friends."

The subjoined article appeared in The Bulletin of Jan. 29, 1878:

Wonderful Finger Billiard Playing.

"One of our local celebrities is gaining repute in the metropolis. The following is from a New York special to the Boston Globe of yesterday morning:

"A few invited guests assembled in O'Connor's Union square billiard rooms, Saturday, to gauge the capacity of 'Yank' Adams, a new comer. Adams is a native of Norwich, Conn., is about thirty-five years of age, stout and well built. His play, like that of Izard, is with his fingers, but unlike the Frenchman, he does not place his ball, but continues his play from the spot where the last shot left it. His execution is simply marvelous, and his game is so strong that he is abundantly able to cope with the best expert who depends upon the cue.

"In his exhibition Saturday he accomplished all the ordinary shots, such as draws, cushion-caroms, follows and spreads, and then executed others of a most difficult nature, all of which were made with ease. In one of these shots he made his ball take four different directions, all in the space of a square foot.

"In another he effected a spread between two balls occupying the opposite lower corners of the table, he playing from the upper rail. In another he made a double-carom, playing from red to red at opposite ends with first one white ball and then with the other, the two taking different directions and coming together on the dark red.

"Placing three hats in a line, with the two reds at the lower end of the table, he starts his ball from the upper end with a twist, sending it around and between the hats in a sinuous course, and ends only when the carom is made. Among his most astonishing shots are those made on the rail, but in all that he does he shows the most remarkable skill.

"Adams is self-taught, has never seen Izard or any other great finger player, and never played a game of billiards until a year ago. He is said to be able to grant discount any player on this side of the Atlantic. He is to give exhibitions of his skill at O'Connor's for one week, beginning Monday evening."

The "Two-Bottle Trick."

Two days later, on Feb. 1, 1878, The Bulletin followed with this item:

"The New York papers have abundant accounts of the feats in finger billiard playing of 'Yank' or 'Grizzly' Adams. The Express speaks of the concluding of one evening's entertainment with the 'two-bottle trick,' which consists of the caroming upon two balls upon two soda-bottles, eighteen inches apart, and then, taking a cushion, carom on another ball. Mr. White was grand discounted by Mr. Adams. The latter fooled with Mr. White until he scored fifteen; then within three minutes—almost as fast as the marker could count—Adams ran seventy-five points. He will give other entertainments this week."

With the passage of years Adams lost nothing of his old-time skill, as is evidenced by this account which appeared in The Bulletin of Sept. 26, 1881:

"Yank" Adams' Feats.

"'Yank' Adams, the finger billiardist, is still astonishing audiences in New Haven. Describing his feats The Palladium says:

"He placed fifteen balls along the short rail, the space between the balls and rail being wide enough to admit of the passage of the cue ball. On the end ball he placed a piece of chalk, and then caroming on a ball a few inches away from the first of the fifteen, he counted on each and froze to the end ball without disturbing the chalk. Another shot consisted of hitting the cushion on each side of a white ball four diamonds from the end on the long rail, counting on a ball two diamonds beyond and on another in the center of the short rail.

"The exhibition concluded with one of his most difficult shots. He placed three hats on the table, the last hat being at a distance of about two feet from the rail, and at the rail were two balls. Mr. Adams gave the ball a twist at the other end of the table and it passed around the three hats, describing the letter S, and broke the two balls at the rail."

On Nov. 30, 1896, some new miracle shots by Adams are reported in The Bulletin:

A Wonderful Billiardist.

"Friday's New London Globe said:

"Possibly the most wonderful billiardist our country boasts of is 'Yank' Adams, the digital player. One can imagine his power over the ivories when he plays any one 5,000 points (three-ball game) or no count. So completely has he the table in his mind's eye that he [illegible] with his back to the table and allows one to place the balls in any position. After being told the location of the balls between the diamonds, he shuts tighter his eyes so as to more fully absorb the position, and with an underhand throw makes the shot at the first trial. He throws a ball with a Clarkson curve, describing a letter S in between three hats, apparently defying the laws of motion.

"Fifteen balls are placed in a line two inches apart. A piece of chalk is carefully placed on the last ball. Yank throws the hand ball half way up the table, which returns to the spot, describes a semi-circle, hits the first ball, then makes a continuous carom on the fifteen, barely reaching the last ball, in fact freezing it without dislodging the chalk.

"The most important shot he made recently while giving an exhibition in Norwich was what is known as the 'Pomery Sec' shot, that of placing two champagne bottles two feet apart, a ball placed on each bottle, then another ball placed five feet away. The hand ball is made to jump from the bottle to bottle and take an 'English' in the air, making a carom on the third ball.

"Mr. Adams is a native of Norwich and a brother of Henry J. Adams."

In course of time Mr. Adams attained a position of affluence. The Bulletin of July, 1905, says:

"Half Million for Holdings"

"Col. and Mrs. F. B. Adams are the guests of Henry J. Adams, their brother, at Gales Ferry. It may be of quite a little interest to know that the colonel, who in his boyhood was known as 'Grizzly' Adams when in the minstrel business, and later on as 'Yank' Adams won the championship of the world as a billiardist, was a Norwich boy. Twenty years ago he entered the newspaper field in Chicago, meeting with the same success as in his previous occupations. Less than three years ago he invested in California mining and oil stock, which has increased in value over 2,000 per cent and yesterday he received an offer by wire of half a million for his holdings. Fifty years ago the colonel carried the Bulletin on the Falls and Norwich Town routes."

A Washington Bystander

By KIRKE L. SIMPSON
Associated Press Staff Writer

WASHINGTON, Jan. 3—About the time Pat Sullivan of Wyoming reached Washington to take his senate seat he encountered Senator Jim Watson of Indiana, republican leader in that body and an old friend.

The senate, Watson reminded the newcomer, was busy on tariff. In point of fact, it was busy with the wool schedules, which might be expected to be of considerable interest to any man from Wyoming.

"About how many sheep do you run nowadays, by the way, Pat?" Senator Jim asked, in effect, his eyes twinkling a bit.

"Oh, perhaps 20,000 head," said Sullivan.

"Well," said Watson, "possibly you'd rather not vote on these wool schedules."

"The divil I won't," snapped Senator Pat. "If I had another 20,000 head I would not have been able even to pay my fare down here to get into the senate."

Three New Ones.

Sullivan and Baird of New Jersey, appointed to succeed Ambassador Walter Edge, joined up with the senate the same day.

Then, a day or so later, Grundy of Pennsylvania got his seat. That added a new trio to the row of back-seat republican juniors sometimes referred to by Johnson of California as the senate freshmen.

And it raised the number of senators sitting by gubernatorial mandate to seven.

That is an unusually large number of senators by appointment. The other four are Allen of Kansas, succeeding Vice President Curtis, Hastings of Delaware, who succeeded DuPont, McCulloch of Ohio, succeeding Burton, and Brock of Tennessee succeeding Tyson.

The Moving Chair.

Due to more or less crowded conditions on the republican side, and also to the fact that Vare would not appear on the floor although he figured on the payroll, this idle desk was moved over to the back row on the democratic side, flanking Senator Blease of South Carolina.

The irreverent press gallery referred to this isolated and vacant republican seat as "the Cherokee strip."

When Senator Grundy came along with his credentials from Pennsylvania, the ex-Vare desk was hastily moved over to a position on the already well populated republican back row.

Since it was going to be used, obviously it could not remain isolated among political foes.

Blease had considerable to say about that Vare desk, also its absence. And its withdrawal left a gaping void in the democratic rear rank position.

At that, Senator Grundy probably would have found a perch on the democratic side amusing. He bids fair to be just as popular there personally as across the aisle on the republican side.

"Old Joe" seems to have a bent for that.

YOUR HEALTH

If We Stepped Out.

By W. H. Salus, M. D.
Johnstown, Pa.
(From Gorgas Memorial Institute)

In a recent Grange convention great stress was laid upon the dearth of regular physicians in rural districts. It is true that the young man just entering into the world of medicine seeks a city life and a city practice. It is also true that the older men who started out in rural districts are dying off without successors.

And it is the rural dweller who is to a great extent to blame. He is one of the most gullible persons in the world. He buys mail order glasses, fitted by a man over two thousand miles away, who requires for diagnostic purposes only the age, height, weight and two dollars and ninety-eight cents. He takes any kind of medicines advertised as good for man or beast. He falls for all sorts of mechanical devices from electric insoles to artificial ear-drums. He boils and brews his own herbs and barks, because someone told him it was good for this or that ailment. He does not stop to think that each drug has a duty to perform. He comes to town and seeks out the advertising quacks, but if his Ford needs a new piston ring he usually seeks out the best mechanic to repair his car. He lives too close to his village doctor to see the good qualities in him, and consults him only in emergency or when all other methods fail.

I have had varied experience with out-of-town folks and have yet to hear one speak kindly of his home doctor. You cannot expect a young, vigorous, well-taught physician to settle down and cater to folks who won't place confidence in him, who won't be trusting, and who won't be satisfied. This may not be the only reason for the exodus of the country doctor. They may have many more reasons, but this is one of the reasons. Had people made it more attractive for the young man this same young man might have made himself content. But they have driven him off and now they want him back again. It was a hard task to drive him off—it will be a harder one to bring him back, and where the villager left off, the city dweller is beginning. He is driving the regular physician from pillar to post.

A doctor must have character, morals, intelligence, education, premedical training, and funds enough to clothe and feed him for seven long years. It is seven years of drudgery without intermission, seven years without income, seven years of preparation and expense, and seven years of apprenticeship that ends with a beginning. But after he has made all this sacrifice he finds that people go to some one with a fancy name and a gift for advertising, ask nothing about what he knows nor where and how he learned it, and take their chances.

But just let us suppose the entire medical profession abandoned their work. What would happen if the doctors went on a strike? How would the entire world take it if we decided to follow this procedure? What would they do if we surrendered the fields to the "cults" and "paths." Can you imagine the destruction and havoc we would create? Epidemics would reign, disease would spread, hospitals would close their doors, research laboratories would be stilled. Billions of dollars would be lost by the cessation of the manufacture of drugs and chemicals, an industry primarily created by us. Training schools for nurses would be no more. Travel would be suspended, death would be at every door and pandemonium would reign the world over. All this would happen If We Stepped Out.

The doctor wants to help you, but he is a bit tired of being an emergency man, after a home remedy or a patent pill or a new exercise that may be just the wrong thing for you, has done you more harm than good. Make him the guardian of your health. Make him the friend of your family. Get him to look you all over once a year or so. The ounce of prevention that avoids illness is worth all the tons of cures that the world has ever seen.

Sunday Morning Talk

Shall He Knock in Vain?

Behold, I stand at the door and knock; if any man hear my voice, and open the door, I will come in to him, and will sup with him and he with me." Rev. 3:20.

A noted artist was showing a friend his picture, "Jesus at the heart's door knocking." After the friend had looked at it for some time he said, "It is a wonderful picture, but you have not put a latch on the door." To which the artist replied, "The latch is on the inside."

Jesus is standing at the door of each heart. At the door of your heart and mine. How many times He has knocked. How long have you kept Him standing there? How much longer will you keep Him waiting! How patient. How loving, how gentle. Must He knock and knock in vain? Great as is His love for us He will never enter a heart uninvited. The latch of your hearts door is on the inside! How can you, how can I reject such love? May we open wide our hearts and bid Him enter. May we not allow the pleasures and cares of this life down His call. If we have not experienced the great joy may we start the new year by making the Christ supreme in our hearts and bid Him take full possession. Our greatest regret will be that we kept Him waiting so long. How happy and peaceful will be the coming year if we do our part. Such wonderful love deserves our whole hearts devotion. How small and inferior our whole hearts devotion seems when compared with His.

"Behold, a Stranger at the door;
He gently knocks, has knocked before;
Has waited long, is waiting still;
You treat no other friend so ill."

ROAD PLAN VIEWED AS ALASKAN BOON

FAIRBANKS, Alaska—(AP)—Alaskan miners are predicting even greater mining activities if the proposed Seattle to Fairbanks highway is built.

Frederick W. Bradley, president of the American Institute of Mining and Metallurgy, predicted that such a highway not only would open up the mineral wealth of the region, but would aid greatly in permanent settlement.

"This proposed road strikes me as an excellent idea," he asserted. "The highway, running through northern British Columbia and back of the Alaskan panhandle, would open up an immense, well mineralized district to development and would well repay the Canadian and United States governments with the resources it would tap.

"Development of the Alaska-Juneau and Treadwell-Yukon mines, both of which are of great interest to the entire northwest, is progressing rapidly.

"The district is destined to be one of the foremost mining districts of the American continent. With a highway connecting the region with Canada and the United States development would be so rapid as to be almost miraculous."

Alaskan residents look on the proposed road as a first step into a great network which would spread entirely over the territory.

It is seen here as a means of unfolding the beauties of Alaska to a great army of tourists that would doubtless follow the opening.

Complete equipment for producing talking motion pictures will be placed in the Philadelphia Police Training school, it has been announced by Director of Public Safety Lemuel B. Schofield. The director, who recently obtained conviction of a highwayman through introduction of the prisoner's "talkie" confession, believes talking films will be of great value in both police and firemen's training schools.

POETRY

All To Myself

All to myself I find the way
Back to each golden yesterday,
Faring in fancy until I stand
Clasping your ready, friendly hand.
The picture seems half-true, half-dream
And I keep its color and its gleam
All to myself.

All to myself I hum again
Fragments of some old-time refrain—
Something that comes at fancy's choice—
And I hear the cadence of your voice,
Sometimes 'tis dim, sometimes 'tis clear,
But I keep the music that I hear
All to myself.

All to myself I hold and know
All of the days of long ago—
Wonderful days when you and I
Owned all the sunshine in the sky.
The days come back as the old days will,
And I keep their tingle and their thrill
All to myself.

All to myself! My friend, do you
Count all the memories softly, too?
Summer and Autumn, Winter, Spring,
The hopes we cherished, and everything?
They course my veins as a draught divine,
And I keep them wholly, solely mine—
All to myself.

All to myself! My friend, do you
Think of the things we used to do,
Think of the things we used to say,
Think of each happy, bygone day.
Sometimes I sigh and sometimes I smile,
But I keep each olden, golden while
All to myself.

—Wilbur Dick Nesbit (1871-1927).

The True Romance

All that I know of you is that you wore
A light blue dress.
Your age fifteen, perhaps a little more

I found you on a forest road, in pain,
And rescued you:
And felt like Galahad, and thought, "It's plain,
Romance is true."

And meant to read, while yet my heart was stout,
The Faerie Queen,
To see if Spenser knew so much about
A rescue scene.

I doubt if any of the knights who won
Their spurs that way,
Found in the doing even half the fun
I did, that day—

Because, not being rigidly encased
In frigid steel,
The arms that carried you, however chaste,
Your charm could feel.

And I have left the Faerie Queen unread,
For it appears
Far better to remember, in her stead
Your fifteen years.

—Herbert Jones.

KALEIDOSCOPE

Protests reaching the ministry of state of Holland regarding Sunday flying asserted that congregations left many churches en masse when they heard the motors of the airship Graf Zeppelin.

Wives of Yale graduate and professional students help their husbands pay for education, the report of the university bureau of appointment reveals. The report says fifty-seven wives earned about $50,000 while their husbands were studying. Undergraduates are not permitted to have wives to help them through school.

Fred G. Smith, game warden at Ellsworth, Me., had an experience with a bull moose. As Mr. Smith approached his home in his car he saw the moose crossing the field behind his barn and coming toward the road. Mr. Smith, who always carries a camera in his car, reached around to find it and on obtaining it saw that the moose was directly in front of him. He applied his brakes and, although the car was going very slowly, the car skidded into the moose, which straddled the radiator. He calmly disengaged himself and started across the field with Mr. Smith at his heels taking pictures.

A public company has been formed with a capital of 500,000 pounds, with the object of developing the natural mineral resources of the Dead Sea. The company plans to obtain a concession from the Palestine and trans-Jordan governments permitting the examination, exploration and development of the sea's resources and the preparation and marketing of all kinds of mineral salts. The majority of the directors must be British subjects or British and Palestinian subjects. The present directors include the earl of Lytton, Israel B. Brodie, B. Flexner, E. Friedman, E. W. D. Tennant, F. M. Warburg, T. G. Tulloch, Moise Novemeysky and David Lyell. It is understood that sufficient working capital already has been provided and no public issue is contemplated.

That the name "Mexico" comes from "mexictli," the Aztec word for the native maguey or pulque plant, is the conclusion of Enrique Juan Palacios, of the Mexican direction of archaeology, who has searched for its origin in native Indian documents, as well as in other sources of information. Every Mexican school child knows that his national coat-of-arms is an adaption of the ancient Aztec hieroglyph or place-name for "Tenochtitlan," as pre-conquest Mexico City was called. Mexico's shield, therefore, is at least six centuries old. It represents an eagle in mortal struggle with a snake, which he holds with one claw and his beak. With the other claw he is balanced on a spiny nopal cactus growing on a rock in the middle of a lake. This picturization of an extremely difficult position illustrates the Aztec fable of the founding of the ancient city that is now the capital of the Mexican republic.

There is a gray squirrel which has "adopted" a store in a suburb of Philadelphia. When a customer enters the store, leaving the door open, the little animal flashes through, leaps to a show case and then to a bin back of the main counter. HEBRON JUSTICE'S COURT HOLDS CROWDED SESSION

WILLIMANTIC, Jan. 3—Hebron townspeople turned out enmasse at the Gilead town hall tonight to attend a court session at which four cases bristling with local interest were tried. Myron Hills faced two charges, driving while under the influence of liquor and operating without a driver's license, the evidence on this charge being that the man had never possessed a license. It was estimated that he had been driving for some fourteen years without a license, although his automobile was properly registered at the time of his arrest Sunday, Dec. 29. Hills was apprehended after a chase by State Policemen Roy B. Pettengill and Henry Heinold. He pleaded not guilty to driving while under the influence of liquor and guilty to the second charge. Officer Pettengill said that the man had admitted drinking cider. Grand Juror Richard W. Hubbard recommended leniency. Justice of the Peace J. Banks Jones said that in consideration of Hills' wife and children he would nolle the charge of driving while under the influence of liquor. On the charge of driving without a license Justice Jones imposed a fine of $10 and costs, the costs of $22.85 were ordered paid at once while the accused was given one week on probation during which he is to pay the fine. Hill said nothing in his defense.

Gared Tenant, Jr., 20, and McDonald Coates, 19, sons of prominent Hebron people, were charged with the theft of an automobile tire and rim from Arthur Keefe of Hebron. Their respective fathers were appointed guardians ad litem. Tenant pleading nolo contendre and Coates guilty. Judge Charles Brown of Colchester appearing on behalf of the Tenant youth asked for mercy and petitioned for a lecture from the court as fully meeting the aims of justice. Officer Pettengill, who with Deputy Sheriff Harvey Collins of Columbia made the arrests testified that the youths had admitted taking the tire which was disposed of in a Willimantic garage where it was recovered by the officer. The boy's claim that the taking of the tire was intended as a Christmas eve prank, Justice Jones in admonishing the boys for their behavior suggested that parents forbid their sons, the use of automobiles. He imposed a fine of $25 and costs of $16.95 in each case. The court ordered the costs paid at once and made the novel provision that during a 60-day probation sentence the boys must personally earn and pay the amount of the fines.

In the fourth case, Ralph Glass, elderly Hebrew resident of the Willis Woods road, Hebron, was charged with keeping liquor with intent to sell and reputation. He pleaded not guilty and was fined $300 and costs, on which he immediately took an appeal to superior court. Bonds of $500 were named and furnished by Fitch N. Jones. Prominently displayed in the court room was a collection of liquor seized in a raid on the Glass home last Wednesday night by State Policeman Pettengill and Deputy Sheriff Collins. The collection included nearly three quarts of moonshine, over two cases of beer, a ten-gallon keg and a two-quart jar of wine and a small still rigged up in a pail. Glass was facing a second offense, having been previously convicted of liquor violations in the federal court. Judge Brown pleading for Glass said that the liquor was kept by the man for use on Jewish holidays and for a stimulant for Mrs. Glass, who is described as a semi-invalid. In commenting on the case Justice Jones said that he did not believe the accused was over solicitous of his wife's welfare by tendering her the kind of liquor seized by the officers.

WILLIMANTIC, Jan. 3.—William Jahnes, Jr., 11, son of William Jahnes, of 337 Jackson street, was placed on the critical list at St. Joseph's hospital tonight suffering from punctures of the liver and kidneys and other injuries sustained when he was crushed against a garage door by a heavy bus operated by Gail B. SAYS PROPOSED STREET IN NEW LONDON IS DUMP

The city of New London is made a defendant in a suit for $20,000 damages and equitable relief brought in the superior court by Louisa Bishop of New London. The plaintiff claims that she was the owner on June 1, 1917, of about 35 acres of land situated on the southerly side of Broad street, New London. On July 2, 1917, the court of common council commenced to lay out a highway 60 feet in width, for the most part across the property of the plaintiff. The council appointed a committee to assess damages. The street went to Cedar Grove avenue.

The complaint is made that the proposed highway was never completed and that the strip of land has not at any time been opened or been used by the travelling public for highway purposes. The papers claim that the city has wrongfully maintained a dump for refuse and materials upon.

OBITUARY

William E. Keough

The death of William E. Keough, formerly of Norwich Town, occurred on New Year's day at his home in North Adams, Mass., and the funeral was held there Friday morning in St. Francis church with burial in Hillside cemetery.

The North Adams Times of Jan. 2 said:

William Edward Keough, 53, of 96 Holden street, died yesterday afternoon at 4 o'clock in his home following an illness of three hours from acute indigestion. He was about yesterday morning and attended mass. About 1 o'clock he complained of feeling ill and a doctor was called but he grew rapidly weaker until death ensued.

Mr. Keough was born in Norwich Town, Conn., and came here 12 years ago. For a time he worked as a woolen spinner and then he and Mrs. Keough purchased the Hodge property in Holden street north of Grand Army hall and since that time had conducting a rooming and boarding place.

Mr. Keough was a man who had made many friends during his comparatively brief residence here. He was well read and versed in topics of the day, a good conversationalist and excellent company.

He took great pride in his home and was constantly at work improving its appearance. His lawn and flower garden he took great pride in and in the summer months he spent many hours beautifying the property. An early riser, the sidewalk in front of his home was always the first on the street to be cleared of snow, a fact often remarked by those who had to travel that way in the early morning hours. He was an attendant of St. Francis church and a member of the Elks and of the Eagles and a staunch democrat.

METEOR WITNESSED IN NORTHERN OHIO

CLEVELAND, Jan. 3.—(AP)—The startling appearance of a large meteor diving earthward in a brilliant stream of fire, was witnessed early today by hundreds of persons in northern Ohio and western Pennsylvania. So far as could be ascertained, they said, the meteor burned itself out while passing through the earth's outer layer of atmosphere, and did not hit the ground.

At Greenville, Pa., however, the appearance of the meteor was accompanied by a detonation and distant rumble, which made it a possibility that a part of the flaming mass reached the earth. Witnesses of the phenomena at Harrisville, Pa., said its light was so brilliant they could not ascertain the direction it came from. At Norwalk, Ohio, the flaming body was described as colored both red and blue.

Clevelanders said the meteor appeared between 5:30 and 5:45 a. m., and that it lighted the city brilliantly.

TURPENTINE CAUSED FATAL FIRE ON SARATOGA'S GIG

Saratoga, gigantic naval airplane carrier, bringing death to two sailors, severely burning four others, was sought today by aides of a naval court of inquiry.

Naval authorities said their report on the accident which also destroyed the gig, valued at $25,000, and scorched the steel sides of the Saratoga, would be forwarded to superiors at Washington for such announcement as they might see fit to make.

At the hospital where the injured men were confined, it was learned they probably will recover from the burns which at first were feared might prove fatal.

UNION

Many patches of the snow of Sunday and Sunday evening remain.

A pleasant evening, with exercises and a tree, brought a good number of children, parents and friends to the church Dec. 24. Miss Helen Hutchins and her pupils of the Red school gave a dramatization of Dickens' Christmas Carol. This was interspersed with the singing of Christmas carols and hymns followed by individual recitations. In the absence of Miss Robinson, teacher of Rock Meadow school, Mrs. R. A. Bradway had charge of the program from Rock Meadow. These pupils gave recitations and songs. Raymond Skopek sang Silent Night in German, and his younger brothers, Jerry and Richard, sang some beautiful Christmas hymns. The pastor, Rev. William Bragg, led in congregational singing and gave an excellent address. A young Santa Claus, in bright red coat, assisted by willing helpers, distributed the gifts.

The silver wedding anniversary of Mr. and Mrs. George Heck was celebrated at their home at Rock Meadow Christmas day and evening. Mid-day dinner was served to 35 relatives and friends, including the former pastor and his wife, Rev. and Mrs. Henry A. Coolidge of South Killingly. Other guests were present in the afternoon and evening. Christmas carols and instrumental music were enjoyed and refreshments were served. The host and hostess received many gifts. During the day and evening, 80 guests were present from Springfield, Monson and Sturbridge, Mass., Thompsonville, Killingly, Willington, Ashford, Stafford and Union. George E. Heck and Miss Gazella Martincsak were united in marriage Dec. 25, 1904. The wedding was in Ashford, at the home of the bride's sister, Mrs. John Csatlos, and the officiating clergyman was Rev. George C. Chappell. Mrs. Heck was born in Hungary and came to this country in 1900. The birthplace of Mr. Heck was Sutton, Mass. They purchased their present home in 1906. They have two children, a son, Edwin, now at home, and a daughter, Miss Julia, a graduate nurse in Springfield, Mass.

FINDING OF ABANDOND CAR LEADS TO VICE DISCOVERY AT NEW LONDON

(Special to The Bulletin)

NEW LONDON, Jan. 3.—Louis Beebe, formerly of Niantic, and Carrie Neiman, a former inmate at the State Farm for Women, Niantic, were arrested this afternoon by Detective Sergeant John Cavanaugh and State Police Officer Frederick Johnson, charged with lascivious carriage. The pair, in default of a surety on their bonds, was locked up. They will be in the police court tomorrow. The arrest of the couple was purely accidental. The state police a day or two ago found an automobile abandoned on the state road, between Norwich and Willimantic. Search of the auto resulted in the finding of the registration, which was in Beebe's name, and gave his residence as Niantic. An investigation followed, which revealed that Beebe was residing at a Golden street house. The officers went there and from Beebe it was ascertained that when the auto broke down he was compelled to leave it in the highway. The more Beebe talked the more he revealed of his career during the past past few months. He admitted having lived as man and wife with the Neiman woman from the time that she left the State Farm for Women. On this admission the two were arrested.

Many streets in the city are in need of the immediate attention of a repair gang and unless repairs are made numerous automobile owners will be forced to expend money for new springs. Some of the holes are deep, but there are any number of depressions from three to five inches in depth and from 12 to 15 inches in circumference. Montauk avenue, perhaps, is the street that needs the most attention, for many holes exist on both sides, from Willetts avenue to Bank street. North Bank street is another highway sadly in need of attention.

Check For Firemen

P. LeRoy Harwood, Ocean avenue, has tendered the fire department, through Chief Thomas Shipman, his check for $25 because of the efficient manner in which the firemen handled a chimney fire at his residence on Christmas eve. The money will be added to the firemen's fund.

The elder Muscarella said that his son drove away at 11 o'clock this forenoon in the former's Ford delivery car and had not returned. The car carries Connecticut registration N—4494.

NEARLY 1,500 BLUEJACKETS SAIL SOUTH FROM SUB-BASE

(Special to The Bulletin.)

NEW LONDON, Jan. 3.—The number of enlisted men stationed at this port was depleted by close to 1,500 today as a result of the navy control force sailing for Guantanomo. As a result, there will be noticeable absences of bluejackets on the streets and in the theatres for the next three months, for the uniformed men and their ships will not return here until some time in April. The fleet departing was composed of the tenders Camden and Bushnell, 12 submarines and the mine squadron boats, consisting of the Oglala, Mahan, Maury, Lark and Quail. The fleet is in command of Rear Admiral F. B. Upham, commander of the control force. The Camden and her submarines were the first boats to leave the harbor, clearing at 9:30 o'clock, and they were followed by the Bushnell and her undersea boats at 11:30. The mine planters departed between 9 and 11 o'clock. All of the sailors were given shore liberty last night but were compelled to be aboard their respective craft not later than midnight.

JUGGLING AUTO BUYING GETS HARRY SQUIRES IN JAIL

(Special to The Bulletin.)

NEW LONDON, Jan. 3—Harry Squires, 30, of 32 Colt street, a former taxicab driver, was in the police court this morning charged with concealing property with intent to defraud. He was fined $150 and costs and sentenced to three months in jail, but execution of the jail sentence was suspended. Squires, however, went to jail, for he was unable to pay his fine, which means that he will be incarcerated six months if friends do not go to his aid and pay the fine. Squires purchased a Nash sedan of J. D. Avery, Inc., last April on conditional bill of sale. After making his initial payment and obtaining possession of the auto, Squires drove the car from the city and state and failed to make additional payments. When Squires could not be found, complaint was made to the authorities and a warrant for his arrest was issued by Prosecuting Attorney Max Boyer. Squires returned to New London a few days ago and last night was arrested by Detective Sergeant Nelson Smith and Patrolman Frank Linehan. Squires states that the automobile was badly damaged in a wreck at Providence and is in a garage in that city.

ANNOUNCEMENTS

Palace Theatre

Have you ever wondered what the people of 300 years ago laughed at? Often we are told of what they wore, what they ate, of their marriage customs, and other habits, but rarely do we stop to ask ourselves what amused them. Would the man in Shakespeare's time think Charlie Chaplin's antics were funny, or would a song by Winnie Lightner bring down the house if sung back in those days? Probably you will say yes, and that what amuses people today would amuse people at any time. Whatever is fundamentally funny is sure to get a laugh, you will declare. And you are probably right.

At any rate there is no need to wonder about the question. Here in Norwich is a chance to prove it one way or the other. For beginning today at the Palace theater is the motion picture of a play which back in the centuries gone by had the theaters shaking with laughter. This play is "The Taming of the Shrew," written for the theatergoers of London not long after the defeat of the Spanish Armada, by Will Shakespeare. And that's a long time ago, you'll have to admit. It's such a long time that anything written in that day would have to be pretty good to live this long, naturally.

Well, happily for the world this play, along with the other masterpieces of the man whom the world knows today as the Bard of Avon, has been preserved, and its lines at which the good burghers of Queen Elizabeth's time laughed themselves silly, are here still fresh in flavor, still vigorous.

But, funny as this play was in Shakespeare's time, we honestly believe the Londoners never knew how much they were missing. Can you imagine what a superlative knockout the play would have been had Doug Fairbanks and Mary Pickford been alive at that time. London got along without them, and still managed to enjoy the play. Think what modern theatergoers are getting. Not only the play itself, preserved in all its inimitable humor, but with two of the world's greatest people taking part in it.

Nobody should miss seeing how Petruchio takes Katharine for a ride eventually after she almost sends him down for the count.

Also excellent short features with Our Gang comedy, two Vitaphone acts, novelty reel and Metrotone News. As fine a bill as ever shown at the Palace theatre.

Broadway Theatre

It took the genius of Cecil B. DeMille to produce "The Covered Wagon," "The Ten Commandments," "The King of Kings," and over fifty other equally massive film masterpieces, and when it came to screening Jeanie MacPherson's original story "Dynamite," again the magic skill of "The DeMille" was called into play, so daring and gigantic the theme. Conrad Nagel, Julia Faye, Kay Johnson and Charles Bickford are the stellar characters in a cast comprising the cream of Hollywood's stars, in a story so compelling and thrilling that even New York's blase critics branded it a sensation. Now in its fifth week on Broadway, it is still drawing capacity audiences. The story is most unusual and packed with thrills and excitement, ranging from the death-cell wedding of a condemned murderer to a society butterfly, to the grim confines of a mile-deep coalmine, with death imminent almost any moment—and the way to escape open only by—"dynamite." No more thrilling situation was ever conceived, and the climax, with one of the three prisoners, husband, wife and lover, doomed to death to save the other two, is one of the most dramatic bits of filmcraft ever screened. High life in Long Island society adds a note of luxury that is typically DeMille, the sporting life of the wastrels of society giving full scope to his imagination and skill. The squalid life of the coalminers and their pitiful struggle just to live is portrayed with equal skill, and the contrasts are sharply drawn, making a production that will long be remembered. The Paramount sound newsreel in its latest edition is also shown, and at today's matinee, the extra featurette, the seventh chapter of the talking-serial "The Ace of Scotland Yard."

As the result of injuries received in an automobile accident, Mrs. Willis L. Studley of 34 Center street, East Providence, was operated upon at Westerly hospital Thursday for the removal of her right eye. The operation was performed by Dr. Walter Grenolds. Mrs. Studley was with her husband when their car skidded and struck a boulder at the side of the road. Just a half century ago this week Wauregan Hook and Ladder Co., at its annual meeting, elected J. B. Corey foreman and treasurer. Henry B. Lewis was elected first assistant foreman, Herman S. Case, second assistant foreman and Blydon Hedge, secretary. Interesting extracts taken from the files of The Norwich Bulletin of December-January, 50 years ago are as follows:

Monday, Dec. 29, 1879—Sidney B. Geer of Jewett City was seriously injured Friday afternoon while hunting in the woods about two miles from his home. In attempting to get over a stone wall with his gun in his hand he stumbled and probably fell, dragging the gun, which caught and both barrels were discharged, the contents entering his left side and passing through his abdomen. He crawled about a third of a mile through a swamp and over a wall to an elevation where he attracted the attention of a boy. He was carried to the house of John Phillips in Lisbon and died there Saturday morning.

The Rev. John Davies was suddenly prostrated while preaching a memorial discourse Sunday morning in the Central Baptist church. At 12 o'clock he had entirely recovered consciousness. For several days past he had been suffering from a severe cold and taking little nourishment, which is believed to have been the cause of the prostration.

BURGESS BEDTIME STORY

Farmer Brown's Boy Becomes Suspicious.

By THORNTON W. BURGESS.

On trifles doth suspicion feed.
And seeks them with untiring greed.
—Old Mother Nature.

It was a week or two after Chatterer the Red Squirrel had found a way of getting into the corn crib that Farmer Brown's Boy began to suspect that some one who shouldn't was paying that corn crib a visit. You see, every day Farmer Brown's Boy went there for corn for the hens; and one morning he noticed that there was a corncob lying in one corner. All the corn was off the cob. He hadn't shelled any corn in the corn crib and he wondered how that bare corncob happended to be there.

But he was busy and he soon forgot it. Probably he wouldn't have thought of it again had he not discovered another bare corn cob a day or two late. Then he started to look about and presently he found an ear from which half the corn had been taken.

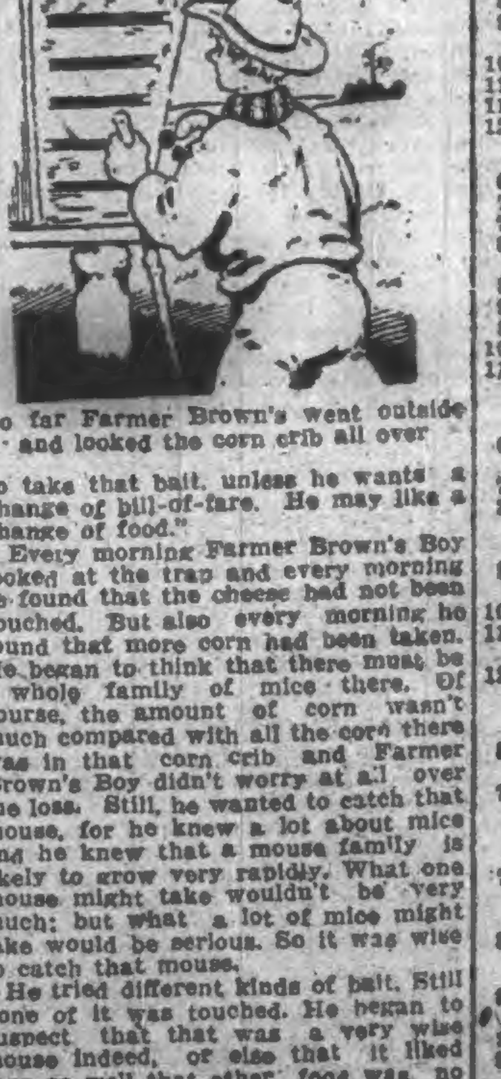
"It must be that mice are in here," said Farmer Brown's Boy. "I don't see how under the sun they could have found a way in, but they must be here. I'll have a look around outside."

So Farmer Brown's Boy went outside and looked the corn crib all over. He even crept underneath it to see if there were any holes in the floor. He made a very thorough search, but of course he found no holes and he could discover no way in which a mouse could possibly have made its way inside. He sat down on the steps and scratched his head thoughtfully. This was a real puzzle.

"There is only one way I can account for this," said he. "It must be that when we brought the corn up from the cornfield a mouse was hidden in the corn and so we brought it up. No mouse could possibly get into this corn crib from outside. That means that the mouse must be living here. I guess I'll have to get a trap."

So Farmer Brown's Boy went over to the barn and got a mouse trap. Then he went into the house and got a bit of cheese to bait the trap. It was a spring trap — the kind that kills its victim instantly. He placed it down in a cornet where he had found the corn cob.

"I suppose it will be pure luck if I catch him," thought Farmer Brown's Boy. "With all this corn there is no particular reason why he should try to take that bait, unless he wants a change of bill-of-fare. He may like a change of food."



So far Farmer Brown's went outside and looked the corn crib all over

Every morning Farmer Brown's Boy looked at the trap and every morning he found that the cheese had not been touched. But also every morning he found that more corn had been taken. He began to think that there must be a whole family of mice there. Of course, the amount of corn wasn't much compared with all the corn there was in that corn crib and Farmer Brown's Boy didn't worry at all over the loss. Still, he wanted to catch that mouse, for he knew a lot about mice and he knew that a mouse family is likely to grow very rapidly. What one mouse might take wouldn't be very much; but what a lot of mice might take would be serious. So it was wise to catch that mouse.

He tried different kinds of bait. Still none of it was touched. He began to suspect that that was a very wise mouse indeed, or else that it liked corn so well that other food was no temptation. Finally, he got two or three more traps and set them around in different places. He hoped that that mouse might accidentally step in one. But no mouse did.

SOCIAL CORNER POETRY

The Happy New Year

The chill air is crisp, for the Ice King discloses
His tiny ice spears which he hangs on the trees;
No fragrance of Summer, no petals of roses
To brush as we pass—We see only dead leaves.
Now dear Merry Christmas has swiftly departed—
A New Year stands scanning the ghosts of the past.
We gave o'er his shoulders and feel heavy-hearted
To think months and seasons are fading so fast.
See! whirled in mid-air white snow flakes descending!
Each flake seems a spirit dropped down from above;
As though to the New Year to earth they come landing
A promise of purity, blessing and love.
How they pile! How they gather—the snow in their whiteness,
Led on by silence who move without sound
Their feet shod in crystals and sparkling in brightness—
They drape frosted gesture o'er trees—bush and ground.
We thought with the Summer all beauty was dying
We thought with the New Year all joy flown away
But spirits of snow to our shorn world came flying
And the New Year has blessings perhaps for each day.
Hark! wild bells are ringing—Yes, joy bells are flinging
Out welcomes of glee to another New Year—
Ring on, New Year bells—let thy singing mean gladness
Ring all ills away—but ring love's warmth within Though the Old Year just died and we saw it with sadness
But happy may prove the New Year we begin.

If I Was as Young as I Used to Be

Young folks, listen to my song!
I'm old and I won't detain you long,
I'm 84, I'll have you know,
And the young folks call me Uncle Joe:
My hair, once black, has all turned gray,
But what's the odds while I feel gay.
I long to sing a song of glee,
For it makes me as young as I used to be.

Chorus

Fi-de hi-de hup-te-do,
How I love to sing to you.
O, I could sing with joy and glee
If I was as young as I used to be.

When I was young and in my prime,
I was chasing the girls the most of the time:
I'd take them out each day for a ride
And always have one by my side;
I'd hug and kiss them just for fun,
And I ain't forgot the way it's done,
Any girl here in love with me
Will find me as young as I used to be.

When I was young I knew life's joys,
But now I am old, and I'm one of the boys.
I can take a smile and sing a song
With any good friend that comes along;
I can tell a story or crack a joke
And never refuse to drink or smoke;
I'm a gay old sport, you'll all agree,
And I feel as young as I used to be.

LOOKING AHEAD

Genius, that power that dazzles mortal eyes,
Is oft but perseverance in disguise.
Continuous effort, of itself, implies
In spite of countless falls the power to rise.
'Twixt failure and success the point's so fine
Men sometimes know not when they touch the line.
Just when the pearl was waiting one more plunge,
How many a struggler has thrown up the sponge!
As the tide goes clear out, it comes clear in.
In business 'tis at times the wisest win.
And oh! how true, when shades of doubt dismay,
"'Tis often darkest just before the day."
A little more persistence, courage, vim!
Success will dawn o'er fortune's cloudy rim.
Then take this honey for the bitterest cup:
"There is no failure, save in giving up,
No real fall as long as one still tries.
For seeming setbacks make the strong man wise.
There's no defeat, in truth, save from within;
Unless you're beaten there, you're bound to win."

WHEN WASHING SILK STOCKINGS

Editor and Members of Social Corner: By appearance of the last Social Corner page a majority of our writers were too busy or over tired from over work during the holiday season. Those interesting letters by the regular correspondents are missed when not appearing, and many that we used to get were from members who are not to meet with us in this world again. We do miss Lavender about Willimantic.

Do any of the sisters have trouble with silk stockings bunching up and getting into a tangle when they are being washed in the electric washer? One way to prevent this difficulty is to use a bag of unbleached cotton cloth with a drawstring. Put stockings in bag and drop into washer.

I prefer to wash silk hose in clean water with soap chips and salt rather than in water where the regular week's clothes have been washed.

ANSWERS AND INQUIRIES.

ANOTHER TRUNDLE BED EXPERIENCE.

Dear Social Corner Sisters: I want to start the New Year right, so am sending this letter to the Corner for the first Corner page in 1930.

My wish for all the Corner friends is that you may have a happier New Year than ever. And may all your hopes for the New Year come true. May we all try and live better and be more helpful to others in the New Year.

Jennie: I was amused at your account of your trundle bed experience and must tell you about mine. When I had just passed my ninth birthday (I was living in New Jersey) we went on a visit to my aunt in Massachusetts. Aunt had three grown up daughters. Lonesome Pine and I slept in the room with two of the girls, and we slept in a trundle bed, first I had ever seen. After covering us the bed was pushed under the bed again to our waists and off we were to dreamland. While it was still dark, there was a ringing of bells and I thought it was the fire engine, and that the house must be burning to have all that racket. I caught hold of L. P. and tried to get up. No go! We were fast from our waists down. Then I howled "Get me out of this." Louise had lighted the lamp by then and asked, "What's the matter?" I said, "Didn't you hear the fire bells?" "Oh, that was only the alarm clock to tell me it was time to get up," she answered, and as that was the first time I ever heard an alarm clock you can realize why it frightened me.

We stayed with my aunt for several days, but I insisted they should not push the trundle under the big bed while I was in it.

The last meeting of Club 1 was a very pleasant one, and the dinner one of the best I ever enjoyed. The tables were loaded with good things to eat and each place had a tiny Christmas tree with chocolate candies. Tiny Ann was hostess. She said she had to take it at the last minute, as the other hostess could not come.

Tiny Tim: If you can get up such a dinner on short notice just think what you could do if you had time given you.

One dear face we all missed, our dearly loved Sister Lavender. How we did miss the sweet smile with which she always greeted us. I thought of her lonesome family during the holidays and prayed the Good Father would comfort them.

I take this opportunity to thank the sisters who sent me cards and gifts. Now it is almost midnight so will ring off. Best wishes for the New Year.

OLGA.

STARTING NEW YEAR RIGHT.

Dear Editor and Social Corner Members: As we start on another new year I will begin right by sending a few lines to the Corner page. What lovely weather we are having for this time of the year. Such a beautiful holiday season. Now that Christmas is over we turn our thoughts to the coming year and what is before us. I trust it will be a happy and prosperous new year for everyone.

Silver Locks: Sorry you were not at home the day I came down to see you, but I am glad you are feeling better.

Yellow Daisy: Would liked to have seen you but glad you had a chance to go.

Ready: Come up some time, would like to see you.

Sweet William: Pleased with your visit. Come again and we will all have another radio concert.

Rose of New England: Hope the snow man keeps away till after Wednesday.

I hope all the sick ones are feeling better, is the New Year's wish from ARBUTUS.

NEW YEAR GREETINGS.

Dear Editor and Social Corner Members: Happy New Year everybody. Hope you all had a very merry Christmas and that Santa filled all your stockings from toe to top. He was very god to me and brought me a radio. How happy I am and I do enjoy it so much, as much as the children do their toys.

We have had enough snow to get the sleds down from the attic. I wonder how many of the Social Corner sisters have been sliding down hill. I have been out a number of times and how happy it makes the kiddies to have mother out with them. Yes, and it brings back the old times of long ago when we were young and full of pep.

Ready: Happy New Year to you. Thank you for all your cards.

Sweet William: Come down again some evening.

Arbutus: Expect to see you tomorrow if a blizzard does not come up over night.

As I sit here writing this Tuesday evening the bells are pealing out a happy New Year to everyone far and near over the air from Cincinnati. What a feeling. The old year is almost gone and what is ahead of us in the new year we do not know, but I wish everyone a happy and prosperous New Year.

ROSE OF NEW ENGLAND.

HINTS FOR AUTO TRIPS

Dear Social Corner Sisters: I fully intended writing as soon as we returned from our trip to Westerly last October, yet here it is Dec. 27, and it seems almost like a dream that I saw so many of you at North Stonington that day. I cannot tell you what a pleasure it was to me to attend another of your gatherings and see all your smiling faces again and eat one of those famous dinners once more. And American Girl's program was as fine as ever.

Our trip home was uneventful except for a puncture, but I cannot say we enjoyed it as much as on the way down. As Willard put it—"the thrill was gone." We were headed the wrong way. On the way back we got into the worst jam in Schenectady I ever hope to experience. It was just five o'clock, a bad time to go through any city. We stayed all night about a mile east of Amsterdam and were right near the railroad. All night long trains thundered through about every fifteen minutes so that it was one long night of misery. Deliver me from another like it. But it could not be avoided as the tracks for miles and miles, follow the state road. We left Westerly Saturday morning and reached here Sunday, at 1 p. m. Pretty good for faithful old Lizzie, I'll say.

I found out several things that are helpful on a long trip, where you take your eats, one is clean newspapers, to spread on one's lap. Paper napkins are only good to wipe one's hands, but newspapers are large enough to protect one's clothes and are easily disposed of. A jug of water in the car, and soap, face cloth and towel where one can easily get to them are necessities. And my rain coat proved a blessing. I wore it over my new coat and not a wrinkle in the latter, or a spot. Also when it isn't cold enough to use a robe, a wool scarf over the knees gives one that added bit of comfort needed on cool days. A milk bottle and a few extra caps were appreciated, as we are great lovers of milk. I mention the extra caps as one place we stopped they had none.

New York state is buried in snow—nearly. At least we are. I undertook to attend the Christmas exercises in our little school house last Monday and got about an eighth of a mile from home when poor Lizzie valiently gave up the fight, and stayed right there in the middle of our cross-road for three days until our neighbor, with his team, drew her to the barn where she will rest 'til spring. I went the rest of the mile on foot wading in snow to my knees. A kind neighbor took me home in his sleigh and I'm not sure but I'll "stay put" 'till spring, too. If one happens to live in the country out here, and doesn't keep horses, he is surely out of luck.

Another Christmas has come and gone, and I hope all the Corner members have not only been happy themselves but tried to make others happy too. I wish to thank all the Sisters who remembered me with cards.

Pa's Daughter: Where are you and why don't you write? Was so sorry not to see you. Tried to call you on 'phone, but not listed.

Milky Way—Wanted so much to call but not a chance. Too bad that just as we began to get acquainted we had to move away.

Powaget—Sorry to know you have been ill in hospital again, but glad you are better. Did not know it until I read it in Corner page.

American Girl—Packages arrived O. K., will write later.

Idalene—Many thanks for the card. Plan to bring Pa's Daughter out next summer.

The radio man is talking about sea food. I wish he would keep still! Why make my mouth water for something I can't possibly get?

Was interested in the subject of trundle beds as I too, have slept in one. Some years ago I memorized that poem of James Whitcomb Riley and it's one of my favorites.

Best wishes to all.

COMMUTER, (Club No. 6)

Dear Editor and Sisters: I intended to get a greeting letter in before but somehow the Christmas rush got the best of me. But now I wish you all a very happy and successful New Year. May your pens work overtime and fill the Corner page so full the editor will have to put out an extra at least once a month to take care of the supply. And why let our sisters farther north do all the writing! I know members of Club No. 6 have just as much ability to write as they have and should not hide their light (or pen) under too large a shade. Let it shine forth and show what we can do. Don't say to yourself, "I guess I won't write this week; there will be plenty others," but just take your pen in hand and send some message if only a recipe of some kind. It doesn't take but a few minutes and is time well spent. We are not supposed to write essays, if we did that would be some excuse, but there are a multitude of subjects that can be used. It may seem tame to you after you have written it but will sound entirely different when some one else reads it. Come on and make 1930 a banner year for Club No. 6. Follow Prairie Chicken's lead of last year and every one write at least once a month. Let's make the editor put in some sleepless nights trying to decide which will get the prizes. Let's go!

Santa was very kind to us this year, bringing a lot of things we had asked for and many surprises besides. The children hung their stockings by the chimney with safety pins and insisted on going to bed an hour earlier than usual and every five minutes wanted to know if it was time for Santa Claus. By working long and late I got everything finished in time. It's a great system if it only works.

I told them they musn't have deserts when they were eating so much candy over the holiday. Some fruit or a piece of candy would do as well as cake or pie. They would insist on the candy anyway. Mr. S. didn't have what you might call a look of approval on his face, nevertheless he didn't say anything.

On Dec. 28, I went to Providence to the Rhode Island grange lecturer's conference. Through the kindness of the lecturer of Ashaway grange I had a chance to go by auto instead of train. It was a very interesting trip as I had only been over the road once before. She was a very efficient driver and knew her way around the city or I'm sure we would have been hopelessly lost. I'm sure I was. It was raining but we were fortunate in being able to put the car in a garage across the street from the Narragansett hotel where the conference was held. The state lecturer had arranged a very interesting program. Mrs. Lee from Boston, a professional coach of amateur plays, gave a very instructive talk on play production, stage settings and make-up. State Grange Master Hopkins and Commissioner of Agriculture Harry Lewis gave short talks also. We had lunch in the hotel and altogether it was a very helpful and pleasureful trip. I reached home about 6:30.

Don't forget Club No. 6 meets in Mechanic's hall, Westerly, on the third Tuesday in January. Bring something good to eat and your dishes. I am doing the honors at this meeting. Happy New Year everbody.

SUMAC

WHEN SHOES HURT.

Dear Social Corner Editor and Sisters: I want to thank those who sent me Christmas cards. We are just starting in on a New Year and I hope we may all have a happy and prosperous one. The Tuesday meeting at Westerly was very good, dinner and entertainment, especially Santa Claus. I wonder if Santa Claus ever was skinny. I have always noticed he is quite plump. Here is something to help those who may have shoes that hurt at the toes when new. Take a medium sized hammer handle and work back and forth in the toe as it smooths down the toe. If the heel hurts raise it up by putting a wadding of cotton or paper in heel, and this often helps also when shoes are a little short.

Connie: Looks like you were a backslider.

B Natural: Too bad you are not able to take this trip too. Trust you are feeling better.

Sumac: Good weather for one of your shower baths. I am getting shaky as it is nearly time for installation.

Evelyn Burr: Your letter sometime ago helped me a lot.

Best wishes to all the Corner.

COSMOS.

HAD ENJOYABLE CHRISTMAS

Dear Editor and Social Corner Sisters: Christmas excitement is all over. I hope all were as well remembered as I was. I want to thank all S. C. Sisters who sent cards to me. I had quite a number. I started Christmas day by attending a church wedding, the bride was very pretty in white. I spent the remainder of the day with my cousin, Sweet William. I want to say one word in a sentence mixes things up quite a little. I am not with Aunty No. 1 at present time of writing. I left her house in November and have had time only to make short calls there since. Have a very nice place at present. Anyone who would like to talk with me call 1475-14.

Wishing all a happy New Year. I remain as ever

SISTER READY.

PULL TOGETHER FOR A FULL PAGE.

Dear Editor and Members: A happy New Year! And now that the old year is gone and a new one is before us, how glad we ought to be of the privilege of writing to the Social Corner during 1930. "Do it now," seems a better motto than "Say it with remorse." Nuff said.

Can any of our readers tell us more of the wonderful Lake Titicaca called "The wash-basin of God," situated on the frontier between Bolivia and Peru, in South America?

The lake is 120 miles long and lies 12,545 feet above sea level. Its area is 3200 square miles and its maximum depth is about 700 feet. The lake is said to be the largest in South America, nearly 2½ miles high; although it has no outlet, the water is fresh but unpleasant; iron will not rust in it; eggs will not boil in it; only one kind of fish can live in it, and the lake is above the clouds.

"Bubbles." Isn't it sad when strawberries are crushed and the cherries to be pitted? The tailor says it's when he has a pressing time that his business is increasing.

Though time will tell it, it is not always so easy to learn the timekeeper's secret.

One thing we have been strong for from the beginning is the right kind of week-end.

Seems the ocean is remarkably calm considering the way it is continually being crossed.

There is lots of dust in the carpet industry, but the lesser employes get only the sweepings.

The wind of adversity may cause even the tuba player's ambitions to come out of the little end of the horn.

"Point." The newest shade of silk stockings is called "sunset blush." And well the sunset might!

Many a husband who is the light of his wife's life is not allowed to go out.

Parents spend weeks teaching a child to talk and for years after are telling him to keep quiet.

It doesn't follow that a baby is a future Edison because he only sleeps for three hours at night.

"Purses should match shoes," say a fashion article. If shoes match purses, some of us would have no feet.

When you speak to other people for good, it is influence; when other people speak to you for your good it's interference.

"The average girl has only one evening dress," says a writer. That is why, we suppose, she doesn't wear all of it at one time.

There are sermons in stones especially those who live in glass houses.

To the New Year—Don't look so frightened, little year. You're very strong, it's true; and doubtless you are filled with fear because your work is new. You are responsible, we know, for duties big and small, but wrinkle not your forehead so—we'll help you, one and all! You'll see us smile; you'll hear us sing as we march by your side. And should you disappointments bring—we'll fling them right aside. We'll bear no grudge if you should send a nasty type of weather. 'Tis best, no matter where we wend, that all should pull together. So don't be frightened, year-just-born! We're really charming folks. Hard work we do not shirk, nor scorn and we enjoy a joke. You'll like up in a few more days; and we'll like you, New Year. We've all resolved to mend our ways, so be you of good cheer.

Nonesopretty: No flies wanted. That reminds me of a suggestion I wanted to send in to the Corner. The sprayer I use in summer time to spray fly-killing solution, in winter I use to spray my house plants with tepid water. The moisture reaches all parts of the plants and is more like dew when plants are not out of doors.

ARIES.

ACKNOWLEDGING PRESENTS

Dear Social Corner Friends: It isn't going to be so hard to keep the page filled after Christmas as it was before. There is always something pleasant to think and write about after the holidays and besides the days are getting longer!

We had a shut-in Christmas with the whooping cough—that lingers so long! Nevertheless, we had a tree, many remembrances and a happy time. We always receive more than we give, as we have some very generous relatives who remember the children and all the family lavishly. I do not try to return such gifts but to give some to someone who needs but does not expect it, and I always make it a point to acknowledge every gift. It is such a joy to have a gift graciously received and such a disappointment to have one unacknowledged.

I wonder of you other radio fans thought the Christmas program exceptionally good this year. I did and the good will programs to England and Europe were wonderful. We have gotten more Sunday programs too, since we have had to stay in. From what we get by radio it looks as though the world improves all right. And what an influence it must exert.

Trust the page will be full if this is no longer. With all best wishes to all.

THIRTY-TWO

NEW YEAR WISHES.

Dear Social Corner Editor and Sisters: It has been a long time since I wrote to the Corner but the old saying is better late than never. There are so many nice writers I feel I should not take the space. I enjoy the letters very much; also the poems. I wish you all a happy New Year. This is not much of a letter but I did want to let you all know I have not forgotten the good times I have had at the Corner.

ORA (Club 2).

USING DUCK FAT.

Editor and Sisters of the Social Corner: I want to write a few lines or I will not feel I am one of you. I love to read all the letters. Those that speak of the old times are especially interesting to me. I remember well of sleeping in a trundle bed.

One sister asked about duck grease. I use it the same as I do chicken fat. I put it on the stove and clarify it by slicing raw peeled potatoes and putting into it on the stove for a little while.

I am living on the Willimantic camp ground as are some of our sisters. The winter scenery is beautiful here.

RED CEDAR

SOUR MILK CAKE

Dear Editor and Social Corner Sisters: I wish to thank those who remembered me with birthday cards. Also so many thanks for Christmas greetings and I wish all a happy New Year.

Here is a recipe perhaps some of the sisters would like to try:

Sour Milk Cake: 1 cup sour milk, 1 cup sugar, 1-3 cup butter, 2 cups flour, 1 cup raisins, 1 teaspoon soda, 1 teaspoon baking powder. Bake slowly for one hour.

ESTEL

MUSTER GINGERBREAD

Dear Social Corner Editor and Sisters: As I want to start the New Year right I will write a few lines, for if I put it off now maybe it would be a whole year before I got to it. I am a very poor hand to write letters as my friends will tell you.

Nonesopretty: Did you hear an auto horn Friday and again Saturday? Well, auto tooted to you.

Now, Keziah Dolittle, let's hear from you.

Foxy: Called on you one Sunday afternoon in the early fall. No one at home but the cows and you had another caller the same time. We were out riding and as I had never been over your way Mr. A said we would go and call on you and Mr. H.

Am sending in an old fashioned recipe. Have heard an aunt tell of it, but didn't know how it was made. I found a recipe so want to send it so other sisters can try it. It is said to keep a long time, but it don't at our house.

Muster Gingerbread: (Served when soldiers of the Revolution and later of the Civil war were mustered out.) 1½ cup molasses, 1-4 cup lard, 2-3 warm water, 1 teaspoon each of saleratus and ginger, salt. Put all the lumps and ginger, salt. Rub all the lumps from the saleratus and beat it dry with the molasses until the latter is all afoam. Add the lard, a generous pinch of salt, the ginger and the warm water gradually. Use just enough pastry flour to make a dough that can be rolled into sheets which, when baked, will be from 1-8 to 3-4 inch thick. Bake in a hot oven, taking care not to scorch. This is a very old recipe and former the gingerbread, after baking, was rubbed with molasses to make it shiny. It will keep a long time in a covered crock or tin.

Sincere good wishes to all for a very happy and prosperous New Year.

THE FIRST OF YOUR RESOLUTIONS

Dear Editor and Corner Sisters: Christmas is past but the new year is dawning just ahead, near at hand, so first I will wish each of you a happy New Year. Let one of our first resolutions be to help and uphold the Corner page and to do that, we must not neglect writing for the Corner; it is a duty each one takes on herself when she becomes a member of the Social Corner.

The most of us will make New Year resolutions and ere we are aware of it they are broken, so the fewer we make the fewer we will break, but as we review the past year and look ahead we wonder whether joy or sorrow lies before us. One thing is sure, whatever it may be, strength will be given as the occasion demands.

Of course each one wants to make the coming year better than the last, something worth while, so that it can be said that she or he did what they could. Don't let us look at things as insurmountable, hard and not easy to do but to do the task or duty no matter how difficult it looks to be, and most surprising at last we find it done or borne. In doing thus we must remember we help ourselves by not dwelling on our troubles. Don't wait for a big opportunity or for means but each day give of what you have—a smile, praise, encouragement, a helping hand, love and you will find that even if you are surrounded by troubles, anxieties and worries, that in scattering the above helps, diffusing them about, you not only help others but you help yourself. We can not stay despondent if we see others in trouble and despair, for in trying to bring cheer to them we find our troubles become lighter and because of this life is worth living. As we stand on the threshold of this new year we realize that only one holds the key and knows what the year will bring to each of us. We must just trust and wait even if the clouds at times roll heavily around us for by the trusting and waiting in time the clouds will light and we must be ready to catch the rays for they might prove to be blessings coming to us. So one and all, I wish you a happy New Year.

I thank all those who have remembered me with letters of sympathy and also for the Christmas gifts and greeting cards. Let us remember to endeavor to fill the Corner page. To those who are in trouble and sorrow you have my love and sympathy and to those who are sick remember I think of you and trust ere long you will be on the road to recovery.

If not, let's just be patient and trust that even if we cannot be well that He who doeth all things well will strengthen us and some day we will understand.

I shall be glad to hear from any of you at any time. Love to one and all.

HOW TO MAKE YOUR BRILLIANTS SPARKLE.

Dear Social Corner Folks: Have you ever tried to clean brilliant pins and ornaments? I have had good success with silver cream or polish. Use a very little and brush the stones and also the pin part with a soft, little brush, being careful not to loosen the stones. Then take another, similar brush and remove silver polish. After a little friction the brilliants sure will shine like diamonds.

Michie: Our letters passed on the way. Yours was an answer to mine and am glad to know the little parcel was not lost. I notice you have the flag all ready to hang out. Long may it wave over the land of the free and the home of the brave.

A happy New Year to all.

Hope all had a merry Christmas and I wish our Editor and all Corner Members a very happy New Year.

HANOVER

The people of Hanover were greatly favored last Thursday evening in listening to a lecture given by William Storrs Lee in the parish house on his travels in Europe and Great Britain during the previous year, the lecture being illustrated by pictures taken by himself.

The banner awarded to the Y. P. S. C. E. of the Congregational church for the largest attendance at the annual meeting of the Norwich union held at the First Baptist church, Norwich, some time since found its way up to Hanover last Sunday evening under the care of the president of the union, Rev. Howard Bushnell. The banner is bright red, the letters being in white, and fastened to its own standard with pure white cords which terminate in tassels. The base of the standard is large and substantial with holes provided for the insertion of six flags. Hanover society is to retain the banner until the next annual meeting of the union, at which time it will be turned over to the society having the largest proportionate attendance at that gathering.

The organ which has done good service in the vestry of the Congregational church for a number of years has been replaced by a fine toned Vose piano, the gift of interested friends in Norwich.

The Congregational church was well represented at the watch night service at Baltic M. E. church, Mr. Stone assisting the pastor, Rev. J. Manley Shaw at the communion service which was in progress when the New Year opened.

The Y. P. S. C. E. of this parish has been invited by Rev. John D. Waldron, pastor of the Congregational church at Franklin, to attend service there at 7.30 Sunday evening next and see a pageant entitled "At the Door of the Inn."

Next Sunday morning the service of worship and preaching held at the usual hour (10.45) will be a New Year's service and will be followed by the bi-monthly communion service.

The meeting of the church is to be held Wednesday evening, Jan. 8, with supper in the parish house at 6.30. After the supper there will be a roll call, reports, etc.

A movement to brick up all useless basements has been started in London in connection with the anti-rat campaign.

CUBS WILL MAKE ATTEMPT TO GET BETTER PITCHERS AND THIRD SACKER

CHICAGO, Jan. 3.—(AP)—Joe McCarthy and his Cubs learned a first class baseball lesson from the Athletics in last fall's world series and learned it so well that they promise to make another victorious drive for the National league championship in 1930.

The lesson was the necessity of a better pitching staff and the necessity of a third baseman, who could hit as well as field. With Owner William Wrigley dangling a fat purse before major and minor league magnates, the Cubs have done probably more shopping for 1930 than any major league club, meanwhile keeping their 1929 lineup almost intact.

To strengthen their pitching staff, they have acquired nine recruits, including two of the best prospects ever to come out of the American association. They are Malcom Moss, youthful Louisville southpaw, and Lynn Nelson, pitching ace of Kansas City's championship club last season. At third base they will have Lester Bell, a natural hitter, who was obtained from the Braves for a big bundle of cash.

"We are almost certain to get two or three good pitchers out of that group," President William Veeck said, "and they will help Charlie Root, Pat Malone, Guy Bush, Fred Blake, Hal Carlson and the other pitching veterans of the staff immeasurably. I think we will have the best team in the National league in 1930, barring misfortunes and injuries."

Another item of cheer for the Cubs is the promised return of Leo "Gabby" Hartnett, who failed to catch a game last season because of a lame throwing arm. Hartnett and his physician have pronounced the salary wing in perfect condition again and if he comes through, the Bruins will be rid of the catching problem that almost wrecked them last year. Zach Taylor and Fred Schulte will be back behind the plate and Earl Grace, a promising backstop, who was farmed out to Reading, Pa., last season, will get another chance.

Another addition is Ray Schalk, former White Sox catcher, who will help Manager McCarthy along the coaching lines, and catch if necessary. Schalk is expected to prove of great help to the big crop of rookie pitchers. The Cubs will take him with them to Catalina Island.

Seven right handers and two portsiders comprise the rookie hurling staff. In addition to Moss and Nelson, they are George Bell, right hander from Mobile of the Southern association; Ed Lautenbacher, right hander, who was sent to Reading in the middle of the 1929 season for more experience; William McAfee, all-star right hander from the University of Michigan; Albert Shealy, veteran right hander, who was drafted from St. Paul of the American association; Arthur Teachout, left hander from Indianapolis of the American association; L. Wernske, right hander from Shreveport, La., and August Walsh, a right hander who toiled for the Philadelphia Nationals in 1928, and who had a great season with Los Angeles in the Pacific Coast league last season.

Another promising prospect for the infield, who was obtained during the winter season, is Bill Jurgess of Reading. Jurgess is a shortstop and was voted the most valuable player in the New England league in 1928.

Rogers Hornsby, keystone man of the Cubs and their offensive spark plug, expects a better season in 1930, too. The "Rajah" was hindered by a growth on his right heel during the closing days of the 1929 season but has had it removed and reports he is ready for his annual collection of home runs, base hits and double plays assists.

CHUBBUCK WILL NOT BE IN AGGIE LINEUP TONIGHT

(Special to The Bulletin)

STORRS, Jan. 3—Dan Chubbuck, leading threat of the Connecticut Aggie quintet, may be lost to the team in its initial contest here Saturday. He has been confined to his bed by a severe cold for the past 24 hours, and his physician will not guarantee that the big boy will be able to appear for the first game on Saturday. Leo Duffy, regular guard for the past two years, will probably take Chubbuck's place at center since he held that position on the freshman team three years ago. Flydal will be used as guard in place of Duffy if Chubbuck is unable to play.

Other members of the starting team will be Captain Ryan and Darrow, forwards, and Wilson, a sophomore, guard. The latter will on Saturday get his initial test at varsity competition, and will have won a trial over men of greater varsity experience. As the Aggie team has not played any outside team in scrimmage, this game will serve to bring out flaws which may be remedied in future practice.

Three of the starting team were members of the 1929 quintet which tied with Rhode Island for the New England State College title, and which also defeated Providence college, claimant of the Eastern championship.

"ALL NEWS TO HIM," IS COMMENT OF TRIS SPEAKER

DALLAS, Texas, Jan. 3—(AP)—Tris Speaker, manager of the Newark baseball club of the International league, declared here late today that "it was all news to him" when advised of reports from New York that he was to become manager of the Brooklyn club of the National league.

SPEAKER MENTIONED AS MANAGER OF DODGERS

NEW YORK, Jan. 3.—(AP)—The New York Evening World says today that "from reliable sources" it has learned Tris Speaker will soon be appointed manager of the Brooklyn club of the National league with Wilbert Robinson, president-manager, confining his activities to executive duties.

Speaker, former manager of the Cleveland American league club, managed Newark of the International league last year. Robinson for three years has been acting in the dual capacity of president and manager of Brooklyn.

Relations between Robinson and S. W. McKeever, vice president of the club, have been strained for some time and McKeever has opposed renewal of the incumbent's contract, either as president or manager.

The Evening World says that the decision to name Speaker as bench manager represents a truce between the warring Ebbets and McKeever factions. The Ebbets heirs have stood staunchly behind Robinson.

The newspaper says it is understood Mrs. Charles H. Ebbets, widow of the former club president, urged the appointment of Speaker as manager and retention of Robinson as president for one year and that McKeever is believed to be agreeable to this plan.

Speaker will be free to accept, the story continues, on account of changes contemplated for the Newark club.

YALE TO PLAY TORONTO TEAM SATURDAY NIGHT

NEW YORK, Jan. 3.—(AP)—A hockey "natural" pitting unbeaten Yale against Toronto in a duel for international supremacy, will wind up the holiday series of college games at Madison Square Garden tomorrow night.

Flushed with three straight victories over Michigan and one each over Boston university, Dartmouth and the strong University club of Boston, Yale will come to the Garden with a squad of 15 men anxious to repeat last season's 3 to 2 conquest of Toronto here.

This may prove a difficult task, however, as the Canadians not only have licked their leading rivals at home, but have taken the measure of Harvard and Dartmouth in their holiday invasion.

Coach Larry Nobles of Yale expects to start Ding Palmer, Frank Luce and Stew Inglehart on the forward line, with Captain Bob Wilson and Dan Hickok on the defense and Frank "Specs" Farrell in goal. Captain Jimmy McMullen, Mel Harley and Bill Stewart will be out in front for Toronto, Red Whitehead and Bruce Paul on the back line and either Doc Ames or Duke Lebarr in the nets.

MANY DENIALS MADE OF SPEAKER STORY

NEW YORK, Jan. 3—(AP)—Publication by the New York Evening World of a report that Tris Speaker would become manager of the Brooklyn club of the National league brought denials from various sources tonight.

The Evening World's story said that Wilbert Robinson, now president-manager of the club, would confine his attention to executive matters in the future while Speaker was directing the team from the bench.

Speaker, at Dallas, Texas, said it was "all news to him." He pointed out that his contract as manager of the Newark club of the International league still had a year to run and that all his plans have been based on the assumption that he would spend the 1930 season at Newark.

Robinson, at Brunswick, Ga., said he had heard nothing of the report nor had James P. Sinott, president of the Newark club.

DUTRA LEADS IN LONG BEACH TOURNEY

LONG BEACH, Calif., Jan. 3—(AP)—Shooting the 18 holes in 67, five under par, Olin Dutra, Santa Monica, Calif., took the lead today in the annual Long Beach $3,500 open golf tournament.

John Amlin, Los Angeles, Charles Gowers, Long Beach, and Clarence Hubby, Waco, Texas, were tied for second place with 70 each.

George Davis, Los Angeles; John Miller, San Gabriel, Calif.; Ralph Stonehouse, Indianapolis; Ted Carnes, Los Angeles; John Rogers and H. S. Long, both of Denver tied for third with par scores of 72.

A number of the outstanding players are not scheduled to tee off until tomorrow.

TWO FAST BOUTS SLATED FOR CHICAGO STADIUM

CHICAGO, Jan. 3.—(AP)—The Chicago Stadium corporation today closed two matches for its all-star boxing card, January 16.

Jackie Fields, welterweight champion, will meet Tony Vaccarelli, of New York, in the main event, while King Tut, Milwaukee lightweight, who stopped Billy Wallace, of Cleveland on New Year's day, will clash with Bruce Flowers, New York Negro. Both matches will be 10 rounds to a decision. Fields' title will not be at stake.

Oster Loses to Ebbetts

ROSENBLOOM EASILY DEFEATS LOMSKI

MADISON SQUARE GARDEN, New York, Jan. 3—(AP)—Maxey Rosenbloom, the Harlequin of Harlem, played a feather overture in ragtime tempo on the head and body of durable Leo Lomski tonight to win the ten round "rubber" battle of the prominent light heavyweights in easy fashion tonight before a scant crowd of 8500.

There were no knockdowns as Slapsey Maxey the new exponent of the late Harry Greb's windmill style of fighting, cuffed and battered the Aberdeen assassin all over the ring. The decision was unanimous with Rosenbloom winning every round.

Although eliminated from the New York state athletic commission's tournament to determine a successor to the retired Tommy Loughran because of recent defeat by Jimmy Slattery in Buffalo, Maxey outclassed one of the best of the present 175 pound crop, hitting Lomski at will and splitting both of Leo's eyelids in the second half of the skirmish. It was the fourth meeting of the pair, Rosenbloom now boasting two decisions while Lomski has won one bout. A fourth encounter was a draw.

Lomski never quit his game but he could do nothing at close quarters and rarely reached Max's head with either hand. He made his best showing in the eighth round, digging several hard rights into the New Yorker's body.

The blonde westerner was helpless at times as Rosenbloom heaved punches to the head like a catcher throwing to second base. Occasionally, as Lomski charged, Rosenbloom stepped back, swung an overhand right to Leo's head, and invariably the Aberdeen Pole stumbled all the way across the ring before recovering his balance.

The rest of the time Maxey slapped, jabbed and hooked Lomski's head with lefts until Leo was very dizzy indeed. Lomski almost went down in the fourth under a hard right to the head and was in real difficulty again in the ninth. He suffered a cut over his left eye in the fifth and another above the right in the ninth.

No matter how hard-boiled they appear on the surface there's always a soft spot if you dig deep enough.

I refer to people and not eggs. And it's always some person of whom you least expect it that shows a heart of gold just as it is often the other way around.

The other night I happened to be in a place where the tough luck of a person was being discussed. The story was the old one, of a person getting a few bad breaks when the going was the hardest and now having plenty of difficulty making both ends meet.

One of the persons was one whom I knew rather well but took him as a sort of hard-boiled chap who was looking to his own interests as paramount to all else.

Well, this fellow hadn't said much during the conversation and I thought it didn't make much of an impression on him but that's where I was wrong. He was just considering it and I'd give a good deal to know what was passing through his mind.

Finally, when the discussion was apparently at an end the young man pulls a roll of bills from his pocket and strips off several saying, "Come on, boys, let's help him out, here's something to start it with."

And believe me, others kicked in along with him and soon there was quite a little fund started. But you can tell the world it gave me quite a tugging at the heart strings to see this man reveal so much love for his fellow man.

Here was a man who I supposed was as hard-boiled as they make them but he had been the first to show sympathy for a fellow human who was getting a tough break in life.

It's a shame that there are not more in Norwich who are like him. It would be some town.

But it's these little incidents in life that make it worth living.

HOWARD-HUTCHINSON WIN PRO BEST BALL TOURNEY

MIAMI, Fla., Jan. 3.—(AP)—Jock Hutchinson, Chicago and Nassau golf professional, and his partner for the day, George Howard, Canton, Ohio, shared first honors in a professional's best ball tournament, here today with two other pairs who also polled 68's for the 18 holes.

The other pairs were: Art Weber, Elmwood, N. J., and Al Heron, Reading, Pa., and Fred McDermott, Indianapolis, and Laurie Ayton, Chicago.

Gene Sarazen, defending champion, in the annual Miami open tournament, which opens here tomorrow, was paired with Bill Fairman, Miami, but their 70 was outside of the day's money.

EDDIE MACK RESIGNS AS BOSTON MATCHMAKER

BOSTON, Jan. 3.—(AP)—Eddie Mack, who has been boxing promoter at the Boston Garden since its inception, has resigned, Huntington R. (Tack) Hardwick, chairman of the executive committee of the Garden, announced tonight. The resignation is to take effect as of February 1 and Mack will again operate his own club.

Mack was under a two-year contract which would not expire until next August. His salary was $10,000 a year with ten percent of the boxing proceeds.

SHIRES SUSPENDED IN 32 STATES BY N. B. A.

CINCINNATI, Jan. 3.—(AP)—The pugilistic ambitions of Arthur (The Great) Shires, were checked abruptly here tonight by the National Boxing association which temporarily suspended "the great one" from boxing in 32 states. The association, however, made no attempt to quiet the verbal tactics of the White Sox boxer.

Slattery And Scozza Matched

BUFFALO, N. Y., Jan. 3.—(AP)—Jimmy Slattery and Lou Scozza, Buffalo's rival boxing contenders, designated by the New York state athletic commission to fight for the world's light heavyweight championship, were matched here today for a 15-round match in the local Broadway auditorium, February 10.

SHARKEY SEVERES RELATIONS WITH GARDEN CORP.; NOT TO BOX AT MIAMI

BOSTON, Jan. 3—(AP)—Jack Sharkey, severed all relations with the Madison Square Garden corporation, here today, when according to Johnny Buckley, his manager, the Boston heavyweight emphatically refused to participate in the Miami bout which the New York organization planned for February 27.

Sharkey and Buckley held two long conferences with William F. Carey, the Madison Square Garden head, and they became hopelessly deadlocked when, as the manager expressed it, "Carey tried to cram Tuffy Griffiths down Sharkey's throat."

Although Sharkey's contract with the Garden which expires on March 15, called for a percentage, Buckley said that his heavyweight refused to even consider Carey's offer of a flat $100,000 guarantee to fight Griffiths. Sharkey, according to his manager, told Carey he would take either Phil Scott or Vittorio Campolo as a Miami opponent and when they were refused him, he abruptly ended the negotiations and told Carey he would not fight again until next June, when he expects to clash with Max Schmeling in a milk fund bout in New York or Chicago.

Sharkey's refusal to fight, however, did not deter him from leaving here tonight for Miami with his wife, three children and grandparents for a six weeks' stay. He has already rented a cottage at the Florida resort and planned his trip several months ago.

When Carey and his party, which included Frank Bruen, general manager of the Madison Square Garden, and Tom McArdle, his matchmaker, left for New York early tonight, one of them intimated that the Garden did not intend to abandon its Miami plans because of Sharkey's refusal and that Carey would probably announce a Campolo-Primo Carnera bout for its new Florida arena within a few days.

Sharkey's chief objection to Griffiths, Buckley said, was the Chicago battler's lack of aggressiveness. "Jack believes that 'Tuffy' would not make a fight of it and he realizes that his prestige will be seriously damaged if he engages in another bout like last winter's affair with Young Stribling."

SHIRES WILL GO THROUGH WITH BOUT AT BOSTON

BOSTON, Jan. 3.—(AP)—Although suspended from boxing in 32 states by the National Boxing association, Arthur (The Great) Shires, will be permitted to go through with his six round bout with Al Spohrer, Boston Braves catcher, here on January 10.

Chairman Eugene Buckley of the Massachusetts commission, tonight said that his body did not intend to prevent Shires' appearance in this city.

"Massachusetts," said Buckley, "is not in working agreement with either the Michigan commission or the National Boxing association. However, Massachusetts is willing to agree with the suspension of any boxer in any state when that commission has an established case against the boxer. Until such a condition arises, Massachusetts will tend to boxing within its state limits."

Spohrer, who has been training in Philadelphia with Tommy Loughran and Matt Adgie, [illegible] to "give the National league something to cheer about" when he arrived here today to finish his gymnasium training. "I'll stop that broadcasting first baseman long before six rounds," he threatened, and added: "I only hope Shires can fight half as well as he can talk. Then our bout will be fairly even."

Stanley Isaacs, president of the association, announced the suspension. Isaacs' ruling came after a long distance telephone call from James M. Brown, chairman of the Michigan state athletic commission. The latter told Isaacs that Shires was charged with fixing a bout with Battling Criss at Detroit last night.

Shires will be given a hearing before the Michigan commission on January 9, Isaacs said. The head of the National association declared that any ruling handed down by the Wolverine body would be approved by the parent organization.

The "Great One" had several fights scheduled between now and January 9 but he has been forced into temporary retirement by the National Boxing association.

Brown informed Isaacs that Shires, through a representative, was alleged to have attempted to persuade Criss to take a "dive" in their bout, letting the White Sox first baseman win by a knockout. Shires denied the charge.

Isaacs also announced that the application of the Colorado boxing commission for membership in the National Boxing association had been approved.

Probable Lineups

Norwich	New London
Brown, lf	McKelvie, lf
Lynch, rf	Farnham, rf
Harris, c	Trude, c
Eccleston, lg	Montgomery, lg
Pingree, rg	Mortensen, rg

The fast Altex Five, of New London, will again be here tonight at the local Y court to team up against Norwich. The Whalers played here earlier in the season and hung a defeat on the local boys by the slim margin of one point. The Altex team has one of the fastest combinations in eastern Connecticut and are at present in a tie for first place with the Sub Base in the New London City league.

Their lineup consists of mostly ex-Chapman Tech players, and local fans all know the calibre teams Chapman Tech produces. Farnham and Trude especially were the two men in the previous game who caused disaster to the Demarest coached clan.

Brown, flashy forward for the locals, is expected home from Toledo in time to take his place in the lineup after a two weeks layoff and in all probability Lynch will team up with him. Capt. Harris will be at center with Eccleston and Pingree in the back courts. Leffingwell, Grebe, Barber and Ludlow will see service if the starting lineup falls down.

The preliminary for tonight will be two junior teams and the fans will get a real treat watching the youngsters who will be Norwich's future basketball stars in ten years.

Randy Whaples will officiate in the main attraction, and Howard Ludlow will handle the preliminary which starts at 8 p. m., the main game going on immediately thereafter.

Sinnott Uninformed

NEWARK, N. J., Jan. 3.—(AP)—James P. Sinnott, president of the Newark International League Baseball club, said tonight as far as he knew no effort had been made by the Brooklyn club of the National league to obtain Tris Speaker, manager, as a successor to Manager Wilbert Robinson.

FEW SPORT THRILLS AT ACADEMY LAST YEAR

What thrills will Academy sports produce in 1930? During the year that passed away Tuesday midnight there weren't so many exciting moments for the Wildcat teams.

In fact, the many who follow the Academy boys got their biggest kick out of just one week in the 12 months, a week consisting of three baseball games, around May 1, and the game with the biggest thrill to it was not a Bulkeley tilt, for a change. But you can't get away from the Norwich-New London angle, so it had to be with Chapman Tech. The other two games were with West Hartford and Deep River, all ending in 4 to 3 counts. The Tech game went 11 innings and the Deep River contest one more.

The game with Chapman was so loaded with excitement that no one play stood out. Here's the situation: The Academy go into their last turn at bat in the first of the ninth, trailing by one run. The first two men are easy outs. Anse Tombari gets a base on balls. With two strikes on the next batter, Tombari starts to steal second, the throw is high, Quinn, Tech second baseman, can't get it and Tombari is safe. When the ball rolled away from the second baseman, Tombari picked himself up and started for third. The throw went over the third baseman's head and Tombari scored, tieing the score. Butsy Weisgraber got his first baptism of fire that day when he relieved Fagan in the last of the ninth and stopped a Tech rally with a man on third and only one out. In the tenth Tech had a man on third again with only one out and the squeeze play was attempted. The batter popped up and the runner was doubled off third.

The Academy won in the 11th when Fagan tripled and Bud Fontaine singled and Weisgraber retired the side on strikes in the other half of the frame.

Football fans got their biggest kick when the Academy came from behind in the second half to beat Chapman Tech, 14 to 2, runs by Gink Barber and Captain Berghimes turning the trick. Track rooters had their big inning when the Academy nosed out Stonington to win the league championship, giving a grand performance on the Morgan field track in New London that day. Cross-country thrills were provided when the Wildcats won from Stonington with a perfect score, 15 to 40.

VELVETMAN TO CLASH WITH RANGERS HERE ON SUNDAY

The Velvetmen are to meet the fast Rangers soccer team of New London on Sunday afternoon on the J. B. Martin ground in a league game. The visitors are sure to present a strong lineup composed mostly of U. S. Coastguardsmen. The last time the teams met the locals nosed out a 3 to 2 victory after a hard fought game so it is hoped the fans will turn out in large numbers as this is sure to be a game well worth watching. The J. B. Martin men all report in perfect condition and the lineup will be chosen from the following players: F. Orcutt, A. Heaton, E. Eccleston, H. Seidel, L. Day, F. Knowles, H. Decelles, J. Houston, F. Thompson, I. Archibald, B. Labenski, H. Troeger, A. Bjork.

PLAINFIELD BEATS INDIANA FIVE

(Special to The Bulletin)

PLAINFIELD, Jan. 3.—The Plainfield Pros had little difficulty in defeating the Indiana Phi Delta team here this evening 48 to 39 in a faster game than the score would indicate. The visiting team were without the services of their star center which had a good deal to do with their playing, as the regular pivot man stands six feet four inches and is a dangerous man on the offensive.

Plainfield took the lead early in the game when the Deltas were slow in starting their offensive. The locals held the lead throughout although threatened several times during the first half. The score at half time found Plainfield in front by three points, 24 to 21. Kasper and Bernot starred for Plainfield while Hilligross and Ockomon were the high scorers for the Deltas.

In the preliminary game the Buddies outclassed the Shyma club of Taftville, winning 29 to 15. Next week the Pros play Olson's Terrible Swedes.

The sweet young thing was listening to two business men discussing the business of raising pigs for market. "Yes," said the big pig man from Jersey, "raising pigs is splendid when things are going well." "How many pigs have you on your farm?" he was asked. "I have 2500," he said, "and if cholera ever hits them, I'll have to kiss the whole lot of them goodbye." "My goodness," remarked the sweet young thing, "can you imagine kissing 2500 pigs goodbye?"—Philadelphia Record

CHEVROLET

Today

-Chevrolet announces

THE GREATEST CHEVROLET IN CHEVROLET HISTORY

Today, Chevrolet presents the Greatest Chevrolet in Chevrolet History—a smoother, faster, better Six—with beautiful new bodies by Fisher.

Basically, it is the same sturdy, substantial Six which won such tremendous popularity in 1929. But it is a greater car in every way—for there are scores of vital improvements which contribute to comfort, performance, endurance and safety.

An improved six-cylinder valve-in-head motor, with its capacity increased to 50 horsepower; four Delco-Lovejoy hydraulic shock absorbers; fully-enclosed internal-expanding weather-proof brakes; a new dash gasoline gauge; heavier and stronger rear axle; Fisher non-glare windshield; larger tires—

But most impressive of all—this smoother, faster, better Six is available—

--at greatly reduced prices!

During 1929, more than a million three hundred thousand persons bought six-cylinder Chevrolets. This enormous volume has made possible many savings in the Chevrolet factories—and, in keeping with its long-established policy, Chevrolet is sharing these savings with the public. No written description can do justice to the extra value and quality provided in this new car. Visit your Chevrolet dealer—see this car—ride in it—and judge for yourself the sensational value it represents.

UNCERTAIN UPWARD SWING IN STOCK PRICES IN A QUIET, CAUTIOUS MARKET

NEW YORK, Jan. 3—(P)—An uncertain, although generally upward, trend of share prices, and cheaper call money characterized a quiet and cautious stock market today. Trading continued at a low ebb, the day's transfers barely exceeding 2,000,000 shares.

Call loans dropped from 6 to 5 per cent, and funds were available in the "outside" market as low as 4 1-2 per cent. While marked improvement in the money market has been generally expected after the turn of the year, today' influx of funds was due primarily to the piling up of balances at the banks against dividend and interest checks, and could not be regarded as particularly convincing.

Further exports of gold to France, totalling $8,500,000, were reported, bringing the total outflow of the yellow metal on the current movement to above $110,000,000. Foreign exchange rates, however, were lower, the franc cable going below the point at which movement of gold from New York to Paris would be profitable. The additional exports are, therefore, believed to have been arranged previously, or to represent other than private transactions for profit. Whether the lower exchange rates will halt the outflow of gold for long remains problematical, as exchange rates usually rise after the first few days of January.

The weekly trade and industrial reviews stressed a moderate resumption of activity after the year end inventory period, with the steel industry showing the most notable revival, influenced by good demand for railway equipment. Steel mill operations were reported at 80 to 85 a year ago.

The Southern Pacific Railway directors recommended an increase in authorized capital stock of more than 80 per cent. While this was explained as merely a step in preparation for future requirements, it was regarded as a further indication of confidence in industry and in eventual revival of the stock market.

Steel and railway equipment shares were favorably influenced, and recorded moderate gains. Furthermore, some of the motor shares were turned upward, incidental to introduction of new models at the forthcoming shows.

Such shares as American Can, American Locomotive, American Steel Foundries, American Tobacco, A. M. Byers, General American Tank, General Railway Signal, Hudson Motor, Johns Manville, Lima Locomotive, Macy, Pullman, Colorado Fuel and Iron, Republic Steel, and National Biscuit gained about 2 to 5 points. Fox Film was depressed to another new low at 18 1-8, but rebounded to 22 3-4 on short covering and closed at 21, up 2 1-4, net.

U. S. Steel rose a couple of points, but closed up only 1 1-4. In the motors, Chrysler, Studebaker and Nash gained about a point each. There were a few soft spots. Continental Motors sagged to a new low on passing the dividend, and Brockway dropped 3 points to 12, a new bottom.

Commodities were easy. Wheat futures sold off nearly 2 cents a bushel in sympathy with a sag at Liverpool, and reports of large Russian offerings, but rallied and closed practically unchanged. Corn eased less than a cent. Lower prices at Liverpool also affected the cotton market, which closed 75 to 80 cents a bale lower.

Weakness in sterling carried foreign exchanges generally lower, but business was dull, and the decline appeared to reflect little more than uncertainty over the course of money rates. [illegible] sterling cables dropped 1-4 cent to $4.87 9-16. French franc cables sagged 1-4 to 3.93 3-8 cents.

Treasury Balance.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 3—(AP)—Treasury receipts for Dec. 31, were $10,017,806.73; expenditures $11,759,547.36; balance $172,904,078.25.

Gold movements at New York today consisted of the withdrawal of $8,500,000 to be shipped to France. No gold was imported, nor was there any change in the stocks of earmarked gold.

THE CURB MARKET

NEW YORK, Jan. 3—(P)—Trading on the New York Curb exchange was in the doldrums today, the day's sales of 544,491 shares being the smallest of any full session for over a year. With "tax selling" over, "bears" finding little incentive to sell a dull market and bulls unable to attract a public following, little interest was shown in the day's proceedings. Price movements were irregular, with gains predominating at the close.

Such recent public utility leaders as American Superpower, Cities Service and Electric Bond and Share closed fractionally higher, after moving within the range of a point or two. A few ordinarily inactive issues such as Central & Southwest Utilities Power & Light, Commonwealth Edison and Duke Power registered substantial declines as stocks were offered for sale in a thin market.

Fox Theatres, which touched a new record low at 2 1-2 yesterday on the threat of a stockholders' committee to force a receivership, rallied above $5 a share on President Fox's estimate of 1929 earnings, but lost part of its gain. American Cigar, which broke to a new low yesterday on the omission of the regular quarterly dividend, rallied 13 points on what appeared to be short covering.

Cord Corporation improved fractionally but the few other motor shares listed lost ground. Ford of Canada B dropped 5 3-4 points on a turnover of about 100 shares. Stutz, which recently was petitioned into receivership, hovered just above the record low price of $1 a share.

Gulf Oil of Pennsylvania dropped 2 3-4 points on a few sales, but the other oils showed little change. Aviation Corporation of the Americas dropped 3 1-2 points and Western Air Express jumped nearly 4 on one sale of 100 shares. Lehman corporation and Marine Midland received good buying support, but the other investment trust, holding and trading corporation shares were sluggish.

BOND MARKET

NEW YORK, Jan. 3—(P)—A revival of interest in industrial bonds led to a general upward movement in this section of the list today. Rails and utilities were slightly more mixed than yesterday, but maintained a firm position. Many of the senior loans in the carrier group worked higher.

Prospects of cheaper money brightened when call loans dropped from 6 per cent, the renewal rate, to 5 and this reduction, although without direct effect on bonds, nevertheless strengthened sentiment. Inquiry for high grade industrials was apparent early in the session and increased during the afternoon. At the close fair sized gains had been recorded by American Smelting 5s, Reading Coal & Iron 5s, Republic Iron & Steel 5 1-2s, U. S. Rubber 5s, Western Electric 5s and other representative issues.

Secondary rails showed moderate improvement and the largest turnovers of the day appeared in these issues. Miscellaneous railroad obligations finishing with fractional advances included Santa Fe General 4s, Pennsylvania General 4 1-2s, Northern Pacific General 3s, St. Louis & San Francisco 4 1-2s and prior lien 4s, Union Pacific 4 1-2s, Western Maryland 4s, Baltimore & Ohio 6s, and Denver & Rio Grande Western General 5s. A few bonds, notably New Haven Refunding 4 1-2s, rose at least a point.

Dealing in the utilities proved to be small and only narrow changes appeared in the most active bonds, which included American Telephone Debenture 5s, Consolidated Gas of New York 5 1-2s, New York Telephone General 4 1-2s and New York Edison 6 1-2s. Western Union 5s advanced 1 1-8 to 103, or half a point below the 1929 high.

Inquiry for foreign obligations tapered off and prices were rather irregular. Australian listings, British 5 1-2s and Uruguay 6s showed an average gain of about 3-4, while a few Latin Americans rose 1 to 3 points.

The United States government department was unusually quiet and prices declined by minute fractions.

Convertibles had an irregular day. American Telephone 4 1-2s, which are being converted in considerable amounts, closed 1 3-4 higher. Reading Coal & Iron 6s lost a point and International Telephone 4 1-2s gained the same figure. American International 5 1-2s and Missouri Pacific 5 1-2s eased.

Members of the syndicate which is bringing out the 60,000,000 issue of Insull Utility Investments, Inc., 6 per cent convertible debentures reported that virtually the entire amount has been taken, although the loan is not to be publicly offered until next week. Subscriptions from the middle west, it was said, were double those from the east. The issue is, of course, the new year's first piece of major financing.

CHICAGO GRAIN MARKET

CHICAGO, Jan. 3—(P)—Despite late advices today that Russian wheat exports have become a reality, the wheat market here straightened up in the final dealings, overcoming earlier losses. Buying to collect profits on previous speculative selling was largely responsible for the rally, notwithstanding evidence that Russia had disposed of at least one export cargo of wheat today, the purchase going to Genoa, Italy. North American wheat export business today was moderate, but St. Louis dispatches said No. 2 red wheat for immediate delivery is commanding the highest basis yet this season.

Chicago closing quotations on wheat futures deliveries were irregular ranging from 1-4c decline to an equal advance. Compared with yesterday's finish, corn closed 3-8 to 3-4c down, oats unchanged to 1-4c off, and provisions varying from 2c and 5c set back to a rise of 5c.

Before the late recovery in wheat prices today, the market here sagged to 5 1-8c a bushel under yesterday's to plevel. The principal immediate cause of the drop was a sharp break in wheat quotations at Liverpool, where the bearish action of North American markets yesterday in response to talk of probable competition from Russia appeared to be a leading influence. However, something of an offset was news that Australian and Argentine wheat shipments for the week are unusually meagre, and that Australian wheat harvest returns now virtually complete point to an exportable surplus in Australia of not to exceed 50,000,000 bushels.

Helping further to bring about an upward swing toward the last today in Chicago wheat prices were prospects that total world shipments of wheat this week will be small. There were also advices that wet weather conditions in Argentina interfering with harvest operations. Consideration was also taken of an authoritative summary [illegible] the world wheat crop is 142 per cent [illegible] than last year and 3.3 per cent smaller than the average of the last five years, and that the shortage will be felt more keenly in the international market from now on than was the case before January 1.

Corn and oats averaged lower with wheat and as a result of favorable weather throughout the most of the corn belt. Shortage of terminal market storage room for corn was also given attention as a bearish factor.

Provisions derived firmness from upturns in the value of hogs.

According to the weekly estimate of the National Coal association, about 7,500,000 net tons of bituminous coal were mined in the United States during the week ending Dec. 28. This represents a decline of approximately 2,500,000 tons from the production of the previous week, due to the Christmas holidays.

George G. Kleindinst, president of the Liberty Bank, of Buffalo, N. Y., has been appointed a director of the Buffalo branch of the New York Federal Reserve bank to fill the unexpired term ending Dec. 31, 1931, of Edward A. Duerr, formerly chairman of the Community National bank, who has resigned.

ANNOUNCEMENTS

Woman's City Club

The first club meeting for January is that of the music group for study Monday, Jan. 6 at 7:30 p. m.

On Friday, the 10th, at 4 p. m. Mrs. Charlotte Perkins Gilman will speak to the Civics class upon the topic "What Is a City?"

Parsons' Theatre, Hartford

"Strange Interlude," the Eugene O'Neill Pulitzer prize play that the original producers, the New York Theatre Guild will bring to Parsons theatre, Hartford, on Monday, Jan. 20, for an engagement of six days is said to possess to a marked degree those qualities which lay hold of the imagination. The five hours and more that one must spend in the theatre viewing this extraordinary drama are filled with interest-sustaining moments right up to the final curtain. Starting promptly at 5:30 in the afternoon, the final curtain does not descend until 11 o'clock; but there is a dinner intermission from 7:40 to 9 p. m.

"Strange Interlude" brushes away conventional play construction and brings back a heritage of the past known to the stage as the "asides" which was relinquished by playwrights years ago. But these "asides" can almost be said to constitute the whole show with "Strange Interlude" for through them each character reveals his innermost thoughts, and as in all the O'Neill plays there is no mincing of word.

From the wide publicity that "Strange Interlude" has had it is the outstanding box office hit of the past and present New York theatrical season, and its heavy sale in book form, said to be the greatest of any stage play ever published as a book, no doubt its story is pretty generally known. It relates how Nina Leeds, a neurotic maiden, thwarted in her desire to marry her aviator sweetheart before he went overseas to give his life, and obsessed by thoughts that she will never bear his offspring, marries Sam Evans under the advice of well-wishing friends. But Sam is proven by his own mother to have a strain of insanity in his blood coming down through each generation on the paternal side. From there on, O'Neill has constructed a drama which will undoubtedly be provocative of more discussion than anything the local stage has had to offer in years.

Moving Pictures at Y. M. C. A.

At 4 o'clock tomorrow (Sunday) in the big gymnasium of the Y. M. C. A. the first part of the unusual moving picture feature, "White Sister" will be shown, with Lillian Gish and Ronald Colman as the principal artists.

This picture is adapted from Francis Marion Crawford's famous story.

Faith, hope and charity were the qualities that made the White Sister the world's sister.

Seven months were spent among the beautiful backgrounds of Italy and Northern Africa in photographing the scenes which include a magnificent view of Vesuvius in actual eruption.

This wonderful picture was recently shown in a large Baptist church on Sunday evening and the pastor reported that it was a most impressive sermon.

This picture will be shown in two parts; the first part tomorrow and the second part on January 12th.

The adult public is specially invited, and those fifteen and over will be admitted. Children under fifteen not expected.

New Nash Tailoring Agent

Nathan Whiteley who for years was the head of the dressing department of the Yantic mills takes Norwich agency for the Nash tailored suits and overcoats for gentlemen.

The life time of experience in the manufacturing of fine woolens and worsteds, his intimate knowledge of fabrics will undoubtedly be of important consideration and value to the patrons dealing with him.

Since Mr. Whiteley came here he has taken a wholesome and wholehearted interest in the social and church work of the community and has acquired a wide circle of friends who will be interested in his business adventure and his success in it.

A thorough shake-up in the control and management of government-owned corporations in the Philippines is predicted.

MOTOR TRUCKS TO REPLACE MAIL SERVICE HERE BY THE BOAT TRAINS

Mail service by motor trucks from New London instead of by the morning boat train on the Norwich & Worcester branch of the New Haven railroad is to be inaugurated Monday morning, according to information which Postmaster Casper K. Bailey has. At the same time the mail from the north which came down on the boat train at night is to be handled by motor trucks of the New England Transportation company, a subsidiary of the New Haven road. These changes are something which the Norwich postmaster says he has been working for for some time and from which he anticipates a great improvement in the mail service.

There are to be two trucks which will leave New London in the morning on the boat train time. One of these will carry the mail for Gales Ferry, Norwich and Jewett City, delivering the mail at each of these post offices. The other truck is scheduled to make its first stop at Plainfield and continue on from there to Worcester, with the mail for intermediate points. Postmaster Bailey has taken it up with the authorities to have this motor truck make a stop at Norwich in order to take on mail here for Plainfield and points beyond.

The mail from New London for Taftville, Versailles, Baltic and Hanover is to be brought up as far as Norwich on the Central Vermont railroad. It will be put off at the West Side station of the Central Vermont and transferred from there by the Norwich post office truck to be put on the trolley car at Franklin square so as to reach its destination.

The mail that has been carried on the boat train, north or south, has been subject to much delay, according to the postmaster, because the train was operated both for freight and mail, and its running schedule time was broken into by switching delays where there was freight to be put off. This hampered the mail service, especially at night. Mail from the north very often arrived at the Norwich office too late to be worked on the night of arrival. This delay was regularly to be expected, according to the postmaster, and it was rare for the night boat train to get in on time oftener than once in ten days. The motor truck is to leave Worcester at 4.30 p. m.

As the motor truck service will be free from such delays the postmaster believes that there will be a much more satisfactory mail service maintained with the trucks than by the boat train under the conditions that have existed.

STATE HIGHWAY DEPARTMENT HAS $12,500,000 TO SPEND

Approximately $12,500,000 will be expended by the Connecticut highway department for construction, reconstruction, maintenance and overhead during the year of 1930, according to an announcement made by Highway Commissioner John A. Macdonald. This amount, however, is the sum fixed upon by the 1929 general assembly and unless the total is changed by action of the board of finance and control it cannot be increased or decreased to assist financial conditions.

Commissioner Macdonald points out in his statement that the highway department, like all subdivisions of the state, operates strictly upon the budget established for it by the legislative committee on appropriations and later sanctioned by the legislative and executive departments. The budget is not subject to alteration during the biennial period except through special legislative or board action.

Thus, all highway department plans for the year were complete long before the stock market crash which brought the nationwide appeal from President Herbert Hoover for extraordinary construction work to offset whatever decline might result in business and employment.

The commissioner further states that in accordance with an act of the last assembly all funds expended through the highway department must come from the receipts in fees and fines of the motor vehicle department, and that highway expenditures are therefore necessarily limited to that income.

It is not expected that the employment situation in the highway department will be materially altered during the year; which means that the average number of employes on the department payrolls will be about 1,640 persons. This number will naturally be increased during the construction season and decreased during the late fall and winter months. The figure includes only employes actually in the pay of the department and none of those in the service of the various contractors to whom construction and reconstruction work is let upon a competitive bid basis.

OFFICER PATRICK MURPHY STRUCK BY AUTOMOBILE

While walking across Main street to Broadway, at Shannon corner, about 6:50 o'clock Friday morning, Officer Patrick Murphy, of No. 17 Winchester street, day driver of the police patrol, was struck and knocked down by an automobile operated by William R. MacDougal, 46, of No. 220 Broadway, an employe of the United States Finishing company. Mr. Murphy, who was on his way to the police station to report for duty, received injuries to his right shoulder and left knee, also was badly shaken up. He was attended by Dr. James J. Donohue at police headquarters and was later taken to his home by Officer Clifford Crary.

SONS OF AMER. REVOLUTION EXPECTING MEMBERSHIP GAIN

The Conn. society, Sons of the American Revolution report a net increase in membership for the year 1929 of 59, with 1317 members on the roll Dec. 31.

Among the deaths for the year just ended were those of Hon. Henry H. Gallup and Gen. William A. Aiken, of Norwich. The committee on membership, James S. Hedden, of West Haven, chairman, which includes Earle M. Wood, of Taftville, the secretary-treasurer of Gen. Israel Putnam branch of this city, is hard at work on the job, to repair the vacancies by death and otherwise. From the general interest taken in the objects of the order, "Patriotic, Historical and Educational," they have reason to predict a year of prosperity for 1930.

GIVEN $200 FINE WITH SUSPENDED JAIL SENTENCE

Charged with violation of the liquor law, Mrs. Julia Frankiewicz of No. 141 Roosevelt avenue was presented in the city court Friday morning and fined $200 and costs, in addition to a 30-day jail sentence, execution of which was suspended for a year. In suspending the jail sentence Judge Arthur F. Libby said to the woman that he had done this in consideration of her two small children and not because of sympathy for her. Her husband left her recently and she is the sole means of support of the children.

Her place on Roosevelt avenue was raided late Thursday afternoon by State Police Officers Arthur Whitmarsh and Elmer Smith of the Groton baracks, after which she was arrested. It is alleged that the troopers secured evidence of an actual sale. Two 20-gallon stills, one of which was in operation, 200 gallons of rye mash and a small quantity of alcohol were seized in the raid. Besides operating the speakeasy Mrs. Frankiewicz conducts a small farm.

DIVORCE GRANTED FOR EAST LYME MAN

Before Judge Christopher L. Avery at the short calendar session of the superior court here Friday, Louis Beebe, of East Lyme, was granted a divorce from Laura Olsen Beebe, of Old Lyme, whom he married on Dec. 9, 1926. The suit was uncontested. The complaint alleged that a baby was born to the defendant in May, 1927, of which the plaintiff was not the father and that at the time they were married the defendant had fraudulently concealed from him the fact that she was expecting to become a mother.

KNIGHTS OF COLUMBUS

Continuing its review of the institution and accomplishments of the Knights of Columbus, the current Catholic Transcript (Hartford) has the following:

Since the founding of the order in 1882, education has been one of its important activities. As early as 1904, the order endowed a chair in American history at the Catholic University of America. Later, a permanent endowment of half a million dollars was raised at the urgent request of the trustees of the university and all archbishops of the Catholic church in America. In return for this endowment, which amounted to almost $4 per member, the trustees generously reciprocated by giving to the order fifty scholarships in perpetuity. More than a hundred men who are making a name for themselves today in the field of science, philosophy and law owe their training to the Knights of Columbus, and they are only a very, very small portion of the total number of men who have received free schooling because of Knights of Columbus' dollars.

What the national council did on large scale, many of the state councils have done on a small scale in the own jurisdictions. The outstanding fea tures of the order's educational wo since the World war have been eve ing schools, scholarships and corre pondence schools. The war ended fo most of the so-called relief organiza tions with the signing of the armistic but not so the Knights of Columbu Several thousand dollars which ha been raised for war work remained o hand and the supreme officers and d rectors were determined that the me for whom it was raised should benef by it at home if not abroad. Early i 1919, Knights of Columbus evenin schools sprang up like mushroom over the entire country, their numbe finally reaching one hundred and fift Ex-service men, regardless of thei race and creed, were invited and, fact, implored to attend the school They were told that they owed it t themselves and to their families t make up for the year or more they ha lost out of their lives in the service c their country. They came by the thousands, and in 1925, when the war fun reached a point where it was no longe possible to carry on the schools, 318,916 ex-service men had taken advantage of the opportunities which th order had afforded them to improv their general education or learn trade.

It would be hard to say how man men now established in well-payin businesses owe their training to th Knights of Columbus evening school During the same period, 403 scholar ships were awarded former servic men in standard secular and Cathol institutions. Of the original 403 me who enrolled for the scholarships, 2 finished their course, and of this num ber today, many have won more tha ordinary honors and fame in the world At least one stands high in consul service, another heads a prominen school of law, and many others sta high in their chosen profession. No of these men could have afforded a college education.

SEARCHING FOR THREE PRISONERS WHO ESCAPED FROM WETHERSFIELD

Roland Lalone, the Ice Box Bandit, One of the Trio—Authorities Believe the Escaped Convicts Stole a Sedan in Rocky Hill and Abandoned the Car in Springfield—Later the Police Reported a Trio Speeding Through Palmer in Another Car, Which Had Been Stolen in Springfield—Highways of Connecticut and Massachusetts Are Being Closely Guarded.

HARTFORD, Jan. 5—(AP)—A search embracing two states was in progress tonight for three prisoners who escaped from the Wethersfield state prison yesterday morning.

The last word received by state police here, was that a speeding automobile, carrying three men believed to be the convicts, one of whom was a lifer, went through Palmer, Mass., shortly after midnight this morning. Since then the trail has been cold.

The belief, however, was expressed that the men, Roland Lalone, of Worcester, who was sentenced to a life term for the murder of a state policeman at Pomfret, Conn.; Leo Landry, of Revere, Mass., serving a three to four year term for burglary, and Watson Moulthrope, of Danbury, Conn., serving 18 to 25 years for robbery, had been in hiding during the day and tonight would make another break for the open, in a stole ncar. Massachusetts police were guarding every road in hopes of a capture.

Tearing away a bar across a skylight in the prison bakeshop, they dropped over the high wall surrounding the Wethersfield prison a few minutes after five o'clock yesterday morning, and disappeared.

They were hatless, and wore the prison garb. How they cut away the bar from the skylight still was a mystery. It has not been determined if they had outside aid.

Authorities believe they hid in a field until nightfall and then entered a barn at Rocky Hill, near here. After dark they stole a sedan, police believe, belonging to a New Haven man who was visiting at Rocky Hill, and, with reckless daring, took the main highway toward Springfield, Mass.

The sedan was found abandoned in that city, and son afterwards police reported the trio speeding through Palmer, Mass., in another car. A machine was stolen there, in Springfield, too, police were told, and it is believed the thieves were the three prisoners.

State Policeman Roy Pettengill, who was injured when thrown off a running-board of a police car while en route to patrol the Hartford-Springfield highway, was said to have been unconscious a part of today. Hope was expressed, however, that he would recover.

With the state police commissioner, Robert T. Hurley giving credence to the theory that the three convicts who escatped Saturday from the state prison took the automobile of J. S. Legge, which was stolen in Rocky Hill, Saturday and found abandoned late at night in Springfield, the center of state police activity today shifted from Wethersfield. Commissioner Hurley declined to reveal the disposition of his forces, but admitted it was fair to assume that their efforts today were in territory along the Massachusetts border.

"I have every reason to believe their own conduct will cause their apprehension," Commissioner Hurley said regarding the three fugitives.

SLEW WIFE, HER MOTHER AND HER STEPFATHER

SALT LAKE CITY, Jan. 5—(AP)—Authorities announced that Delbert Green, 26, today confessed that he killed his young wife, her mother and her step-father, James Green, who also was his uncle, about midnight last night.

The triple slaying occurred at the home of the uncle in Davis county about 30 miles north of Salt Lake City, where Mrs. Delbert Green had gone yesterday after a family quarrel. Delbert Green was arrested at his home in Ogden.

He told the officers he had followed his wife to her mother's home "determined to settle matters."

"I figured I would bump them off and then bump myself off," he added. "I would have killed myself but the gun jammed."

Three members of the Green family escaped his bullets, his grandmother, Mrs. Hannah Green; his 10 year old sister-in-law, Lois Green, and his own infant daughter. The baby was found after the killings beside the body of her mother, who was slain while in bed.

ACUTE FINANCIAL PROBLEM IN CHINA

SHANGHAI, Jan. 5—(AP)—The Chinese republic today was confronted with an acute financial problem in the form of depreciated currency as a result of the steady decline in the value of the Chinese silver Mexican dollar in addition to the grave political uncertainties with which China has been struggling.

This dollar is now worth only 33 cents gold as compared with 43 cents a year ago. Bankers and financial experts predict that its value will slump as far as 30 cents gold, possibly farther.

As a result of this currency decline which has been unprecedented in the last quarter century, merchants especially importers, both foreign and Chinese, have felt much hardship due to their commitments being payable in gold. Numerous importers are refusing to accept shipments. This refusal has placed many Chinese banks in a difficult position and failures are predicted.

SENATE TO DEBATE TARIFF BEFORE PROHIBITION

WASHINGTON, Jan. 5—(AP)—Senate dry leaders who have been spending the holidays arguing over the Hoover enforcement program today called a truce on prohibition in favor of full debate on the long pending tariff bill.

But prohibition had its place alongside the tariff at the heap of a mass of legislative problems confronting congress as it prepared to resume tomorrow the first regular session in the administration of President Hoover.

There was no definite assurance that the prohibition warriors in the senate could be stilled but there were pronouncements today from the leaders of all factors demanding that every attention be given to final disposition of the tariff which has been in the hands of the senate since last June.

The house tomorrow will go to work on its calendar and also will receive the third of the annual appropriation bills—that for the war department. It is in the house that the prospect for first action on the dry controversy is seen.

SANTA MONICA, Calif., Jan. 5—(AP)—A storm which struck southern California early today balked efforts of searchers to bring to the surface two airplanes which crashed in mid-air over the ocean off Point Vicente Thursday with a loss of ten lives.

COL. AND MRS. CHARLES LINDBERGH IN LOS ANGELES

LOS ANGELES, Calif., Jan. 5—(AP)—Colonel and Mrs. Charles A. Lindbergh arrived late today at the Grand Central Air terminal, Glendale, from Mingman, Arizona, on the last stage of a leisurely trans-continental flight. Colonel Lindbergh is making an inspection tour of Trans-Continental Air Transport routes and air fields.

Asked if he had come to Los Angeles to take delivery of a specially designed low wing monoplane built for him here, Colonel Lindbergh replied that he was anxious to examine the new ship.

As the couple entered an automobile to leave the airport a sound-news reel cameraman photographed Mrs. Lindbergh talking to Lieut. D. W. Tomlinson, former navy "sea hawk" and vice president of Maddux Air Lines. She was heard to say that it had been "extremely cold" flying over the Arizona mountains in their open cockpit plane. Observing the camerman, Lindbergh turned and said "please don't take any more pictures."

Lindbergh's new and secretly built monoplane has been termed in aviation circles here "the flying gas tank" because of its 450 gallon fuel tanks. The plane is reputed to have a speed of more than 200 miles an hour.

18-YEAR-OLD BOY SLAIN AND BURNED TO DEATH

STEGER, Ill., Jan. 5—(AP)—The body of a youth about 18 years old, was found by police today on a pyre of flaming alcohol cans, in an automobile near here.

Police believe the lad was slain for encroaching on the precincts of a gang of bootleggers who hit on the bizarre cremation as a method of terrifying other trespassers.

Sergeant Henry Siegel of the Homewood county police said he was attracted by an explosion and flare of flame while patrolling a highway two miles from the scene. With a companion officer he sped to a wooded lane known as Devil's Paradise to find the automobile vertiable vessel of fire.

The sergeant said the car, saturated with alcohol and gasoline, was in the dead center of the narrow road.

A post mortem showed that the youth had been shot from behind, the bullet entering the back of the head and emerging through the forehead.

PRESIDENT OF CLOSED BANK KILLED HIMSELF

DONNELLSON, Ill., Jan. 5—(AP) — Charles O. Mansfield, 70, president of the State Bank of Donnellson, which was closed Saturday by the board of directors shot and killed himself in his home here this morning.

The banker's body was found in a sitting position in the basement of his home by a son, Paul, who rushed down stairs when he heard a shot fired. A pistol was found near the body.

The bank of Donnellson, organized by Mansfield in 1903, was closed by order of the board of directors because of frozen assets, due to loans on farm lands. Two state bank examiners are in charge of the institution, which was capitalized at $30,000 and had a surplus of $1500, with deposits exceeding $100,000.

RESCUE PLANE NOW MISSING IN ALASKA

FAIRBANKS, Alaska, Jan. 5—(AP)—The dense fog and snow over the region west of Nulato, which yesterday halted the flight to Nome of two Fairchild planes brought here from Seattle to engage in the search for Pilot Carl Ben Eielson and his mechanic, Early Borland, missing since November 9, today guarded the fate of the Canadian aviator, Captain Pat Reid, chief pilot of the expedition, and his two passengers.

Shot His Father Dead; Wounded His Mother

Student Home For a Violation Had Requested Them to Pray.

ST. LOUIS, Jan. 5—(AP)—After getting his parents out of bed early today to ask them if they believed in God and then ordering them to pray, Alan R. Schumm, 17-year old freshman at the University of Illinois, drew a revolver, shot his father to death and wounded his mother.

He then surrendered to police and admitted the shooting but offered no explanation. Police, who placed the youth under guard in an observation ward at City hospital, expressed belief he was temporarily mentally deranged because of over absorption in his studies.

The father, William Schumm, 43, office manager for a local law firm, was shot once in the right chest. The mother was wounded twice in the hip.

Young Schumm, who was home for the holidays, returned to the family flat at 2 a. m. from a party at the home of a girl friend, Miss Elsa Winkler, 16. Instead of going directly to bed he sat in the living room and read awhile, according to his mother, who said that he read extensively and recently had been acting queerly. She declared he had not been drinking.

Finally he summoned his parents, who were in bed, and as they came into the living room he asked them if they believed in God.

"Certainly," replied the father, "I'm a Mason, naturally I believe there is a supreme being."

"Then pray!" commanded the youth. The parents looked puzzled by this strange demeanor but did not comply and young Schumm drew a pistol and began shooting.

His father staggered to the hallway and fell dead in front of a bathroom door.

His mother ran into the kitchen, followed by the son, who pressed the pistol against her as she sought shelter in a closet. Mrs. Schumm wrested the weapon from the boy and pulled the trigger three times to make sure the chambers were empty, she said, as she feared the boy would turn the gun upon himself.

She then threw the revolver under the kitchen range and ran upstairs to the apartment of a neighbor where she discovered she had been wounded twice. She was removed to a hospotal.

Schumm was a student in the Liberal Arts and Science school. His brother, Arthur, is a senior at the same university. The brother was visiting in Decatur, Ill., at the time of the shooting.

Calvin [illegible]oolidge And Al [illegible]th Executors

[illegible]ll of Conrad Hubert—[illegible] Institutions Will Receive About $6,000,000.

NEW YORK, Jan. 5—(AP)—Former President Calvin Coolidge, former Governor Alfred E. Smith and Julius Rosenwald, of Chicago, the committee of three prominent citizens chosen by executors under the will of the late Conrad Hubert, today announced the names of 33 institutions which have been selected by them to receive approximately $6,000,000.

Mr. Hubert, inventor of the pocket flashlight and other electrical devices, died Feb. 14, 1928, at Cannes, France. He directed in his will that three prominent citizens be appointed to determine the institutions to which three quarters of his fortune should be distributed.

Distribution of the funds was divided into three classifications. Funds on hand, totalling $4,600,000, will go to 15 institutions. In the second group, eight institutions will receive the first million dollars of the residuary estate and in the third group, ten institutions will receive bequests from the remaining funds.

The committee held its final meeting Friday in the offices of the Bankers Trust company, which, with C. Bertram Plante, president of Mr. Hubert's Bond Electric Corporation of Jersey City, N. J., is executor and trustee of the estate.

Afterward the committee granted an interview to reporters, with Mr. Coolidge acting as chairman.

"We have enjoyed the several months in this interesting work," he said. "I think you know the story of Conrad Hubert and his life. It was agreed by the committee that Mr. Smith would act as spokesman for the committee."

Mr. Smith pointed out that Mr. Hubert had made an unique provision in his will and that the committee, under the will, had been the judge of how much to give each institution, as well as what institutions should benefit.

"We have tried the best we know how to have this money make more money for charity," Mr. Smith said. "We have been in session at regular intervals since June or July and have had a pleasant time together."

He explained that a number of circumstances had been taken into consideration in distributing the fund.

"We have tried very hard to have the service from the expenditure of this money spread over the largest number of people," he said. Citing the bequest of $500,000 to the Provident hospital, of Chicago, to be used to train young Negroes to be physicians.

"This will have a far reaching effect down through the ages," he commented.

Following are the bequests to be made from funds on hand:

St. Vincent's hospital, New York, $500,000.

Boy Scouts of America, $500,000.

Girl Scouts, Inc., $500,000.

MILITARY HONORS IN ROME FOR PRINCESS MARIE JOSE

Belgian Princess, Fiancee of Crown Prince Humbert of Italy, Found Her Fiance and Other Illustrious Personag[illegible] Awaiting Her Arrival—A Huge Crowd Cheered as The Royal Couple Exchanged Greetings—They Arrive[illegible] the Palace Amid The Bombing of Cannon and Sho[illegible] Greeting—Marie Rose Seemed Pleased With [illegible]thing—Week of Festivities is to Follow.

Rome, Jan. 5—(AP)—Princess Marie Jose, fiancee of Crown Prince Humbert of Italy, came smiling today to a Rome bright with winter sunshine, and made a quick conquest of thousands who hailed her as their future queen.

The princess' royal train drew into the station at 10 a. m. and she found her fiance and other illustrious personages waiting there to pay her military honors. An enormous crowd cheered as the royal couple exchanged greetings, and continued their acclamations as the party drove toward the Quirinal palace.

The smiling Belgian girl, with curly chestnut hair, and the radiant healthy complexion for which her countrywomen are noted, took this ancient capital by storm. Her simple graciousness roused packed crowds of citizens to a high pitch of enthusiasm as she drove down lanes kept open by smartly attired troops.

Facing her in the open carriage, drawn by prancing blacks, was Humbert, Prince of Piedmont, the bridegroom-to-be, in the full regalia of a colonel of infantry. His face was lighted up by an engaging smile.

Beside Marie Jose was her sister-in-law, the Duchess of Brabant, born the Princess Astrid of Sweden, with Humbert sat the young Prince Charles of Belgium, known as the Count of Flanders.

Marie Jose wore a white moire dress, trimmed with white fox fur, and over it a fur-bordered beige gray coat. A hat of white texture, with a silver ornament, crowned her chestnut curls. She had a magnificent string of pearls around her throat, and carried a big bouquet of white lilacs.

"This northland princess has brought spring to Rome," said some admirer in the crowd, as the carriage passed by.

Marie Jose seemed pleased with everything. Her face brightened in a smile when she saw the glittering cuirassiers drawn up in front of the station. When a marine band broke into "La Brabanconne," the Belgian national anthem she bowed and beamed graciously.

John W. Garrett, of Baltimore, United States ambassador to Italy, and Mrs. Garrett, who live nearby in the Rospigliosi palace, deserted points of vantage offered them, and stood behind the ranks of soldiers in order to see better.

Shortly after their arrival at the palace, the prince and princess themselves came out on the balcony, their appearance rousing the crowd to a fever pitch of enthusiasm. A[illegible] Jose's right stood her father, [illegible] her left the queen of Italy. [illegible] had the queen of Belgium [illegible] father to his left. The royal p[illegible] tired presently, but was draw[illegible] by the crowd's plaudits. Fin[illegible] young couple alone came out [illegible] balcony in answer to a renew[illegible] onstration. They made three m[illegible] pearances before the crowd w[illegible] isfied.

All officers were in full dres[illegible] tachments had bayonets fixed[illegible] officers stood with bared sword[illegible]

The princess' day began wit[illegible] ception at Civitavecchia at 8:3[illegible] hour later, when the royal trai[illegible] at the Trastevere station, [illegible] right bank of the Tiber, Prince [illegible] bert climbed aboard and rode [illegible] the Belgian party to the central terminus. This surprise visit added perceptibly to the princess' pleasure. She fairly beamed when she alighted in Rome, where she was fondly embraced by her future father-in-law and mother-in-law.

During the ride from the station to the palace King Victor Emanuel of Italy and King Albert of Belgium took the lead in a horse-drawn carriage.

In the next carriage were the two queens, Helena of Italy and Elizabeth of Belgium. The Belgian queen appeared so youthful and gay, despite a recent influenza attack, that the crowd at first mistook her for Princess Marie Jose.

She laughed delightedly when greeted with shouts of "Long Live the Princess."

Queen Elizabeth carried a great bunch of orchids offered her at Trastevere by her future son-in-law. Queen Helena had a bouquet of violets.

The engaged couple rode in the third carriage. After them came a succession of vehicles, each manned with coachmen and footmen in red livery, wearing white wigs and convoying the princess of the Italian house and ladies and gentlemen in waiting at the Italian and Belgian courts.

Premier Mussolini and the ministers of his government were presented to the visiting sovereigns upon arrival at the Quirinal. The whole party attended mass at the private chapel in one of the palace wings. When the demonstration of the crowd in front of the palace subsided, the visiting royalties, augmented by the arrival of King Boris of Bulgaria with his sister Eudoxia and his brother Cyril, lunched privately. They spent the rest of the day resting in preparation for the forthcoming week's heavy round of festivities.

MOVEMENTS OF PRESENT-ELECT RUBIO OF MEXICO

CHICAGO, Jan. 5—(AP)—President-elect Pascual Ortiz Rubio of Mexico spent the major portion of his time today at the plant and proving grounds of a large road machinery manufacturing company at Harvey, Illinoois.

Having declared highway building, especially completion of the Meridian highway from Canada south through Central America, an important factor in his administration's program, the Mexican president-elect evinced keen interest in the production process and demonstration of all types of road building equipment.

Early in the day Senor Don Rubio and a small party, including Dr. Puig Cassaurano, governor of the federal district of Mexico, and Arthur B. Lane of Washington, chief of the Mexican division of the state department, left by auto for suburban Harvey. As the guests of Kenneth H. Forbes, official of the plant visited, they stopped en route for an informal luncheon at the South Shore Country club.

Because of a conflict in the time the president-elect was forced to cancel a scheduled address to members of the Chicago Mexican colony but later received many of them at his hotel.

The entourage was to leave late tonight for Kansas City, Mo., where they plan to remain through tomorrow.

UNDER-COVER DRY MAN WAS KILLED IN DETROIT

DETROIT, Jan. 5—(AP) — Detroit gangsters claimed two victims today. One was a prohibition enforcement under-cover man.

The body of George Mast, 27, was found in an alley at 8 o'clock this morning. Marks on his throat led police to believe he had been strangled with wire.

Motorists found the body of Fred Gill, 48, on Oakwood boulevard in Dearborn, Detroit suburb, early today. He had been "taken for a ride" and shot between the eyes.

Thomas H. Brennan, assistant prohibition administrator here, said Mast was not a federal agent but had been employed on occasions as an informer, although not within the past six months.

Gill's wife and two men were held for questioning.

$200,000 FIRE STARTED IN A CHRISTMAS TREE

WHITE PLAINS, N. Y., Jan. 5—(AP)—Fire, which started in a Christmas tree tonight, destroyed the 40-room country home of George W. Hill, president of the American Tobacco company. Many valuable paintings and all the furnishings in the house were burned. The owner estimated his loss at about $200,000.

Two children of Mr. Hill were playing in front of the tree when the fire started, police said. Two exposed wires on the tree touched, there was a flash and the tinder-like fire burst into flame.

The children, Percival, 8, and Mary, 7, were rescued by a housekeeper, who took them out of the room while nine other servants sought in vain to put out the fire with pails of water.

GEN. SMUTS BELIEVES WAR WILL BE BANISHED EVENTUALLY

NEW YORK, Jan. 5—(AP)—Gen. Jan Christiaan Smuts, South African leader and one of the founders of the league of nations, today outlined some of the reasons he believes war will be banished eventually.

Speaking to more than 4,000 persons gathered in the Metropolitan Opera House to celebrate the tenth anniversary of the league, he said the factors which will lead to the desired result are a system of conferences among nations to settle their disputes and vigorous public opinion that will force governments to follow the paths of peace.

General Smuts paid a high tribute to the late President Wilson for his work in behalf of world peace and said the United States, despite non-membership in the league, has and can continue to work effectively with it.

Newton D. Baker, former secretary of war, said the creation of the league and the world court, the treaty of Locarno and the pact of Paris represented more progress toward peace than took place in the preceding thousand years.

Dr. Nicholas Murray Butler, president of Columbia university, urged that after joining the world court the United States go all the way and join the league of nations.

George W. Wickersham presided.

ACCUSERS TO BE HELD ON CHARGE OF MURDER

GUNTERSVILLE, Ala., Jan. 5—(AP)—Mrs. Dovie Hicks, 32, and H. G. Culbreath, each of whom has accused the other of slaying Gilbert Ayers, young mountaineer, as he lay asleep in the woman's home near Double Springs, Ala., last Thursday night, were taken today to Double Springs, where they will be held without bond on charges of first degree murder.

Both Culbreath and Mrs. Hicks testified before the coroner's jury that Ayers was killed at her boarding house, but each steadfastly accused the other as being the actual slayer. From this point their stories were substantially the same— that they placed the body in an automobile and drove over part of several north Alabama counties before disposing of it near Warrenton.

NEW LONDON, Jan. 5—(AP)—That more of the liquor stolen from the captured rum runner, Flor-Del-Mar, by coast guardsmen has been found aboard patrol boats and destroyers returning from duty in the coastal waters of New England, was indicated here tonight by Captain L. T. Chalker, chief of staff of the destroyer force.

The precise amount discovered and the number of ships and men involved were not revealed by the captain, who, however, promised a full statement tomorrow.

The statement, he said, would be made after he had conferred with commanders of boats which put in here yesterday after a five-day cruise. He said it was true that some liquor had been found on them.

Following the trend of the weather the hopes and despair of ice dealers here rise and fall. Thawing weather in the early part of last week did not seriously affect the thickness of the ice, which now ranges from six to eight inches, but the water and heavy fogs somewhat ruined the good quality of the ice by softening and perforating the top. Although a good supply is reported as still on hand at the city plant in Mansfield the majority of the independent dealers have been forced to cut and market this season's crop. In some cases two slabs of ice instead of the customary one are being supplied for domestic use.

DANIELSON

LITTLE CHANCE OF LALONE BEING IN THIS SECTION

(Special to The Bulletin)

DANIELSON, Jan. 5.— There isn't the proverbial Chinaman's chance that Roland G. Lalone killer of State Officer Irving H. Nelson at Pomfret on Good Friday evening, April 6, 1928 is in this section of eastern Connecticut, notwithstanding general reports to that effect following the escape of the ice-box bandit and two other convicts from the state prison at Wethersfield early Saturday morning. This statement is made on the authority of state and local police and to allay very general fear and apprehension that was so manifest in the conversation of so many people here and hereabouts today.

Lalone, the officers point out, has no connections here. His relations, his friends and his field of operations are elsewhere. Over and above that he is known by sight to almost every police officer, state, borough, town or city, in this part of the state. He is too crafty to venture into this territory and take the chance of being killed on sight, for such would be his fate facing many officers who know his record as a ruthless killer and a man who never gives anyone a chance, nor deserves one himself.

Feeling against Lalone runs high here, for he is generally regarded as the man who actually fired the shots that killed State Officer Nelson, a World war veteran attached to the Danielson barracks at the time he was killed.

The usual crop of wild rumors as to Lalone and the two other convicts that escaped with him being in this territory were quick to develop, once the news spread that the ice-box bandit was at large. There was not the slightest foundation for these fanciful stories. Late this afternoon it was frankly admitted in police circles that no real clue to the whereabouts of Lalone and his escaping companions had been obtained.

It appeared rather definitely settled, however, that they had stolen a car—an Oakland sedan, registration Conn. Y-4130, near Wethersfield, Saturday, taking it from where it had been left parked near a swamp by a hunter. The car later was found abandoned in Springfield, where Lalone, as one of the ice-box bandit crew, made a large part of his criminal record, and where the jam started with Officer Ray Gallagher that ended two or three hours later in the killing of State Officer Nelson at Pomfret. Gallagher shot it out with the bandits, and they with him, one bullet from his revolver piercing the gasoline tank of the car in which Lalone and Raymond were riding. The Oakland that the escaped convicts are believed to have stolen also had two sets of commercial numbers (Conn.) 19847 and 19875 within it when the machine was taken.

State officers from the Danielson barracks, working in pairs, scoured and carried on patrol on all highways hereabouts during Saturday and up to 3 a. m. this morning. They chased down rumors having a bearing on the whereabouts of the escaped men, especially one emanating from Plainfield, where a Cadillac sedan, followed by a smaller car came tearing out of the Canterbury road at a speed estimated at as high as 75 miles an hour. This clue, like all others of the day, proved valueless.

It was believed in official circles here that Lalone and his companions hid out in the woods all day Saturday and made a get-away with a stolen car into Massachusetts after nightfall.

About 5:30 Saturday evening, at Attawaugan, Adehemar Benoit, proprietor of a grocery store at Putnam, was struck by a hit and run driver operating a motor truck, and as a result is now at the Day Kimball hospital in Putnam. The injured man has a broken leg and is otherwise battered and bruised. Benoit delivers groceries to customers in Attawaugan. He was engaged on this mission, and was crossing the street from where he had left his car parked near Pepin's filling station when he was run down and hurt. The driver of the truck that hit him kept on his way. State officers are checking up on the case, with the possibility of the identity of the truck driver being established.

A death at Abington during Saturday was that of Mrs. Catherine Ducat, 56, wife of William Ducat. Mrs. Ducat had been in failing health for some time. She was a native of Plattsburg, N. Y. her maiden name being Catherine King. For several years Mrs. Ducat her husband and children were residents of Killingly. Later the family moved to Providence and still later to Abington. Mrs. Ducat is survived by her husband and the following children: Francis, Mrs. Percy Brown of this town; Mrs. Adolphuse Buskey of Keene, N. H.; Henry, Moosup; William, Hartford, and Mrs. Wilfred Bernier.

The body of Pierre Dumas, 82, who died in Montreal, was taken in charge Saturday at Worcester by Undertaker L. E. Kennedy and brought to this town, where Mr. Dumas was a resident for many years, at Ballouville, and proprietor of a livery stable there in the old days. He was a native of Canada. He leaves two sons, residents of Ballouville, Peter and Adelard, and a daughter, Clara, whose home is in Canada.

Officers of Quinebaug Pomona grange and others to the number of 25, assembled here from various parts of the jurisdiction Saturday evening for the purpose of mapping out in a general way the Pomona program for 1930. The meeting was in G. A. R. hall in the Keystone block and prior to the business session a turkey dinner was served and pronounced delicious. The first meeting of the year is scheduled to be held with Brooklyn grange at Brooklyn on February 22, Washington's birthday. Subsequent meetings were scheduled as follows: April 26, with Ashford grange, at Warrenville; May 31, with Little River grange at Hampton; August 21, annual field day at Mansfield Hollow, as in 1929; October 25, with Ekonk grange at Ekonk; Dec. 6 with Wolf Den grange at Abington.

Mrs. Alice M. Swanson, of Eagleville, member of Echo grange and chairman of the Home Economics committee of Quinebaug Pomona grange, with several assistants had charge of arranging the dinner here Saturday evening.

Danielson's Civic federation functions just about as regularly as a good watch. The report of the visiting nurse, Miss Miriam Boomhower for December, proves the rule. During that period Miss Boomhower made 127 nursing visits and among other duties spent six half days in the schools. When Dr. Hugh Campbell came here from Norwich on Dec. 17, to conduct the monthly chest clinic, under the auspices of the federation, 11 patients were attended. In addition to the nursing visits, Miss Boomhower made 12 advisory visits. There were 18 cases carried over from November and during December. 11 new cases were given attention. During December, 12 of those that had been under treatment were discharged. At the first of the year 17 patients remained under care. Social service visits during the month numbered 33. Relief given included the distribution of 94 garments, pairs of rubbers, toys, games, books, dolls, magazines. Among the benefactors of the month were Mrs N. A. Witter, Mrs. Harry Magoon, Mrs. Mather Mrs. E. M. Marlor, Mrs. W. K. Pike Mrs. A. Del Pesco, the American Legion auxiliary, the Pythian Sisters and one unknown contributor.

Mrs. John B. Bassett, of Broad street, entertained more than a score of guests tonight on the occasion of her birthday anniversary. A dinner was served at the Snake Meadow club.

Through a change in arrangements a meeting of Brooklyn grange scheduled originally for Jan 14, has been advanced to Monday evening, Jan. 6.

This particular Sunday morning will rate among the cold ones of the present winter season. Minimum temperatures from 4 to 10 above zero were reported from various sections of the borough.

There will be special attention here during the coming week as to the manner in which mails come in, as to being on time, now that the boat trains have been removed.

Trappers of fur-bearing animals are said to be meeting with considerable success just now, notwithstanding the many restrictions under which they operate, as to statute laws.

Christmas greens and Christmas lighting effects that have helped to make Danielson more colorful are a thing of the past at numbers of homes here until another Yuletide rolls around, the week end marking the end of many of these displays.

PUTNAM

POLICE HERE ACTIVE IN SEARCH FOR LALONE

(Special to The Bulletin)

PUTNAM, Jan. 5—Telephone and telegraph wires, teletype machines of the police system, the radio and special editions of metropolitan dailies were alive at an early hour Saturday morning with tales that vividly depicted the daring and so far successful jail break of the notorious criminal Roland Lalone of Worcester and two convict companions from the state prison at Wethersfield shortly before dawn Saturday. Lalone, a forgotten figure to the outside world since October 21, 1928 when he was sentenced in superior court in this city to spend the remainder of his life behind the gray walls of prison was emblazoned again in the minds of Windham county residents where on the evening of April 6, 1928 at Pomfret, Lalone and his partner in crime, Albert G. Raymond, from a speeding automobile fired a fusillade of shots that killed State Trooper Irving N. Nelson of the Danielson barracks. After committing their unforgivable deed the super-bandits sped on, cutting a zig-zag path across the northern part of the county which took them through this city into Massachusetts where they disappeared, until found a week later at their homes in Worcester, Mass.

Immediately upon discovery of the escape of the trio of bandits from the prison, officials spread the word throughout the state. Lieut. Ross V. Urquhart of the state police barracks at Danielson, to which Officer Nelson was attached, detailed his squad of officers to post every road and byway within the district in search of the desperados. Acting Captain George H Liard of the local police was informed of the Wethersfield occurrence and descriptions were issued to every patrolman in the department with instructions to maintain a sharp lookout for the three men. Lieut Urquhart said this afternoon that every officer attached to the Danielson barracks remained on duty during Saturday night and will continue to maintain the vigil incessantly until other orders are received.

NEW POLICE CAPTAIN WILL BE NAMED TONIGHT

(Special to The Bulletin)

PUTNAM, Jan. 5—The city's new captain of police will be known late Monday evening shortly after the oath of office is administered to nine aldermen who will represent the various municipal wards during the next two years. The appointing of a successor to the late Captain William J. Jarvis will be the major problem of the evening, although it will not be the first matter of city business to be discharged by the incoming council. Captain Jarvis's successor is still unknown, even to those on the inside, including Mayor Charles A. Richard and Police Commissioner John M. Dean. It is known that the board of aldermen which will take office tomorrow evening have held conferences during the past week in an effort to eliminate some of the contestants for the office made vacant by the death of Captain Jarvis, but at a late hour tonight it was said that no slate had been compiled which contained the name of a police captain.

Adhemar Benoit, local business man who conducts a grocery store at the corner of Walnut and Barber streets, is a patient at the Day Kimball hospital suffering from a broken leg and other injuries sustained early Saturday evening when struck by a hit and run driver whose identity is still a mystery, according to a report from the state police barracks at Danielson where officers are conducting an investigation. The accident occurred in the village of Attawaugan, three miles south of here on the Danielson-Putnam highway. Benoit, according to a resident of the village who arrived on the spot a few minutes afterward apparently walked into the speeding vehicle while going to his delivery truck parked on the opposite side of the road. From what could be gathered at the scene, the grocer had delivered provisions to an Attawaugan home and was about to return to his store in this city when struck. There was evidence that the driver of the car had stopped and propped the injured man up against a telephone pole and made off. A little girl who happened by ran to her home close by and told of what she saw. Her father came to Benoit's assistance taking him to the Day Kimball hospital. When the victim gathered his senses he was unable to recall what had taken place, his recollection dating back to his walk to the truck. According to a report from the hospital this afternoon Benoit's injuries besides a fracture of the leg, consist of severe face and scalp abrasions and a possible fracture of the thumb. His condition is reported as improved.

State officers are combing the territory about Attawaugan, for information that will lead to the arrest and conviction of the driver who purposely avoided responsibility. It was said tonight that no trace of the autoist responsible for the act has been found.

A second postponement of the intended sale of the good will, property, patents and stock of the National Rhea company was made Saturday afternoon when another effort to dispose of the corporations holdings failed to bring forth a prospective buyer who would enter a bid at the price of $147,500 decreed by the Rhode Island and Connecticut courts. The second attempt to sell the manufacturing properties brought together a number of prominent mill executives, the greater number of whom seemed to be more interested in the National Rhea company's new owners rather than taking any part in the buying of the organization's holdings. The subsequent result was the postponing of the sale until Monday, January 13. It is expected that the mill will continue to operate until the stock in process shall have been manufactured. After that date, appearances are that a suspension of operations will be inevitable unless a new organization takes over the holdings.

After a continuous run of more than sixty years the far famed boat train of the Norwich branch of the New York, New Haven and Hartford railroad made its last appearance in this city Saturday evening with its convoy of freight, mail and baggage which in the future will be forwarded by a system of overland truck delivery.

A large congregation attended the friendly evening service at the Congregational church Sunday evening. The title of the screen presentation was "White Shadows in the South Seas."

Richard Mahoney of Worcester, Mass., has been visiting with his brother James F. Mahoney of Grove street.

Misses Madeline and Ruth McCoy of Grove street were in Worcester Saturday.

Mrs. Daniel D. Durand of Bradley street is in Plattsburg, N. Y., where she attended the funeral of Sergt. Harry Moras, a relative, who was a retired officer of the 5th Infantry of the U. S. Army.

JEWETT CITY

CONGREGATIONAL CHURCH HOLDS ANNUAL MEETING

The annual meeting of the Congregational church was held in the vestry Saturday evening. A parish supper was served at 6:30, the tables being arranged in a hollow square. On a table in the center of the square were antique crystal drop candelabra and vases of snapdragon and chrysanthemums. The tables were very attractive with the gold candlesticks and one of the most beautiful decorations was a large beaten brass vase holding exquisite Tasmania roses and larkspur. The decorations were by Mrs. W. A Richardson. The supper of sliced ham, macaroni salad, cranberry sauce, rolls, cakes and coffee, was in charge of Mrs. W. A. Marshall, assisted by Mrs E. A. Faust, Mrs. L. G. Buckingham, Mrs. E. H. Hiscox, Mrs. F. D. Ballou and Mrs. C. D. Wolf. Misses Eleanor and Myrtle Stetson, Isabel and Christine Marshall, Bessie Thompson and Ruth Ballou poured. Rev. The trustees of the church are Andrew McNicol, E. A Faust and F. E. Robinson.

A pleasing feature of the musical program at the Baptist church, Sunday morning, was the fine baritone solo, The Man of Galilee, by John MacLean.

Chief W. A. Field and Chemical No. 1 responded to a telephone alarm for a fire in a manure pile under R. W. Dearnley's barn. It was necessary to lay a 300-foot hose line from a Main street hydrant. Boys who do not fully realize what serious damage might result from a fire in this locality are said to be responsible for the blaze.

At 1:30 p. m., a whistle alarm called the department to a burning automobile on Tracy avenue. Engine No. 1 and Chemical No. 1 responded to this, the third alarm of 1930. The car, owned by Roy Holmes of Pachaug, was being driven toward home when a rubber blanket which had been left under the hood, where it had been used to cover the engine when the machine was being washed, burst into a blaze. Mr. Holmes and his family all alighted without trouble. An alarm was turned in for station 35. Meanwhile J. H. Tracy did yeoman service with a chemical extinguisher taken from his nearby store. When the apparatus pulled in, the blaze was practically out. Mr. Holms said Sunday that the damage to the engine was a small matter.

Joseph Marinello, of 305 Orange street, Newark, N. J., is serving a sentence of one to four years in the state prison at Wethersfield; Angelo Sica, of Newark, is serving 18 months at Cheshire reformatory, and Louis Russo, of Newark, is being held at the county jail in New London, awaiting trial at the next term of the superior court, for the part they took in the theft of the two automobiles and dress goods.

The Hudson car and part of the dresses were found in Marinello's possession when he was captured by Policeman Amos Anderson on the outskirts of Darien, a few hours after the theft. Up to the present time no trace has been reported of the whereabouts of Mr. Chapman's new Dodge car.

ENFORCEMENT OUTLOOK

When Congressman Freeman spoke to the Rotary in New London last week he did not display an optimistic attitude in regard to the enforcement of the dry law. He was conscious of the fact that there has been a strong voting majority in congress in favor of the dry law but he is quite as well aware as others that there is a strong sentiment throughout the country against the law.

He gave an interesting picture of the situation when he brought to attention the article in Harper's Magazine which makes the distinction between a statute, and law, the former being "anything that certain elected persons have written down on a piece of paper and another elected person has signed," while a law is "anything that the people will back up."

Although it is claimed that everything is being done in behalf of enforcement, and there is much to support it, it is apparent that the dry law is not getting the backing that law should get from the people. Evidence that it is being violated extensively is not difficult to obtain. It is being revealed every day, and the revelations do not by any means constitute the most of the instances where open and flagrant violations are taking place.

Whether it is possible to obtain a better enforcement is a question. Whether the people as a whole actually want enforcement may be a matter of opinion but there are plenty of instances which go to show that states are opposed to it, officials are against it and the people object to it. Getting enforcement under such conditions is bound to be surrounded with great difficulty. It means that those who are violating the dry act are not the only ones who are opposed to it. The violators are getting public encouragement. It means also that, as they look upon it, it is a statute rather than a law, and it is the distinction between them which shows the difficulty in getting the necessary support for enforcement. Until that attitude changes it can be expected that there will be plenty of difficulty for the enforcement authorities, and there have been demonstrations and displays of public sentiment in various sections which go to support the pessimistic view concerning the dry outlook and enforcement.

THE AIRPLANE TRAGEDY

No one will deny the fact that the loss of ten lives in the crash of two planes off the Pacific coast was deplorable, but there will not be any such unanimity of opinion concerning the necessity of it.

This was a case where two planes carrying directors and photographers had gone out over the ocean for the purpose of filming a parachute drop. That in itself could furnish nothing very new to motion picture audiences but it was probably part of a picture that was considered necessary. In endeavoring to picture this stunt there was clever maneuvering required by the pilots of the two planes. Each was expected to get in a position for the filming of the same performance and it was while trying to do this that they came together head-on, crashed, dropped into the sea in flames and all perished.

There was a tragedy which can be looked upon as entirely unnecessary. From all indications there were elaborate preparations for the picture, preparations for everything except safety. Just why there should have been two planes sent out for identical purposes is difficult to understand. There would, of course, have been a double film so that if one had been imperfect a second drop would not have had to be made, but as the affair turned out a second or third filming would have been preferable to the sending of two planes on the identical flight which proved that they could not keep out of each other's way.

As for the fixing of the blame for the affair, there will be extreme difficulty. No one survived. No one definitely knows what caused them to come together except that two planes in flight cannot occupy the same space at the same time. Perhaps they were stunting, even as the parachute jumper, but there cannot fail to be a lasting lesson for other movie directors in the needless and horrible death of ten cameramen and others.

In the making of motion pictures, it is possible that far more dangerous stunts are successfully accomplished as a regular thing, but if that is the case it simply goes to show that the preparations for the California picture were far from adequate.

AT THE HAGUE AGAIN

At the first conference at The Hague action was taken by the several nations which included the bringing forth of the Young plan for dealing with reparations. Provisions were also made for a commission to decide where the international bank should be located and how it should be operated and there were certain matters for the respective nations to iron out amongst themselves.

Some of the details have been cleared up, to the extent that the second conference is now underway, and the expectations are that the remaining details can be agreed upon and the plans can be carried out.

This is a conference in which the United States is not officially interested, and yet indirectly it has considerable interest. In private negotiations with Germany it has agreed upon the payment of the cost of maintaining our part of the army of occupation and the mixed claims. It has indicated its willingness to accept the same proportionate reduction in the amounts as the other nations have, but it is, of course, dependent upon the putting through of the Young plan. Our negotiations have been based upon that plan and our expectations are that it will be adopted. The United States is not willing that the payments agreed upon should be paid through the international bank and it is probable that any arrangement that will be satisfactory to the countries concerned will prevail.

Along with other things that the conference must clean up are the details involving the further withdrawal of troops. Some hesitancy has been displayed on the part of France to withdraw the remaining troops unless Germany agrees to give sincere cooperation in carrying out the Young plan. Germany takes the view that it has such intentions but it doesn't believe it should be penalized provided economic conditions should for any reason interfere.

It must be apparent to all of the countries that ratification and the agreement upon all details is of great importance. It affords an opportunity to strengthen the peace of the world.

LYNCHING AND AUTO FATALITIES

According to the records which have been kept by the Tuskegee institute, there were ten lynchings during the past year. This is an appreciable reduction from a few years ago and is unquestionably the response to the efforts that have been made against such taking of human life.

Down through the years there has been a justified endeavor to put an end to it. The aim is to have it eliminated altogether, and it is to be hoped that the year is not far distant when that result will be attained.

In the meantime, however, isn't there reason to devote an increased amount of attention toward saving human life in other directions? Lynchings and motor vehicle fatalities do not come under the same classification. It nevertheless means in each instance the taking of human life in an unjustified manner and where there were ten persons lynched in this country last year there were probably 37,000 or more killed in automobile accidents. With that huge loss of life, a loss of life that is increasing from year to year, there is an opportunity for real effort to be put forth in every part of the country. Some of these deaths have been as lawless and horrible as have the lynchings. The hit-and-run driver who strikes and kills a person has little better standing than the fellow who shoots or hangs another while behind a mask.

There isn't much chance for one part of the country to point its finger to another and insist that its motor vehicle deaths are a disgrace to the nation. All parts of the country stand in much the same light in this respect, or at least in proportion to the number of motor vehicles they have.

It is gratifying to see the lynching figures lowered. It would be a happy discovery to find the motor vehicle deaths going down instead of up.

THE CHARITY GESTURE

When the board of estimate in New York proceeded to raise salaries and got the approval of Mayor Walker, there was a howl of protest over the action. It was a case of raising their own salaries. It was so interpreted by the people and no matter what is done it will be impossible to eradicate that feeling. It was a case of dipping into the city's funds for their own benefit, not the benefit of their successors.

Feeling the force of the protest that has been made, by friends as well as foes, the mayor has made the announcement that while he will take the additional $15,000 each year he will turn the whole $60,000 over to charity. In other words, he is seeking to justify his action by trying to give it the appearance of a charitable proposition.

It is a gesture which does not alter the boost in the salary. The city will have to pay him the $60,000 additional, which might have been regarded as no more than the mayor of the largest city should receive had it been done in the proper way, but the taxpayers will also have to pay it. They will have nothing to say as to where the money will be spent and have no opportunity to get the credit for doing that charity themselves.

Furthermore, it is perfectly evident that while the mayor has announced his intentions of using the increased salary for other than his own purposes, it is noted that none of the others has followed his plan. They are going to hold everything and let the big city foot the bill. The mayor tries to duck responsibility by pointing out that someone else suggested the idea of boosting the salaries. That, of course, doesn't remove the fact that he fell in with it, planned to take it for his own use till the protest arose and was in a position to have prevented it at the right time had it been his disposition. His charity act doesn't clean the slate.

IMPAIRED VISION

The young man with the handsome profile maintained his three-quarter-view attitude as he sat beside the girl on the bench facing the splashing lake. They had paused in their walk along the shore to rest.

"You know," he told her pointedly, "I think that a man is lacking in judgment who asks a girl to marry him without any definite encouragement on her part. It's just a shot in the dark."

"Didn't you ever take a chance?" the young woman wanted to know. She owned a pert nose, a mouth that curved humorously and an indescribable attractiveness.

"If she really cared about him," he proceeded, ignoring her question, "she would be above worrying him with coquetry. She would be anxious to assure him that her answer would be yes, when——"

"Deary, deary!" the young woman protested, laying a smoothing hand upon his sleeve. "You can't imagine how you amaze me. I had always thought men were wonderfully great, strong creatures, anxious and waiting to be sort of buffeted about by life's trials just so they could show us girls how they did it. I thought they throve on hard knocks and ate trouble alive. Really, I don't think I ever could fancy a man who had to be sheltered." The handsome young man frowned.

"I don't like you in this mood," he informed her. "I like a girl to be sweet and womanly and sympathetic. I never know what to say to you when you take on this wire edge. You become a very different girl."

"Do I?" the young woman inquired with great interest. "I often wonder about that very point myself. If I am so different at times, how can any one be sure which is the real one? It would be exactly like thinking you were bringing home a blue sofa pillow and when you got it unwrapped finding it was a green one instead—and you particularly hated green. What was it you were saying?"

The young man leaned over, flicked a stone into the lake and coughed.

"I don't exactly know," he admitted. "Only, I don't see why a man should subject himself to the humiliation of a refusal when it would be perfectly simple for a girl to let him see that his case was hopeless. Instead of being friendly and interested—most of the time. Letting him think she really was concerned about his troubles."

"Some girls have naturally kind hearts," the young woman assured him with light gravity. "They love their fellow men and they just can't help going around in an aura of good-will - to -men, let-the-bullets-strike-where-they-may, you know. But I don't see why you should think a girl naturally yearns to cook breakfast bacon for you because she advises you what color tie to buy. The only way you can be quite sure is when she insists on disagreeing with you and trying to make you see things her way. That shows an extreme interest in you which warrants suspicion."

"I don't recall that you ever tried to change any opinion of mine," the young man said quite gloomily. "Not once."

"You just have to keep some opinions as they are—to be astonished over," she smiled at him, impishly. "What's the matter, Jeffery? You seem upset and abstracted, somehow."

"I wish I understood women!" the handsome young man burst out in extreme dejection. "They're the limit! You think they're here—and they aren't. They're over there. And they don't stay—in a second they've flopped clear over into the next county. You can't bank on 'em or rely on 'em at all. You never can tell in the least where you stand. You haven't the slightest assurance that when you ask 'em anything they are going to say what you expect 'em to say. I guess usually they don't. They don't care what they do to you at all. They haven't any hearts. They keep you upset all the time and they won't tell you, not one thing!"

The young woman heaved a sigh and then straightened up.

"Is there something you want to know, Jeffery? she inquired in her kindest tones. The young man turned on her.

"Yes!" he almost shouted, "W—W—Will you marry me?"

"No, Jeffery," she replied promptly. You've been too—sort of absorbed to realize all this while that I was making it perfectly plain to you that I wouldn't. I've been glued to one spot all this time—only you wouldn't notice it!"—Chicago News

By KIRKE L. SIMPSON
Associated Press Staff Writer

WASHINGTON, Jan. 5—It is something over 20 years now since the Peary Arctic Club North Polar expedition headed for the "farthest north."

Yet among the thousands of bills waiting in the house Hopper for action by the seventy-first congress is one by Rep. Clyde Kelly of Pennsylvania, proposing to pay belated tribute to the men who made that hazardous trip with Peary.

It proposes that a special medal be struck by the mint to be presented by President Hoover to the survivors of the 1908-'09 expedition or to the next-of-kin of those who have passed on.

Only seven men, including Peary, are named for this honor, although Kelly also would provide for a medal for the "American and Newfoundland sailors or firemen" who served aboard the Roosevelt, Peary's ship, at that time.

One of the men named for the special medal is John Walter Goodsell of Sandy Lake, Pa., surgeon of the party. It seems to be largely through his effort that recognition for men of the Peary party, overlooked in the honors heaped upon their commander then and later, now appears to be at hand.

No Aviator Then

Dick Byrd has been granted the retired rank of rear admiral in the navy in honor of his south polar activities. Nobody begrudges him and his men suitable recognition of their daring and enterprise.

Still, it would be a graceful gesture now to make amends for any oversight heretofore in granting tardy recognition to the men who went northward with Peary in the days when there was no aviation, no radio, and when polar exploration was a grimmer business than it is today.

The Bystander has seen a letter from Dr. Goodsell emphasizing the national defense aviation aspect of polar discoveries.

There has been talk of the possible strategic value of polar air routes and bases. Yet Peary had no notion of that sort. Aviation was just a-borning then. It lived largely in the imaginations of men here and there who probably were looked upon as cranks by their neighbors. And that was only 20 years ago!

Polar Verse

Dr. Goodsell has been moved to record his feelings in verse. It limps a little in rhyme and meter, and space lacks to reproduce his effort here; but the spirit to pay honor to those old comrades of the north was not lacking:

'Twas Ross Marvin who died;
Peary with comrades dared
So "Old Glory" might float
O'er long sought polar goal.

'Twas Bartlett at the helm,
Wardwell at the engine,
Served with Goodsell, surgeon,
McMillan, Borup, Henson.

To the United States brought
Polar aviation rights.

There you have the roll call of that party in 1908-'09. If polar aviation ever does prove important in peace or war, they will deserve much of their country.

YOUR HEALTH

Why Let It Kill You?

By John P. DeWitt, M. D., Canton, O.
(From Gorgas Memorial Institute)

The subject of cancer should be as interesting to the public as it is to the medical profession for the enormous toll of death is entirely too high in the period of life when our declining years should be peaceful and after enduring the labors, hardships and disappointments of youth and adult life.

Cancer is curable if dianosed and treated early. Late cancer can only be palliated and life prolonged. So one of the finest bits of progress made during the past decade is the education of the public to seek early diagnosis and treatment.

I well remember when the diagnosis of consumption in a patient meant sealing his casket. When we diagnosed appendicitis we were confronted with peritonitis and all the hazards of a terrible death from inflammation and obstruction of the bowels. But now education of the public as well as the physicians to seek early diagnosis and treatment in these and many other diseases has almost eradicated mortality.

While the cause of cancer is unknown, the pathology is evidently always a very small ulcer or tumor, very seldom painful. This last fact usually accounts for the delay in diagnosis. It is often slow in growth and occasionally hidden from the view. Yet a thorough physical examination by the family physician, and a specialist if necessary, will practically always reveal this thief in the dark which is stealing your life.

It is no disgrace to be a victim of cancer. It is a calamity. Skin cancers are practically always cured at present because they are discovered early. There is never any excuse for a woman with a lump in her breast or for one suffering from unnatural bleeding to keep these things a secret. Cancer clinics are being established by philanthropists, and more are needed for those unable to pay for a diagnosis and treatment. Thousands of cancer cures have been investigated by our government and the cancer commission. Only surgery, radium, and x-rays have proven to be of any benefit.

It is a sad picture when a cancer patient consults you to find that he has been the victim of several so called cancer cures and he is now in the advanced stage of the disease. His chances for a cure have been wasted either because he was ignorant of the dangers of cancer or he was deceived by the false prophet.

Radium is considered the method of choice in treating most cases of cancer of the uterus. Many thousands of women in America owe their health and lives to radium. In cases where radium is applicable this treatment can be given early without pain or danger. Madam Curie of France discovered radium and when she recently visited America our people expressed to her a little of our appreciation. In my opinion the tribute she would prefer far more than even the wide use of radium, would be for every woman to be regularly examined by a competent physician and thus do her part in preventing cancer.

BURGESS BEDTIME STORY

The Telltale Tail.

By THORNTON W. BURGESS

The truly wise are always slow
To ever let suspicion grow.
—Farmer Brown's Boy.

Farmer Brown's Boy was puzzled. Yes sir, he was very much puzzled. He was sure that there were mice, or at least a mouse, in the corncrib. It didn't enter his head that any one else could be eating the corn. So he had set traps for mice and not a mouse had he caught. Neither had he seen a mouse. However, each day he found grains of corn scattered around and often a bare cob from which the corn had all been taken. That was evidence enough for Farmer Brown's Boy.

One morning Farmer Brown's Boy got up extra early. He was going to town that day and he wanted to get his morning work done earlier than usual. So he went to the corncrib to get the corn to feed the hens and he was just about an hour earlier than usual. As he threw the door of the corncrib open he heard a rustling sound and he looked up quickly just in time to catch a glimpse of a tail disappearing under the great pile of corn.

"Well, I never!" exclaimed Farmer Brown's Boy. "So it isn't mice who have been taking the corn; it is Chatterer the Red Squirrel. It never entered my head to suspect Chatterer. But there is no mistaking that tail. There is no tail like it. I wonder how you got in here, you scamp!"

Meanwhile Chatterer was keeping very still indeed. You see, Chatterer couldn't understand what Farmer Brown's Boy was saying and he really didn't know whether or not Farmer Brown's Boy had discovered him. "There is only one thing for me to do," thought he, "and that is to keep perfectly still. He may not have seen me. I don't see what he is doing over here so early in the morning anyway. It isn't time for him. He had no business to come so early. If he did see me, he can't find me under all this corn. So, whether he saw me or not, the best thing for me to do is to keep perfectly still."

So Chatterer did keep perfectly still and though Farmer Brown's Boy tried to frighten him by pulling over a lot of corn and making a noise, it was of no use. Farmer Brown's Boy got the corn he needed and went out and fed the hens. He hadn't time then to try to find how Chatterer had entered the corncrib. But when he returned late that afternoon the first thing he did was to look that corncrib over. To start with, he looked for holes, as he had looked once before. Of course, he didn't find any. In fact, it was just as much of a mystery as to how Chatterer had entered that corncrib as it had been when he thought it was mice in there.

Of course, Farmer Brown's Boy saw nothing more of Chatterer and he began to wonder if it could be possible that he had been mistaken. "A fellow's eyes will fool him once in a while," said he to himself. "Yes, sir, a fellow's eyes will fool him once in a while. Still, I don't believe that my eyes could possibly have mistaken any other tail for a squirrel's tail. That scamp certainly was in here this morning. That tail of his gave him away. Now the question is, how did he get in? I guess Ill have to set a trap for him."

So Farmer Brown's Boy brought in a little boxtrap—a trap that would not hurt whomever it might catch. He baited it with nuts. You see, he thought that probably Chatterer would be tempted by nuts after having had so much corn. "I guess this will get him," said he.

CHRISTMAS TREE FOR MOOSEHEART JUNIORS

The Christmas tree for Mooseheart Junior legion, No. 32, was held in Moose home Sunday afternoon and as a very special treat Victor Cloutier of Plainfield, with his orchestra, which includes himself and his three sons, aged 14, 12 and nine years, entertained the junior legion with many beautiful selections. These were heartily applauded by the members and their guests.

Mr. Cloutier who is a member of Loyal Order of Moose, No. 950, very kindly donated his services and those of his orchestra to entertain the children. He is a very accomplished musician, both with the violin and trombone. The drummer is the youngest in the orchestra, the piano player is the oldest boy and the other plays the cornet.

The program by the children was as follows: Recitation—Gladys Wilson; song—Painting the Clouds With Sunshine, by all the girls and boys; recitation, Advice to Santa by Irene Beckman; recitation, When Winter Comes by Dorothy Beckman; song by the children, The First Noel; recitation, Santa is coming to town, Edmund Beckman; song by all the children, Come All Ye Faithful; recitation, Rita Hoelck.

The gifts and boxes containing candy and fruit were distributed by Wilfred Lariviere, Raymond and Ellsworth Watters and Francis Ryan, members of the junior legion.

Mildred Carter, secretary of the juniors was the pianist for the afternoon. After the entertainment a bountiful supper was furnished by the Loyal Order of Moose consisting of roast stuffed pig, mashed turnips, mashed potatoes, gravy, cranberry sauce and coffee. A vote of thanks was given Brother Frank Hunter for cooking the wonderful supper. The waitresses were Margaret Mehrholz, Mrs. Rose Carter, Mrs. Minnie Smith, Mrs. Martha Wunderlich and Mrs. Helen Ericson and Brothers John and William Mehrholz. After the 62 children were at the tables, Chaplain Irene Burns of Women of Mooseheart Legion asked the blessing, and the children did ample justice to the supper. A vote of thanks was given Legionnaire Nellie Dorr who furnish the candy for the tree.

On Thursday eve of this week there will be installation of officers of Mooseheart Legion to which the public is invited.

NORWICH POLICE WERE ON WATCH FOR ESCAPED PRISONERS FROM WETHERSFIELD

Norwich police were on the qui vive Saturday night over the possibility that Roland G. Lalone, 23, of Worcester, the "ice-box bandit," and his two companions who escaped from Wethersfield state prison about 5 o'clock Saturday morning might pass through here in trying to put distance between themselves and re-capture.

It was believed the three men would probably be traveling by automobile and there were two alarms during the night to be on the watch for special cars. The first came at about 6:40 from State Policeman Roy Wheeler at Willimantic who asked the police to be on the watch for an Oakland sedan, with registration Y-4130, which had been stolen at Rocky Hill, while its owner, John E. Legge of New Haven, was visiting relatives at Rocky Hill. It was reported that there were three hatless men riding in the car and there was a possibility they might be the escaped prisoners. Capt. Thomas Murphy spread the alarm to the night force and all highways leading into the city were watched, but without results. This car was found abandoned in Springfield shortly after midnight. Two extra sets of Connecticut number plates were found in it, these being Nos. 19875 and 19874.

Some time after the warning from Willimantic, officials at the state police barracks at Danielson notified Capt. Murphy that a Cadillac sedan, followed by a Chevrolet car, had been seen coming out of the woods in Canterbury and both had headed towards this city. It was thought these might possibly be the fugitives from Wethersfield, and the Norwich police were asked to watch for them.

Capt. Murphy had this warning given to the men on duty and he also detailed Sergeants John T. Casey, Matthew H. Delaney, Officers Howard Coburn and John Dunion to watch in the Greeneville section, while he got Constable Paquette of Taftville to watch at the Newent road and Constable Potter of Lisbon to keep watch along other roads which the cars might use. Officers Whitmarsh and Kathe from the Groton state police barracks were also added to the force which was out to intercept the two cars if they came this way, but nothing was seen of the machines.

Lalone is one of the two men who were sentenced to life imprisonment for shooting and killing State Policeman Irving H. Nelson in Pomfret on April 13, 1928, when he tried to stop their automobile as they were fleeing from the Springfield police. Those who escaped from Wethersfield with Lalone were Leo Landry of Revere, Mass., serving a three to four year sentence for burglary and Watson Moulthrope of Danbury, serving 18 to 25 years for robbery with violence.

NEW YEAR SERMON SUNDAY BY REV. FATHER REILLY

The importance of spiritual inventory about this time was set forth vigorously from the pulpit of St. Patrick's church at the 9 o'clock mass Sunday by Rev. John J. Reilly. The preacher reminded the great congregation that the first mark of intelligence manifested by every child is the questions which he will ask—"What am I? Whence have I come? How long will it last?" Dumbed by sin and pleasure, it is only at rare moments, as on the advent of another New Year, that the majority of men pause, amid the roar and confusion of the world, to ask what this life is all about, to apply their God-given gift of intelligence, to gaze back over the past, to gaze toward a future, real, sure and certain.

Now is the time, the preacher declared, to concentrate our thought on a few stern realities—to meditate on the value of the soul, on our employment of time. The soul, the souls of men, was the constant thought of Christ. It was of the immortal souls of men of which He was thinking when upon the cross He said, "I thirst." Christ's great monument here on earth, His heir, His church, centers on this one consideration, the eternity of the soul. Music, art, architecture, all are employed with this one end in view.

Considering the means which Christ has left them through which to work out their salvation, Catholics should never be gloomy, but should be the happiest people in the world, declared the preacher. With their divine Exemplar and the guidance of His church they can be sure of their eternal safety. They have at hand the answer to the Why? of everything. In the stability of their faith and their convictions they have the consoling formula to repeat that present-day conditions are of slight matter, that for them the scope of existence is wider, that they live and labor, not for time, but for eternity.

Later Father Reilly assisted Rev. Myles P. Galvin in administering holy communion to the greater portion of the members of the congregation, who were beginning the New Year in penitence and a return to God's favor.

At the consecration, the organist, Henry J. LaFontaine, gave "O, Little Town of Bethlehem," using the chimes. The junior choir sang "Glory to God in the Highest" and Mr. LaFontaine sang the solo in Noel, the juniors swelling the chorus, con amore. As the last of the Christmas music, Mr. LaFontaine then played Adeste Fideles, affording the congregation an opportunity to hear grand organ in the climax—something worth-while on this magnificent instrument, which was originally the display organ at the Philadelphia centennial, then was sold to the Buffalo cathedral and, proving to large for the gallery there, was purchased for St. Patrick's.

NORWICH TOWN METHODIST CHURCH SPECIAL SERVICE

After being closed for several weeks for renovations, the Methodist Episcopal church at Norwich Town was opened Sunday morning with a communion service. The church has been newly decorated and many new features added. The ceiling and all the woodwork has been painted white. The walls are tinted a pleasing shade of tan. The pulpit and pulpit furniture are all refinished in dark walnut with the upholstery done in church red. A beautiful walnut communion table with the words, "In Remembrance of Me", carved in front, has been added to the furnishings. The windows are curtained full length with silk in a cream shade. At the entrance a new rug has been added. The choir loft and the organist bench have new silk curtains. There are new shades in the electric chandelier and new side lights, and the pews and the floor are newly varnished.

All the work has been done by Frank Bushnell of Occum in memory of his brother, Frederick Henry Bushnell, who for about 45 years was a faithful officer and member of the local church.

Rev. Frederick C. Baker, who was pastor of the church at the time Frederick Bushnell was married and officiated at the wedding, used on Sunday, for the first time, the communion table given in his memory. Rev. Mr. Baker was assisted in administering the sacrament by the pastor of the church. Rev. George Warren Potter Rev. Mr. Baker preached a most inspiring and helpful sermon from the text 1 Cor. 1:18, "For the preaching of the cross is to them that perish foolishness; but unto us who are saved it is the power of God." Mrs. Lewis Irish sang a solo, "Give The Best To The Master." The junior choir, under the direction of Mrs. Lewis E. Aldrich, sang a selection, "Thou Everlasting Saviour."

The tablet on the new communion table is inscribed with the following "To the Glory of God and in Affectionate Memory of Frederick Henry Bushnell who died Jan. 12, 1928."

The special re-opening service at 7:30 in the evening opened with the singing by the congregation of 'Onward Christian Soldiers." Prayer was offered by the church pastor who also led in the responsive reading.

The new furnishings and decorations were then formally presented to the church by Rev. Howard Bushnell, pastor of Goshen Congregational church, a son of Frank Bushnell, the donor. Rev. Mr. Bushnell said in part: "My father asked me to present the gifts in behalf of Uncle Fred who, I believe, reached to the heights of his religious life in this church. I have very pleasant memories as a boy of attending services in this church which always in my mind was Uncle Fred's church. Our hope is that the things we have done to redecorate and improve the church will be the means of helping all who worship here to find forgiveness of their sins and a closer fellowship with God and His son, Jesus Christ."

Stanton W. Brown, chairman of the trustees, responded and thanked the Bushnell family for the splendid gifts and improvements and also expressed the love and respect the people of the church had for Frederick Bushnell.

The junior choir, under the direction of Mrs. Aldrich, sang an anthem, "Saviour Breathe An Evening Blessing."

Rev. Myron E. Genter, the district superintendent, gave the message of the evening, taking for his text the story of Zacchaeus from Luke's gospel, and taking for his theme, "The Main Task of the Church of Christ." Rev. Mr. Genter preached an eloquent and most interesting sermon, showing that the task of the church is showing people the way to God.

At the close of the service, Rev. Mr. Genter read the prayer of re-dedication and the benediction was pronounced by Rev. Mr. Bushnell.

During the offertory a duet was sung by Virginia Ward and Florence Gembel. The offering aws received by Donald Olsen and Frederick Ross, Boy Scouts in uniform.

SCHAFFER, REFORM SCHOOL RUNAWAY, FOUND AT SISTER'S HOME, NEW LONDON

(Special to The Bulletin.)

NEW LONDON, Jan. 6.—Steward Schaffer, a youth with a criminal mind, who has been implicated in numerous robberies in New London, escaped from the State Reform School for Boys at Meriden two weeks ago, to be apprehended here today, in hiding at the home of a relative. He will be taken back to the reform school, to which he was committed three months ago following his robbing of three houses.

Schaffer's escape was not reported to the police until today and Detective Sergeant John Cavanaugh was assigned to the case. The youth has a sister residing on Belden street and the officer suspected that the boy would go to the relative for it was at her home that he was last arrested. Going to the Belden street house, the officer entered without giving a warning at the entrance and there found the youth, who had not left the house since he reached there, the day after his escape.

Schaffer was arrested last for robbing three residences at the Pequot. The youth was shrewd enough to steal only money and refrain from taking articles of value that might lead to his detection if he attempted to convert them into cash. He never had an accomplice for, he said, there was always a danger of a second party "squealing." The houses entered by the youth and which acts resulted in his commitment to the reform school, included the summer residence of Miss F. O. Jones, corner of Pequot and Glenwood avenues and the summer boarding house of Mrs. James Rippen, 416 Pequot avenue.

Nicholas Muscarella, Jr., 17, son of Nicholas Muscarella, 87 Bayonet street, who disappeared Friday morning, driving away from his home in his father's Ford delivery truck and whose arrest was requested by the parent on a charge of taking an automobile without the owner's permission, has returned home. The father has withdrawn the charge against the youth. The boy returned Saturday night.

Creates Fire Hazard.

Patrolman Anthony Turello reported at police headquarters this morning that an accummulation of lumber and paper in the alleyway at 114 Main street has created a fire hazard and that fact was passed along to fire headquarters. The quantity of inflammable material evidently has been placed in the alleyway by a store proprietor as an easy way to get rid of it.

James Fitzgerald, a sailor on the destroyer Monaghan, U. S. Coast Guard, state pier, went to police headquarters intoxicated last night and without purpose. He was locked up, but later was delivered into the custody of a shore patrol.

Lawrence Higgins, a soldier, stationed at Fort Wright, went to the union station Saturday night and was arrested. Today Higgins was discharged and advised to return to his post.

An effort is being made to determine whether the automobile is a stolen car. Gardner's mother resides in New London and his father is in the navy.

Beatrice Pombuna, 19 Tilley street, reported to the police Saturday night that she had lost her German police dog.

William Hillenles, U. S. coast guard, was arrested Saturday at the corner of Crystal avenue and Main street, by Sergeant John Courtney and Automobile Patrol Officer George Cockell, charged with reckless driving. He will be in court Monday.

Edward Mileski, 225 Stanley street, New Britain, was arrested Saturday by Patrolman Ernest Opperman charged with driving without a license in his possession and failing to stop at an automatic danger signal. He will explain in court Monday.

LOUIS BEEBE TO MARRY FORMER STATE FARM CHARGE

(Special to The Bulletin)

NEW LONDON, Jan. 5.—Louis Beebe and Carrie Neiman, both of 76 Golden street, where they resided out of wedlock for several months, were in the police court Saturday charged with lascivious carriage. Because of the facts connected with their arrest and the assurance to the court that they would be married, a nolle was ordered in both cases. The couple was arrested Friday afternoon by Detective Sergeant John Cavanaugh and State Police Officer Frederick Johnson. Officer Johnson recently discovered an automobile apparently abandoned on the state road, between Norwich and Willimantic, and found Beebe's registration in it. The officer came to New London and with Sergeant Cavanaugh went to the Golden street house, where Beebe was questioned as to the reason for leaving the auto in the highway longer than 24 hours. A further quizzing of Beebe revealed the information that he and the Neiman woman had been living out of wedlock for two years, ever since the woman was released from the State Farm for Women, East Lyme. Seven months of this time were in New London. Beebe, who has been ordered to vacate the house in which he and the woman resided and which was used for lodging and light housekeeping purposes, was in the superior court at Norwich last Friday, when he obtained a divorce.

FIND 8 STOLEN BOTTLES OF BOOZE ON DESTROYER

(Special to The Bulletin)

NEW LONDON, Jan. 5.—The investigation of the stealing of liquor from the rum-runner Flor del Mar, one of the two speed launches seized last Sunday, is fast being completed and within a few days an announcement will be made by the treasury department at Washington, and not from the local section base. Over a dozen sailors are prisoners in the brig at the section base, charged with stealing the liquor from the two seized boats.

Only today, while inspecting one of the destroyers, eight bottles of whiskey that had been hidden away were found, but, naturally no one could be found who would admit hiding the bottled goods. M

SCHAFFER SKIPS AGAIN ATTIRED IN NIGHT CLOTHES

(Special to The Bulletin)

NEW LONDON Jan. 5. — That Schaffer does not intend to remain at the reform school is evidenced by the fact that he escaped again this evening; he succeeded in getting out of the reformatory attired only in his night clothes, but he stole a quantity of apparel that will provide him with protection. The New London police were notified tonight of Schaffer's second escape within three weeks and a watch is being maintained here for him.

A Massachusetts car and a Waterford auto collided this afternoon, corner of Golden and Green streets. Both cars were damaged, but no report of the crash was made at police headquarters.

SAILOR GETS CUT HEAD SO 97 NO. BANK ST. RAIDED

(Special to The Bulletin)

NEW LONDON, Jan. 5—The drinking resort at 97 North Bank street, two doors away from police headquarters, was raided this afternoon as a result of a sailor, R. J. Wade, U. S. Coast Guard academy, being injured. It was claimed that he was ejected from the place and fell down stairs, sustaining acerations of the scalp. Patrolman Dennis Murphy found Wade and two other sailors on North Bank street and Wade was bleeding freely from a scalp wound. He was taken to police headquarters, together with his companions. They stated that they had been to the North Bank street place and that after drinking there they were ordered out. Wade lingered, so was thrown out, falling down a flight of stairs, getting an ugly cut on the head. Sergeant Samuel Hick and Automobile Patrol Officer Thomas Cavanaugh and Patrolmen Murphy and Elwood Bailey went to the house and raided it. Herbert Hazelton, an employe, was arrested charged with violation of the liquor law, being specifically charged with sale. He was liberated later upon furnishing a surety on his bond of $1000 and will be in court Monday. The resort has been raided many times, the last time about a month ago.

COAST GUARDSMEN BEATEN IN C. V. RAILROAD YARD

(Special to The Bulletin)

NEW LONDON, Jan. 5. — Friday night, two coast guardsmen were attacked and beaten while on their way to their reservation, the state pier. The sailors, one being George Corderett, a boatswain's mate, started for the pier about 11 o'clock. They followed their usual course of traversing Main street and across the bridge of the Central Vermont railroad. Shortly after crossing the bridge and while passing through the railroad yard, four youths leaped from behind strings of freight cars and attacked the sailors. The bluejackets being outnumbered two to one, were given a severe beating, particularly Corderette. When the sailors reached the section base and related their story, Lieut. Jewell, executive officer, communicated with police headquarters. Sergeant Patrick Murphy and Patrolmen William Corcoran and George Bruhns went to the railroad yard, but were not successful in apprehending the attackers of the sailors, although two of their number were observed when they leaped from freight cars on the approach of the officers and raced through the yard disappearing. The other two were not located. As a result of the attack upon the sailors, several officers were kept close at hand to the state armory Saturday night while a dance was in progress which was conducted by the Coast Guard.

He is a pupil of Ernest Felix Putke, of Philadelphia, a former organist of Christ church, Norwich. Master VanSiclen was assisted there by the augmented choir in one number, Mendelssohn's motet, Hear My Prayer. The program follows:

ANNOUNCEMENTS

Palace Theatre

Come on, ye Petruchios, if you want to learn how to handle your Katherines! Come on in and see how it is done on the screen at the Palace theater where Douglas Fairbanks in the role of one of Shakespeare's great heroes shows the world how to handle a wild woman, the wild woman in this case being his own wife, Mary Pickford, and the show being "The Taming of the Shrew," comedy extraordinary.

The young bloods of Norwich, be they ever so smart, can still learn a thing or two about the proper way to handle stubborn girls, and if ever there was a good lesson taught, Doug Fairbanks, as Petruchio, teaches it to his Katherine at the Palace.

It all began when Petruchio, walking in to the famous Italian city, called upon his father's old friend, Baptista. He learned that Baptista had two daughters. One of them was pretty nice. In fact both of them were pretty nice, but only one of them was fit to live with. The other was a wildcat, not at all like her sweet-tempered sister.

Shakespeare doesn't say how many men Katherine flung down stairs, horsewhipped, kicked out of doors and generally abused during her young life before she met Petruchio, but when we first come in contact with the girl, she is going strong. She has a punch like Firpo and a temper like nobody's business. You would hate to encounter her when she had a toothache, or was feeling otherwise out of sorts.

But not so Petruchio. Ah, noble fellow, he sized up the situation in a moment, and went after the girl in his own way. And believe us, it warmed the heart of an old married man to see the way he tamed the tigress. It took him a little while to do it, but finally he got the bridle on her and led her away tranquilly. It's a great picture, and shouldn't be missed.

Beginning Wednesday and for three days, the Palace will show another great double feature bill. One of these pictures will be "The Careless Age," starring Doug Fairbanks, Jr., and Loretta Young, and the other "The Sap," with Edward Everett Horton. Both are Vitaphone and both are great.

AGRICULTURAL INTERESTS

MILKING THREE TIMES A DAY GIVES INCREASED PRODUCTION

One way to make a cow give more milk is to milk her three times a day instead of twice. This fact has been demonstrated a number of times in recent years, but perhaps the most striking results have been obtained at the dairy experimental farm of the United States department of agriculture at Beltsville, Md. Here it was found that the extra milking gave 21.2 per cent more milk and 22.4 per cent more butterfat.

Much of this increase is attributed to the fact that the cows milked three times a day held up better in their milk flow. The decline in production from the first to the last 30 days of the lactation was only about 60 per cent as great with the cows milked three times a day as with those milked twice.

In the experiments six cows were milked for 2 lactations each and two for 3 lactations each, making in all 18 lactations. In 8 of these lactations the cows were milked twice a day and in the other 10 they were milked three times a day. Conditions were the same for all lactations except the number of times a day the cows were milked.

In order to determine whether milking three times a day is a profitable practice, one must know not only the probable increase in production but also the quantity and cost of the grain needed for the increased production, the cost of the extra milking, and the value of the increase in production. These items vary in different localities, and each dairyman will have to figure it out for himself, is the conclusion reached by the department.

SECURING NEW SPRUCE GROWTH

Competing hardwood growth is the most disturbing single factor operating to prevent the reestablishment of spruce and fir on cut-over spruce lands in New England, the forest service of the United States department of agriculture finds.

"Where beech and sugar maple form an appreciable portion of the stand, any type of cutting, unless it is followed by special cultural treatment, results in rapid encroachment of hardwoods on areas formerly occupied by spruce and fir. Clear cutting of spruce and fir halts additional restocking of these species for many years, whereas prolific seeding of large residual hardwoods results in establishment of much additional hardwood growth. In some instances promiscuous cutting of young growth may be chiefly responsible for the conversion of former mixed spruce and hardwood stands into pure hardwood stands."

To secure reestablishment of spruce, the forest service recommends care in logging, leaving a substantial stand of young spruce growth undamaged. Release cutting of dominant hadwoods should follow.

RATE OF GAIN OF PIG FACTOR IN FIRMNESS OF PORK

In the extensive soft-pork experiments conducted cooperatively by the U. S. Department of Agriculture and a number of the State agricultural experiment stations, it has been found that unless the ration is distinctly softening the rate of gain of the pig is an important factor contributing to firmness of the pork. Firmness of pork is of great importance to the consuming public and to the pork producing and meat industries. The federal-state cooperative work has been in progress for ten years. The work has involved a great number of experiments and thousands of animals.

Variations in firmness of pork are due mainly to feeds, some producing a pork that is soft, or even oily, and others a product that is satisfactorily firm. Other factors entering into are initial weight of the animal, rapidity of gain, degree of finish, etc.

Statement of Results

(1). Pigs with initial weights of 100 pounds or more and gaining at least 1 1-2 pounds daily on a mixture of ground corn (9 parts of 12 parts) and ground soybeans (1 part) self-fed, free choice, with mineral have produced firm carcasses in the majority of cases.

(2). With initial weights of 100 pounds or less and gaining a maximum of 1 pound daily on a mixture of ground corn (9 parts or 12 parts) and ground soybeans (1 part) self-fed, free choice, with mineral mixture in dry lot, through a period of 15 weeks or less, have produced soft carcasses in the majority of cases.

(3). Pigs with initial weights ranging from approximately 40 to approximately 70 pounds fed raw soybeans with corn and minerals in comparison with cooked soybeans with corn and minerals both rations in dry lot; comparable finished weights.

(4). Pigs with initial weights of approximately 50 pounds gaining a maximum of 50 pounds on rations of rice polish or rice bran with tankage and minerals during an eight-week feeding period followed by a gain of at least 70 pounds on brewers' rice with tankage and minerals during a period of eight weeks or more have produced firm carcasses in the usual cases.

(5). Pigs fed low-fat rations varying widely in protein content, with dried blood the principal source of protein, have produced carcasses which were strickingly uniform in composition and firmness of fat. All rations were composed of hominy, dried blood, alfalfa meal, and minerals. Owing to variations in the proportions of dried blood and hominy used, the nutritive ratios of the rations varied from approximately 1:2 to 1:10. (The nutritive ratio is the proportion of degestible protein in relaton to the sum of the digestible carbohydrates and the digestible fat.)

(6). Experiments have shown that when corn oil, peanut oil, and soybean oil are present in the ration, added, they have a softening effect on the body fat which increases with increase in the oil content of the ration. Cottonseed oil, on the other hand, has shown a distinct hardening effect when added to the extent of 4 per cent of the mixture to basal rations of corn or hominy with supplements. When the amount of cottonseed oil is increased to 8 and 12 per cent respectively, a progressive decrease in firmness results. The 8 percent addition of cottonseed oil produced hard or medium hard carcasses, and the 12 per cent addition medium-soft or soft carcasses, as compared to hard carcasses on the 4 per cent addition.

TICKER DECLINE FOLLOWS SLUMP IN SPECULATION

NEW YORK, Jan. 1—(P)—The number of stock exchange tickers in greater New York, long considered a speculation barometer, has declined for the first time in several years.

Figures furnished by the Western Union Telegraph company show that there were approximately 60 less tickers in this area at the beginning of December than one month before.

The approach, burst and waning of 1929's speculative storm can be followed in these figures. In March the number of tickers in New York, the Bronx, Brooklyn and Long Island was 2,848. In successive months of 1929 this total steadily increased until there were 2,788. In one month it dropped to an estimated 2,724. Approximately 300 bond tickers are included and of the totals only about 300 are in Brooklyn and Long Island. The rest are in Manhattan and the Bronx.

The New York Quotation company, an institution controlled by the New York stock exchange, supplies ticker service to members of the exchange south of Fulton. Western Union supplies the same service to non-members in this area and to both members and non-members north of Fulton street.

ANNOUNCEMENTS

Breed Theatre

Joe Wagstaff and Lois Moran made their appearance in a highly entertaining romantic comedy drama, "A Song of Kentucky," a Fox Movietone all talking and singing entertainment at the Breed theatre yesterday.

The story is one of absorbing interest, the music is delightful and the dialog fairly sparkles.

Joe Wagstaff, who reached fame on the musical comedy stage in New York, is co-featured with Lois Moran, that beautiful and talented screen actress. Individually and collectively they give splendid portrayals.

One of the big moments of the picture is the actual running of the Kentucky Derby of 1929 which is one of the interesting backgrounds of the romance. Another is the symphony concert that climaxes the play.

A cast of more than ordinary merit, which includes such favorites as Dorothy Burgess, Douglas Gilmore, Hedda Hopper, Edwards Davis, Herman Bing and Bert Woodruff is seen.

Clark and McCullough, the funniest team on the talking screen, are an added feature on this bill in the "Music Friends," their latest all-talking comedy.

Boy Soprano Tonight

Master Clawson Beswick Van Siclen, the boy-soprano from Philadelphia trained by Ernest Felix Potter, will give a recital before the Norwich Music association in Slater Hall Annex tonight at 8:15.

Included among the numbers Master Van Siclen will sing are Jenny Lind's Echo Song, Rossini's Bel Raggio from Semiramide, Mozart's Queen of Night from Magic Flute, Arditi's Waltz Song —Il Bacio, Bishop's Lark Song. Mr. Potter will be heard at the piano in solo numbers as well as in accompaniment. This recital is a real opportunity for Norwich's musical public, whether members of the association or not.

Broadway Theatre

One of the most thrilling and forceful dramas ever shown on the silent or talking screens fairly stunned capacity audiences at the Broadway Saturday and yesterday, when Cecil B. DeMille's latest production "Dynamite" was shown. Depicting a theme as explosive as its title, and equally as dangerous to handle, DeMille has turned out a literal masterpiece of filmcraft. High society rubs elbows with squalid poverty, with the odds in favor of poverty as far as character goes, comedy mingles with stark tragedy, but drama, intense and magnificent in its scope, rides roughshod over all.

The exciting aero-hoop race with twenty lovely girls strapped into their queer speeders, a redhot polo match, swimming races, and other society pleasures furnish high-lights, and the tremendous scenes incidental to the collapse of the "lower-five level" in an actual coal mine, a mile below the ground, held the audiences literally breathless, till the most amazing climax ever conceived ended two solid hours of a most-stirring life-drama Conrad Nagel, Kay Johnson, a new star who is both charming and clever, Charles Bickford, a brand new "he-man" type who is already riding the top-crest of success, and Julia Faye, have the stellar roles with a long cast of favorites. Owing to the length of "Dynamite" the Paramount Sound News completes the program, which is nearly two and a half hours in length, but that period packed with thrills and excitement. The award of Hanover-Curland's gift radio on the Broadway stage is but four days away, with coupons being distributed at every performance.

BIG FAREWELL PARTY IS GIVEN EDDIE SCOTT

Eddie Scott has been one of the most popular young men of the village. News reached his friends last week that he was to move to East Greenwich R. I. So Thursday night at the home of Bruno Bracci a farewell party was given for him. The parlor was decorated with black and orange paper and a sign read "Farewell, Eddie, Farewell." The room was crowded and the Corn Cob club orchestra played for dancing. Village Eddie was dressed to kill, with a soft silk shirt and a claw hammer coat wearing a black iron hat trimmed with Old Glory. When he came into the parlor while the lights were out, then were turned on quickly, he was surprised to see such a large crowd to greet him. The committee in charge had arranged for games. In pinning the tail on the donkey, Strong Boy Mike Passi, blindfolded, put the tail right where it was to go. "Well," Miss Nellie Crane said, "I never saw a donkey with so many tails before! That must be a Jewett City donkey!" Another game was where all the girls lined up on one side of the room with the fellows on the other side with the lights out. The judge would say "Kiss your nearest girl!" and then the lights would go on again, catching some fellow kissing others. The Corn Cob club orchestra, Edward Morgan leader, had the deck cleared for action so the jazz babies danced around the room and the orchestra sang several times, Singing in the Rain. George Deveau and Miss Hattie Turnover did the Ledyard cakewalk.

The table was set with Long Island stuffed ducks, O. E. P. cake and Chesebro court dressing with Eddit Scott, the guest of honor at the head of the table, where 75 were seated. As the stuffed ducks were getting the onceover, Miss Hasel Trahan waited on the guests; helping her was Miss Frances Livingstone from the east side of the town. Up jumped Arthur DeBiaisi and said, "I am sorry to see our friend Eddie Scott leave the fishing village, after being with us so long. It sure makes tears come to my eyes! Never will I forget the day we were playing baseball together at St. Luke's college, in the far west. Scott was first baseman and sure could reach like at a boarding house, where every man is for himself. The last of the ninth innig, we were on the short end of the score with Bates college. Our hero came with one man on the base, caught the first ball on the nose and sent it so far that it was never found: a drive of 500 feet, and won the old ball game. We painted the town red! I'm sure glad to see you all here though to give Eddie a real time, so we can sit in Mrs. Jane Carson's store and tell them all about it later. In behalf of the young folks here to see Eddie go away I will present this small box and I hope it brings you luck during a happy life. I hope you will not forget us in this fishing village by the shore!" The popular young man was some taken back, he cried hard and could not say a word for several minutes. "Fellows and girls I thank you all, but it sure breaks my heart to leave dear old Noank, where you can have fun. There's no better crowd of fellows and girls in this world than right here! Let me tell about the time I caught the biggest eel ever came out of the salt water. It was right out on the flats with seven boats all round me I jabbed in the mud, but when I hit Mr. Eeel I thought the bottom was on the spear, or King Tut's lost gold. The spear broke in two and the eel gave us some battle trying to shake off the spear, but no use. It took me 30 minutes to land the monster of the eel family in the boat. I took it down to Harry Robertson's market on Boll avenue and he weighed the eel—8 3-4 lbs! Never in the fishing book was any story of such a monster eel caught, but I did it, not with my little bow or arrow, but with an eel spear! After the monster was skinned, the skin made reins for Flash McDonald's horse, "Go Easy," that lasted for a long while."

Opening the box, Eel Catcher Scott found it held a Howard silver and gold watch, worth $80 and E. L. on the back in old fashioned English letters. Then the orchestra played, "He is a jolly good fellow." He said "I thank you all again for the kind gift to remember the Noankers by, while I am in East Greenwich. He sure received a big hand that shook the hair off a doll on the shelf. Then back to the parlor went everyone, to finish out the evening. It was 2 o'clock when every one sang "We Won't Get Home Until Morning, the Night of Eddie Scott's Party!"

POETRY

Watch Over Us, O Lord!

O God of earth, of death and birth,
Who marks a sparrow's fall,
Watch o'er us here upon this sphere,
Thy children, one and all.

O God afar, on planet, star,
Who reigns in deathless space,
Guard, guide us right through day and night,
Protect our human race.

Lord God above, O Lord of love,
That dwells without, within,
Let us not stay in evil way,
Preserve our souls from sin.

O God of time, supreme, sublime,
Of might and majesty,
Watch o'er us here upon this sphere
Wherever we may be.

—By Charles Nevers Holmes.

What, Again!

Such sudden ecstacy came unexplained and unawares!
A misty view of rosy lips, of laughing eyes, sweet, girlish airs!
A charming grace,
A lovely face,
And dark-brown hair,
A color warm,
A rounded form
Beyond compare;
A dimpled chin,
A satin skin,
A shapely arm;
Cool, slender hands—
Who understands
Their subtle charm?
Sweet winning ways,
A mouth to praise,
Lips made to kiss;
A modest mien,
Now seldom seen—
Too rare to miss!
A slender waist,
Not much misplaced,
As some waists are.
Two dainty feet,
Stylish and neat—
Spectacular!
A smiling glance,
Full of romance,
To make one guess.
A whispered "No."
Soft, sweet and low—
Its meaning "Yes!"—
And then
He realised he's met the usual fate of men.
"Confound the luck!" he cried. "I've fallen in love again!"

Conrad Hubert was born in Minsk, Russia, in 1860, of Jewish parentage. At the age of 13 he was thrown upon his own resources. He began work as a distillery hand in Germany, returning in 1879 to join his father in the wine business. The money which the family made was lost through reverses and Hubert, when he was 31, came to the United States.

Until he was 40, his business life was varied. He engaged successively in the retail cigar business, the operation of a restaurant, as boarding house keeper, as a farmer and retail milk dealer and then in the watch business. During all this time, he worked on various inventions and, in 1898, he perfected and patented the pocket flashlight.

The first flashlight company, the American Everready company, was formed by Mr. Hubert and L. H. Keller. Mr. Hubert was president until it was sold to the National Carbon company about 12 years ago. He and Mr. Keller then formed the Yale Electric corporation, which in 1928, changed its name to the Bond Electric company, of Jersey City. At the time of his death Mr. Hubert was chairman of the board of the latter company.

Besides originating the flashlight, he developed and promoted the manufacture of the miniature incandescent lamp, a vacuum cleaner, a pocket cigar lighter, and electric vibrator and other devices.

BUSINESS AND TRADE LAST WEEK SHOWED FAITH IN RESUMPTION OF ACTIVITY

NEW YORK, Jan. 5.—(AP)—Business and trade entered upon the new year last week with a few indications of the revival of activity normally expected after the year end inventory period, and faith in an eventual if gradual return to a satisfactory rate of operations undiminished.

The New Year's day analysis and forecasts were highly conservative in tone, and practically none predicted any overnight recovery. Nevertheless, periods of depression are on the average much briefer than periods of acceleration, and it was widely agreed that indications point to an unusually brief period of recession at this time, most estimates running from three to six months.

Business attention generally is now focused upon the automobile industry with the introduction of new models at the annual shows. This industry furnishes employment to nearly 10 per cent of the nation's workers, and has become a major factor in the determinating of industrial destiny.

Steel mills ended the week with operations ranging from 50 to 55 per cent of capacity, compared to 40 to 50 a week ago, and 85 per cent a year ago. Inquiry came principally from the railroad equipment manufacturers

It was still too early to look for conclusive signs of a revival in building and construction, but President Hoover stated that the drive to expand this sort of work was making progress and promised to produce a larger volume of business than was done in the building slump year of 1929.

The feeling that a revival of building may stabilize conditions and take up any slack in employment grew more confident. Credit rates began to ease a little toward the close of the week, and marked relaxation as the month wears on is expected.

Cheap money in itself is not particularly favorable. During recessions of the past, money has sometimes been a drag on the market. But the cheap money will be decidedly favorable if it can be put to work.

Weekly freight car loadings and other statistical reports continued to reflect the slump in business during December. Reports of the holiday trade, however, tended to bear out earlier estimates placing it close to the 1928 volume. Bank clearings during December contracted markedly but this may have reflected in part the lessened speculative activities.

Notable firmness appeared in several of the leading commodity markets, particularly wheat and hides.

LEDYARD

The passing of George P. Main removes another one of the older residents of the town. Mr. Main was a hard working man and raised a large family. He was industrious and took great pride in keeping the places where he lived neat and attractive. While he was in his health, no brush grew around his farm. He leaves his widow who was the daughter of the late Avery Brown, and several children. Burial was in the Brown cemetery at Ledyard, Rev. G. H. Goodenough of Jewett City officiated.

Because empty milk cans on their trucks made too much noise, two drivers were arrested at Bristol, England, recently.

Missing in China

Mrs. Margaret Burket, above, of Seattle Wash., with her husband and three young children, have been reported missing somewhere in China. They had been stationed at a mission in North China, which was recently raided by bandits.

WOMAN IN LIFE AND IN THE KITCHEN

SUGGESTIONS FOR THE HOUSEWIFE

Use soap flakes or soap jelly if you want quick suds.

To remove seeds from grapefruit use small candy tongs.

Burn all potato parings in the stove and you will prevent the accumulation of soot in the pipe.

If bread is too fresh to cut for sandwiches put it in the refrigerator for about an hour. It can then be easily cut.

A teaspoon of celery salt added to cracker crumbs in which oysters are rolled before frying improves their flavor.

If you will rub the cut part of cheese with butter and then wrap in lightly oiled paper and cover with a cloth, cheese will not mould.

Never attempt to sweep at once soot that has fallen onto a rug. Cover the soot with dry salt, let stand for a short time, then sweep up.

Chilled fruit cup is twice as appealing if served in colored crystal dishes. Salads also take on character when colored crystal plates are used.

You can make excellent supper sandwiches by grinding up any left-over bits of meat, mixing them with mayonnaise and serving on single slices of hot toast.

Never allow the fire-box of your kitchen range to be more than three-fourths full. When full it checks the draft, a large amount of fuel is consumed and much heat lost.

To make any gruel, add three level tablespoons of cereal-grain to a quart of boiling, slightly salted water. Allow this to cook in a double boiler for four hours. Especially with oatmeal, long cooking enriches and develops the flavor.

KEEP THE LID ON.

Always simmer pot roasts, stews, etc., with the lid on, because the lid keeps in the steam. The action of the steam is almost as important as the hot liquid that cooks the meat.

CUPBOARD

Many persons object to the smell of camphor. If you want to keep a cupboard free of moths, fill a bag with the fragrant crystals now being sold for the purpose, in which the necessary camphor has been skillfully blended with lavender and other sweet odors until it is indiscernible to all but the insect pests.

TEST THE OVEN.

A safe way of testing the heat of the oven for cakes and pastry-making, is to place a sheet of white paper on the oven shelf. If it turns dark brown immediately the oven is too hot for any cooking. If, when it is left in for about four minutes, it becomes a golden brown, the oven is just the right heat for puff pastry and bread.

To be suitable for small cakes and short pastry it should turn light brown in four minutes. If it should turn dark yellow it will be right for large cakes.

HEALTH AND BEAUTY.

Salt is a good remedy for falling hair. Rub it well into the scalp. Also add salt to the water when washing the hair. Pure olive oil rubbed into the scalp every night is also good.

Rub yellow vaseline into the eyebrows every night and brush them with a fine toothbrush or eyebrow brush to train them into shape and promote their gloss.

The great objection to the use of hot towels is that the average person does not follow them up with cold applications and consequently the pores become enlarged.

There is no need to have coarse, red hands in winter. If you keep a slice of lemon and a bottle of good lotion on the sink and use freely every time you dry your hands, this will be prevented.

Eating before going to bed disturbs the sleep. The best sleep is had with the stomach empty. The food may put to sleep at first by diverting the blood from the head, but it will eventually cause trouble. And by going to bed without eating one can do with less sleep.

A ONE MINUTE FACIAL.

A 1-minute facial massage which can be accomplished out of the contents of one's vanity case is now made possible by the new liquid cleansing lotions. All that is required is a pad of absorbent cotton, a liquid cleanser and a minute before the mirror. The cotton is merely wet with the liquid and then passed carefully over every part of the face and neck. The liquid enters deeply into the pores, the skin is thoroughly cleansed, toned and revivified and ready for your favorite powder. The color of the absorbent cotton after this treatment testifies as to the particles of unsuspected dirt lodged in the crevices of the skin.

The liquid cleanser penetrates the pores and floats out this dirt. A delightful tinge tells one that the skin is now clean and therefore healthy. Every cell of the skin has been stimulated and a cool and refreshing feeling ensues. This 1-minute facial, with its skin healing powers, is healthful and beneficial as well as pleasurable.

CURTAIN ROLLERS.

To tighten the springs in curtain rollers, hold the rollers firmly and, with pincers, tighten the end springs.

WINDOW SHADE PUT TO ODD USE

Blackboards of any size are usually quite expensive, but one woman found a way to make one that costs less than 75 cents. She bought an inexpensive dark green window shade and a can of flat black paint. Two coats of the paint were applied to the shade, which when dry became a blackboard that could be rolled up out of the way when not in use.

DICTATES OF FASHION

Bags and scarfs, both fringed, are being shown and are of Rodier fabrics.

Designed to fit the foot without pressure and yet to cling to the heel are new opera pumps of fine handwork.

Evening caps, or hats of metallic fabric are on wide side, or long back lines and resemble peasant caps in many cases.

Sparkling little jackets that fit the princess form and end at hiplines or above are a decorative accessory debutantes favor.

The new lace collar is a narrow long one that ties its ends either in a bow at the V front or else knots them and lets the ends hang.

The purse that is deeper than it is wide is the smart shape. Many are worked out in jewels for the fastenings. Others have them done in silver for a corner decoration.

COIFFURE TURBAN.

For evening wear, the coiffure turban, made of the exact color of one's hair, is quite the latest. It should be made in soft folds that run back to the nape of the neck where a puff of chiffon looks like a snood.

FLOWERS FOR EVENING.

Always when winter gets under way, flowers return to favor for the evening gown. Velvet and silk crepe are used for single large blossoms or a bouquet. Two tones of organdy make another delicate cluster. These are worn at the hip, at the back of the decolletage, or on the left shoulder.

THE ANTIBES SHIRT.

The famous cotton sweater so many youthful sportswomen have adopted is shown this season in round, V and sort necks and may be worn over the skirt or as a tuck-in. It may be had in a wide range of colors, such as sky blue, green, yellow, peach, orchid, red, natural and white.

BLOUSES.

That the blouse is having its day is indicated by the many delightful models available for both dressy and sports suits. Often with the latter the blouse will contribute some harmonizing detail of trimming. For example, a beige and brown tweed mixture fashions a cardigan suit and is accompanied by a beige blouse in canton crepe finished with a jabot edged in brown crepe. Similarly, a broadcloth suit in the new dahlia shade is completed by an eggshell blouse elaborately stitched in diagonal panels and trimmed with side lacing and buttons of matching red.

LAUNDRY HINTS.

Wipe off the rubber rolls of the wringer with a cloth wet with gasoline and they will look like new.

To clean a soiled lace collar rub powdered starch into it and lay aside for several hours. Then brush and shake out.

Before sending clothes to the laundry remove all pins so that those handling the clothes may not be pricked by overlooked pins.

To clean a white or light colored raincoat, wash it with soap and water to which two or three tablespoons of ammonia have been added.

Soapy water should not be used in laundering flannels. Wash them in tepid water, by pressing and working them with the hands. Do not rub them.

To prevent clothes from freezing in the winter, add a handful of salt to the last rinsing water. A teaspoon of borax added to the starch will help keep the starch from freezing out of clothes.

Brush velvet seams gently on the right side, thus lifting the nap and making the seam less conspicuous. Press velvet seams over a velvet pressboard, or steam them cautiously.

TO WASH SILK.

Silk is an animal fibre and must be treated with attention. Be sure to use a purely neutral soap thoroughly dissolved in hot water; be sure water is lukewarm when ready to wash article and do not wash on the right side, remembering to turn your garment inside out so that the friction of laundering does not affect the right side. Another thing to remember is to be sure not to wring silk. Squeeze it gently and spread it on a damp towel and roll, pressing gently until all water particles have left it. Remove and dry.

WASH GLOVES ON HANDS.

All gloves, with the exception of chamois, should be washed on the hands. Use a pure neutral soap and wash the same as if you were washing your hands. If you find that they are overly soiled use some of the dry soap flakes, turning them inside out so that the more stubborn spots may be entirely eliminated.

Never pull your gloves off by the finger tips, roll them off at the wrist using a turkish towel for drying. If you do not have glove frames for drying blow into the gloves and just before they are thoroughly dry pull them carefully into shape. A rotary motion at each finger tip will bring them out perfectly clear.

ROUND PLAYING-CARDS.

The devotee of bridge will be interested in new playing-cards, which are circular in shape. Two packs of the cards in a smart leather case will make an excellent bridge prize.

FLORAL CENTERPIECE.

You can have a lovely oval centerpiece for your table if you plant colored foliage plants. Keep the centers nipped out and they will grow in oval shape, most attractively.

CONCERNING WOMEN

There are 2,000,000 more women than men in Germany.

Denmark, Germany and Poland now have women judges.

Mrs. Philip Snowden, wife of the British chancellor, has barred strong drink from her home at 11 Downing street, London.

The W. C. T. U. in Indiana has been urged to campaign against bare legs and jazz dancing just as strenuously as it fights liquor.

Nearly 50 criminals have been convicted and sent to Atlanta prison by Miss Ellamarye Failor, the first woman assistant federal attorney in New York city.

The Mexican department of interior has ruled women have no political rights in Mexico and hence cannot vote in the presidential elections.

After graduating from law school with highest honors, Miss Sylvia Deane is the youngest Portia to be sworn in as a member of the District Bar association in Washington, D. C.

Mrs. Carter De Haven, actress and divorced wife of the comedian, has asked for a reduction of her alimony to "help out" her children who are now on the stage with their father.

CARE OF UMBRELLAS

A wet umbrella should be closed and stood with the handle down. This prevents rusting of the point where the ribs join, and also prevents stretching of the cloth.

TIME SAVERS

If you keep a package of sticker-labels near at hand and mark clearly everything you put away like boxes of Thanksgiving trimmings or Christmas ribbons, it will save lots of time when you look for them again.

FOR THE DESK

A positive joy for the woman who lives in the country is a small green stand, which holds a tiny pair of scales for weighing letters, and a narrow box of three compartments to hold the necessary stamps.

PAPER NAPKINS

A mother saves much time and laundry by using paper napkins for all breakfasts and for informal suppers, like those on Sunday nights.

RECIPES

Oyster-Potato Pie: To one pint of mashed potatoes add one beaten egg and a little minced onion. Form into cakes. Split the cakes with a sharp knife, lay two or three oysters on the lower part, then replace the top. Bake in a moderately hot oven until the cakes are brown. Garnish with parsley.

Lemon Custard Pie: Mix the yolks of three eggs with two cups of sugar, butter the size of an egg, the juice and grated rind of one lemon, two tablespoons of cornstarch and two pints of boiling water. Place on the fire to boil until thick, stirring constantly, then pour into a baked crust. This is enough for two pies. Beat the whites of the eggs, add slowly two tablespoons of powdered sugar, spread on the pie, and place in the oven to brown.

EDGES ARE FIRST ENVOYS IN PARIS TO LIVE IN U. S. OWNED BUILDING

Walter E. Edge, new United States ambassador to France, shown with his wife, is the first American diplomat to occupy the new government owned and furnished embassy (above).

PARIS, Jan. 5—(AP)—When Mrs. Walter E. Edge, wife of the newly arrived ambassador to France, took over the keys of the embassy she started fom scratch, undiplomatically speaking.

She is the envied hostess of one of the finest embassies in Paris and the first wife of an American ambassador to France to start her official career in a government owned and furnished embassy.

It is a stately house in the Trocadero quarter, is ideally situated and beautifully furnished. It is large enough to house the ambassador, ambassadoress and three little ambassadrettes without crowding.

There is a garden and windows of the drawing rooms look out on the green slopes of the Trocadero terrace extending down to the Seine.

Since the arrival of the Edge children—6, 4 and 7 months old—Americans in Paris feel that the Yankee family tradition is represented at the embassy.

Callers who present themselves at the big front entrance hear the shrieks and laughter of children at play in the adjoining garden.

Frequently a shining black perambulator is parked alongside the graveled driveway, indication that the youngest Edge is about to take the air of the exclusive walks around the Avenue d'Iena.

The new ambassador and his wife apparently share the white house belief that naturalness and informality should dominate the home, no matter how official.

The new ambassadress, energetic, enthusiastic and out-door as to personality, was born Camilla Sewall of Bath, Me. She comes of a sea-faring, shipbuilding family. Washington reckoned her one of its most successful hostesses during Ambassador Edge's term in the senate.

Mrs. Edge's official duties are lightened by the fact that the French government is largely carried on by bachelors. President Gaston Doumergue, Premier Andre Tardieu and Aristide Briand, minister of foreign affairs, are all unmarried.

CHILD EXPERTS DIVIDE ON PLAY

WASHINGTON, Jan. 5—(AP)—Whether it is better for little Johnny to climb trees at his own sweet will or be "organized" is being determined by 50 men and women who are part of President Hoover's conference on child health and protection.

They comprise the committee on recreation and physical education. At a meeting in Washington they discussed the pros and cons of wild free play or play under direction.

Women took a prominent part in the meeting.

They kept bobbing up, a woman in brown, a woman in blue and one in gray, eagerly telling what they had learned.

Some just sat back and visualized the childhood of the man who started this whole gigantic scheme for child betterment—the president of the United States.

Only a few blocks away in the white house now, he once was trotting along railroad tracks picking up rocks, taking a dive in the old swimming hole and hunting rabbits.

Toward him the advocates of greater freedom in play without too much organization eloquently pointed. Others who favor municipal or school supervision of athletic activities showed that these are developments of recent years and that boys and girls are bound to benefit from wise direction.

The meeting was only one of dozens of committees and subcommittees being held all over the country. The big machine started by the president, with the objective of brighter eyes and rosier cheeks, keener minds and happier hearts for American children, has started to whir. Bright sparks of ideas from the minds of 600 experts are shooting in all directions.

WOMAN INURED TO MICE; HER HUSBAND RAISES 'EM

LONDON, Jan. 6.—(AP)—A mouse more or less means nothing to Mrs. A. Tuck of the village of Rayleigh, Essex. She lives within 100 yards of 100,000 of them.

Mr. Tuck is a mouse farmer of European reputation. When eminent scientists want a mouse— or 1,000 mice—they send to Mr. Tuck, and he supplies black mice, white mice, piebald mice, blue mice, brown mice, gold mice, silver mice, or mice of almost any other color except purple, which he has not yet succeeded in breeding.

The mice, when at home, live in comfortable grass-line boxes stored in several large sheds.

Mr. Tuck is happy in his profession, and Tiger and Bob, the two cats attached to the establishment, are, if possible, happier still.

Mrs. Tuck is non-committal.

"My husband didn't tell me about it until after we were maried," she says, "and it's too late to do anything now."

Guiding Your Child

By Mrs. Agnes Lyne

Cock-Sure

Garda has never known anything but success.

She was graduated from high school at the head of her class, and was voted the prettiest girl and the most populra.

Whatever she attempts she does so well that praise cannot be withheld. She has ever learned to conduct herself with the appearance of modesty. Only those who know her more than superficially realize that she is hard, vain, cock-sure and a little cruel.

What can be done with a girl who meets no checks to such faults in the natural course of her school experience? Success is the most effective teacher and success tells her loudly that she is exactly what she ought to be.

There is only one way to modify the hardness of such a girl and that is to place her in an environment which will tax her abilities to the utmost. She needs the challenge of diffcult tasks which she will find in plenty outside the limited world of her school girl triumphs.

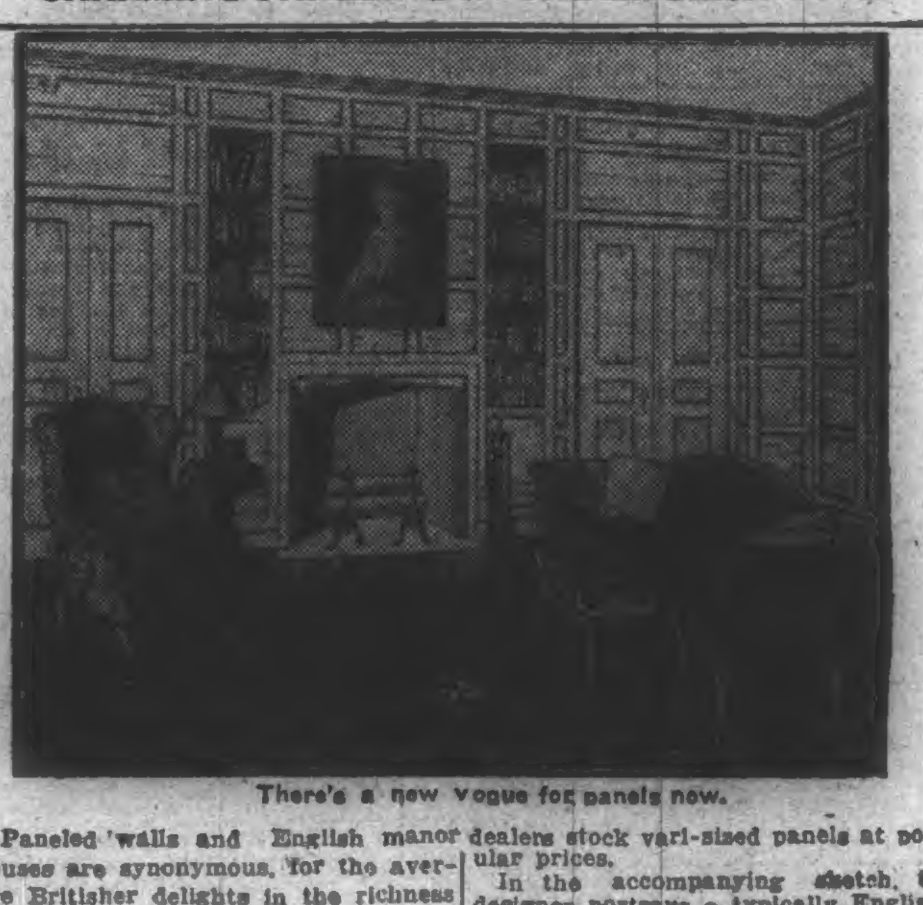
At college, for instance, she would find herself in a group where she would not so easily rank first, where she would be rated by people of superior intelligence and maturer judgment.

Parents blessed with sons and daughters who have become hard and vain may comfort themselves with the realization that the more strenuous competition of college and even more the experience of the first job will do what no amount of lecturing can to give these young people a proper sense of proportion.

Rugs From Orient

WASHINGTON, Jan. 5.—(AP)—Persia, China, Turkey and India are the largest exporters of rugs and carpets to the United States, says the department of commerce.

CHARMING PANELING IN THE ENGLISH TYPE



There's a new vogue for panels now.

Paneled walls and English manor houses are synonymous, for the average Britisher delights in the richness of such a background.

This is a perfect foil for the innumerable ancestral portraits, draperies and general rich effect so greatly desired in such a home. For generations the British hewed and fashioned oak into furniture and rich interiors until, with the reign of Queen Anne, walnut was introduced from Italy and France; and thus we have this period of furniture bearing the name of this queen.

It is a well known fact that paneled interiors enhance in beauty and value with the years, as well as surviving the passing fancies of various times. With the renewed interest in various important houses of paneled interiors, one finds that many fine examples of this type have been shipped from England to have a new home in houses of the English manor type on Long Island and elsewhere.

Thus we find decorators alert to this new trend and consequently are featuring the use of pine and walnut panels in smaller apartments and suburban homes—in fact, there has been such a demand for inexpensive paneling that the majority of the better dealers stock vari-sized panels at popular prices.

In the accompanying sketch, the designer portrays a typically English-inspired living room with simple paneled walls in walnut. The fireplace is inviting and decorative. Note the attractive handling of the paneling so as to eliminate the overmantel and the fine portrait substituted for it, so as form a central unit.

Deep recessed bookshelves on either side afford a nice balance to the fireplace as well as a harmonizing detail to the entire group. Well designed double-doors on either side of the fireplace reflect skilfull paneling treatment and at the same time emphasize the formal quality so desirable in the small apartment or home.

Andirons of polished steel or hammered brass with other fireplace equipment complete this fireplace group.

In contrast to the traditions of the paneled walls, the floor covering of linoleum, in a bold block pattern of marbleized design, suggests again the formal quality.

The particular charm of the furniture group is due no doubt to the well selected pieces in the Queen Anne period. The graceful proportions of the sofa are repeated in the wing chair

PAPER TO BE OWNED BY 1,000,000 WOMEN

LONDON, Jan. 6.—(AP)—One million women will publish England's newest newspaper—a woman's daily—if the shares are sold according to plan.

Several hundred business and professional women already have become interested in the scheme. In its simplest terms the idea is this:

One million women each contribute $5 to the capital stock of the company, and in addition become subscribers to the paper.

That starts the daily off with a bankroll of $5,000,000 and a paid subscription list of 1,000,000—enough to qualify it as an outstanding advertising medium, according to the promoter.

Each shareholder will have one vote, and a central committee elected by the shareholders will control the policy of the paper, hire and fire editors and so on, the aim being to achieve "real democratic control."

Although it is to be published primarily for women and in the interest of woman, the paper is to have a man as its editor in chief, and a mixed staff of men and women writers.

The new daily will be an "all-around newspaper" as well as one appealing particularly to women, it is promised, but it will have nothing to do with party politics.

"OFF-THE-HEAD" HAT IS NEWEST IN PARIS

PARIS, Jan. 6.—(AP)—The correct way to wear the latest hat Paris produces is on the side of your head with half your hair showing.

It's the new "off-the-head" model.

The style exposes a smooth marcel on one side only. The other side of the picture is a cascade of ribbon, felt, or draped velvet a most touching the shoulder.

At the shop where the half-cocked hats originate blonds are advised to order black hats and brunets are outfitted with black hats with white incrustrations which set off their tresses.

The "off-the-head" hat is the ultimate development of the "off-the-face" model it seems.

The left side of the hair is usually the one which shows, the cut-out in the crown beginning above the left eyebrow and terminating behind the left ear. But there are many variations.

GIRL BOATING ENTHUSIAST IS TOWN'S HARBOR MASTER

She is Stella Gale, aged 21, a yachting enthusiast with an unusually broad knowledge of tides, winds and seamanship.

For the last four years she has been working for an engineering company here, but much of her spare time was spent aboard her motorboat or on the deck of a racing yacht.

When the veteran harbor master of Paignton died, Miss Gale applied for the job, and her qualifications were such that the directors of the harbor company felt justified in throwing all precedent overboard and giving the position to a girl.

NO GALOSHES, THANKS, FOR CHIC PARISIENNES

PARIS, Jan. 5.—(AP)—There is no word for galoshes in French so Paris has adopted "snow-boots" as the correct term for overshoes for winter sports.

There is no other justification than winter sports for galoshes, to the French woman's mind.

Only foreign women wear overshoes or rubbers in Paris on wet days. French women stay at home or take a taxicab when it rains. Failing that, they prefer getting their feet wet to covering them with waterproofs.

ADJUSTABLE BRACELET FASTENS SPORT GLOVE

PARIS, Jan. 5—(AP)—There are leather bracelets with pendant ornaments of wood or crystal attached, to some of the new sport gloves.

The bracelet gloves are the pull-on type. The bracelet is adjustable and takes the place of a wrist strap.

MAYOR'S JOB HELD SAME AS MOTHER'S

WATFORD, England, Jan. 5—(AP)—A woman who believes that being a mayor is the same job as being the mother of a family—only on a larger scale—has been elected mayor of Watford.

Mrs. A. F. Broad is a firm believer in the maxim that a woman's first duty in life is to her husband and her children, but—

"When she has done her job in the home," says Mrs. Broad, "then is the time for her to step into public life. A town is only a family on a larger scale."

This woman mayor, who is a grandmother, has assured her townspeople that she will not interfere with anything to do with roads or any scheme having engineering technicalities about which she knows nothing.

"I shall give my attention to those things only that I know something about," she says. "Others I shall leave to experts. My concern will be the things that affect the ordinary man, his wife and their children."

MADAME CURIE IRKS FRENCH SUFFRAGISTS

PARIS, Jan. 5—(AP)—Mme. Marie Curie is not a woman's woman, assert suffrage workers anxious to enlist her patronage for the cause of votes for women.

Not only does the famous lady co-discoverer of radium refuse to lend her name to any feminist propaganda, but she consistently fails to reply to letters addressed to her by feminist organizations according to leaders of the French League for Women's Rights.

France's greatest woman concerns herself with helping women only when they are engaged in her own field.

Then her assistance is intellectual rather than material and she only tenders it to women whose brains and determination have enabled them to help themselves.

GEN. MITCHELL'S DAUGHTER LURED BY FOREIGN SERVICE

With another Washington girl, Miss Eleanor Wells, she is preparing to crash gates which have proven quite difficult for women.

No women succeeded in passing the most recent foreign service examination, although two qualified in the one held last spring and now are occupying posts in Geneva and Beirot, Syria.

Miss Mitchell lives in Washington with her mother, Mrs. Caroline Mitchell.

FANCY FIXIN'S FIGURE FOR FEMININE FLIERS

LOS ANGELES, Jan. 5—(AP)— Airports and flying schools throughout the country are introducing blue and tan drapes and dressing tables into the barren atmosphere of the landing fields.

This is because of the number of women pilots and passengers. One Los Angeles flying school has Navajo rugs, cream walls and an open fireplace to soothe the feminine air voyagers.

MUFF AND SCARF MADE IN ONE-PIECE NOVELTY

PARIS, Jan. 5—(AP)—A specialist in sport and travel clothes exhibits a fur-lined wool scarf with a turned up end which forms a muff.

The material and fur lining are supposed to match the coat or winter sport costume with which the scarf is worn.

Frenchman Buys Six Ties Yearly

PARIS, Jan. 5—(AP)—The Frenchman buys an average of six neckties a year, trade statistics show, and spends an average of 90 cents apiece for them. He would buy more except for the working man's habit of wearing a scarf instead of a cravat.

HIRES, MULLIN AND DALY MAY BE BARRED FROM RING FOR LIFE

CHICAGO, Jan. 5.—(AP)—Charles rthur the Great) Shires, Chicago hite Sox first baseman, who recent- essayed the role of a pugilist, to- ght faced the possibility of ostra- m by organized boxing.

Not only was Charles Arthur in dan- r in forever being barred by the inois commission and the 31 other ates holding membership in the Na- nal Boxing association, but his man- er, Nessie Blumenthal, Promoter Jim ullen, Dangerous Dan Daly of Cleve- nd, and the latter's manager, were a like predicament.

Just while Shires was endeavoring extricate himself from charges that s manager had asked a Detroit op- nent to "go into the tank," or "take dive," for his last week, which re- lted in Shires being suspended by e Michigan State Boxing commis- n and the National Boxing associ- ion, Jim Gerry, alias James Gary, as Dangerous Dan Daly of Cleve- nd, Shires' first opponent as a pro- sional heavyweight boxer was re- rted to have told in detail how he d voluntarily folded up for Shires in s than one round.

When this charge reached Major neral John V. Clinnin, chairman of e Illinois State Athletic commission, e latter immediately ordered an in- stigation and tomorrow will summon omoter Mullen, Shires, Blumenthal, ly and the latter's manager, before e commission.

General Clinnin said that life sus- nsion would result if the charge is oved.

In an interview printed in the Ohio ate Journal of Columbus, Ohio, to- y, Daly, or Gerry, or Gary, outlined w he had been offered the match r Shires' premiere in the White ty arena at Chicago, December 9, and d gone to Chicago where he was told forget his real name for a few days. e interview states that Daly was eated "like a king," given new othes, and taken on a sight-seeing ip about Chicago.

It was on this sight-seeing trip, ac- rding to the interview, that Daly ld he was taken to the hospital ward the Cook county jail where he saw number of battered men, whom, he ld, looked as though they had been ken for a ride and slugged.

Then, Daly is quoted as saying, he as told he was to "take a dive," and at he would be given $150 instead $100, as he had been promised for e fight.

Shires won the fight in 21 seconds a knockout.

Promoter Mullens pointed out that ires-George Trafton fight, as his swer to the charges. Trafton gave ires a thorough beating in a five und engagement at White City. this as Shires' second battle.

"If I had been arranging divine acts r Shires would I have matched him ith Trafton?" Mullen asked. "Why, y best meal ticket of 1929 was punch- l out entirely when Trafton licked m."

VON PORAT-UZCUDUN BOUT TOPS METROPOLITAN CARD

NEW YORK, Jan. 5—(AP)—Jackie Fields will make two starts this week in Philadelphia and Chicago but the heavyweight fracas in Madison Square Garden Friday night between Otto Von Porat and Paulino Uzcudun will stir up more public interest than the welterweight champion's pair of non-title bouts.

Fields meets Alf Ros, burly Spanish welterweight, in the head-liner of the weekly Philadelphia arena show tomorrow night and will battle Tony Vacarelli of New York in another non-titular match at the Chicago stadium Friday night.

Supporting the Fields-Ros go, will be two ten rounders, one involving Danny Kramer, Philadelphia southpaw, and Pete Zivic of Pittsburgh, and the other matching Harry Kid Brown of Philadelphia against Gaston Lecadre of France.

At the Chicago stadium, the Fields-Vacarelli match is supported by a ten rounder between King Tut, Minneapolis lightweight, and Bruce Flowers, New Rochelle, N. Y., Negro, and another between Benny Bass, Philadelphia junior lightweight, and Danny Delmont of Chicago.

Madison Square Garden's heavyweight show may mark the end of Paulino's career among the front rank contenders for Gene Tunney's vacated crown. The Basque woodchopper has shown signs of going back in his recent starts while Von Porat, a terrific hitter, seems to be on the upgrade.

Marty Gallagher, Washington heavyweight, meets Johnny Grosso, New York, in the ten round semi-final and Phil Mercurio, New York, battles Fred Lonhart of Spokane, Wash., in the first ten.

Other bouts on the National schedule include:

Tuesday—At St. Louis, Eddie Shea, Chicago, vs. Fay Kosky, San Francisco, featherweights, ten rounds; at Portland, Ore., Young Firpo, Burke, Idaho, vs. Ray Pelky, Oakland, light heavyweights, ten rounds.

Wednesday—At New York, Coliseum, Ted Sandwina, Iowa, vs. Jack Gagnon, Boston, heavyweights, and George Larocco, New York, vs. Andy Mitchell, Long Beach, Calif., heavyweights, ten rounds.

Friday—At Omaha, Tommy Grogan, Omaha, vs. Joey Kaufman, New York, lightweights, ten rounds.

PENN STARTS LEAGUE WITH WIN OVER YALE

NEW YORK, Jan. 5.—(AP)—Court stars of the University of Pennsylvania, seeking their third consecutive eastern intercollegiate basketball league championship, have inaugurated the 1979 season with a hard-won victory over Yale.

Opening the league season at Philadelphia last night, the Quakers eked out a 27 to 24 triumph but found the Elis surprisingly strong. Penn found the Bulldogs easy prey in the first game of last year's season, winning by the one-sided count of 35 to 19, but Elmer Ripley's 1929 Yale edition was another story.

Penn led at the end of the first half, 14 to 13, but had to overcome a 19-16 lead in the second half to win. McNiff sent in to relieve Magner at guard, clinched the victory late in the game with two field goals and a foul.

Although beaten, Yale showed plenty of strength and should provide plenty of trouble for every other team in the league.

Two games are on this week's schedule, both on Saturday night. Dartmouth will meet Pennsylvania at Philadelphia, while Cornell is taking on Princeton on the Tiger home court.

Church League Tonight.

Tonight at 8.15 sharp, at the Y. M. C. A., the Trinity Methodist team, who have played the least number of games in the Church league, will face the chance of going into second place and also taking a game from the Gammas. A win by the former will break the Gamma's two year winning streak, and provide an opening for any one of the other teams.

The second game, starting about nine o'clock, will see the Central Baptists, who, after losing their first two games have put on a fine exhibition of basketball, to break even in four starts, clash with the Brothers of Joseph, runners up.

The league standing after last Monday's games:

LOCAL Y. M. C. A. FIVE NOSES OUT ALTEX IN LAST FEW SECONDS

The Y Seniors avenged an early season defeat Saturday night at the Y gym by halting the Altex five of the New London City league, 47 to 44, with one of the most thrilling finishes seen in local basketball in many years, the victory coming in the last seconds of play on baskets by Enos Eccleston and Tommy Lynch.

The New London team led during the few minutes just prior to this spurt by one point, the score being 44 to 43. With the timer's watch ticking away the last seconds, Eccleston, the right guard of the local outfit took a pass and let a hurried shot go from the side. The ball hit the rim, balanced for a second and then dropped down through. This made the score 45 to 44 in the local team's favor. Immediately on the next tapoff Lynch, the right forward, free under the basket took another pass and scored an easy two more points just before the whistle sounded. Needless to say, there was much excitement during this time.

In the Seniors' first game, back in November, the New London outfit scored a one-point victory and but for the last seconds spurt of the Demarest-boys would have had had another Saturday evening. Play was nip and tuck through most of the time. The [illegible] led at half time by 24 to 20 and held this margin until after five minutes before the end in the last quarter when the Whalers fought into their one-point lead.

Tommy Lynch, the Y's freshman forward who is playing his first year with the "big leaguers" was the leading scorer with 15 points, closely trailed by Aubrey Brown, at right forward, and Les Pingree. The team showed more scoring punch Saturday with the return of Brown after a layoff of two weeks but in the New London aggregation they met a foe worthy of their steel who were able to give as much as they took. The visitors, as the name would imply, are mostly former Chapman Tech players, who have starred on the successful court teams of that school. Farnham, right forward, was leading scorer with 12 points and Bernie Hewitt and Mortensen had 11 each.

This was the Seniors' first victory in three starts as they had lost to Bridgeport Y last Saturday and Heller Bros. Wednesday. They will get down to work again for a continuation of the State Y league tussles and with Brown back in harness to team up with Lynch at the forwards, Capt. Harris at center and Pingree and Eccleston, the Taftville guards, hope to jump back into first place in the race. They are now tied with Bridgeport for second position.

Scenic Sayge

Didja ever see a soccer game?

Well, I saw one yesterday and I know just as much about it now as I did before. They say you gotta be a Englishman to enjoy it and I guess that's right.

The qualifications for a soccer player are to own a clean suit of B. V. D.'s and a pair of old shoes. And the B. V. D.'s don't have to be so clean at that.

Of course you gotta be able to use your head but not to think with, it's simply to bat the ball with. And what those soccer players do with their heads is nobody's business.

But yesterday I saw one of the most unique soccer uniforms that I think that ever appeared on a soccer field. It was a combination of B. V. D.'s and longs. Yesterday was a cold day and this player was taking no chances of getting rheumatism in his knees.

This player before donning his soccer uniform had forgotten to remove his winter heavies and had put his soccer make-up on top of it. Boy, that fellow sure was a sight for sore eyes.

Anybody that didn't get a kick outa that make-up was without a sense of humor. But the game itself was a wow if a soccer game can be called that.

If you've got big feet and can sling 'em around and don't care what happens to 'em you can be a soccer player. A coupla kicks in the shins and one on the jaw don't mean a thing to the real dyed-in-the-wool soccer player.

But at the same time the game requires plenty of skill and stamina and if you understand the game and its fine points you can get quite a lot of enjoyment out of it. Don't miss seeing the next one.

Say, I see where an English paper is to be printed in luminous ink so it can be read at night. Ought to sell big in Scotland, just think how much electricity could be saved.

PHI DELTA NU WINS FROM FITCH SCHOOL

Friday evening the Phi Delta Nu of the United Congregational church defeated the Robert Fitch high school of Poquonnock Bridge, Groton, 33 to 9. The first quarter was featured by defensive playing by both teams, the score being 6-3 in favor of the Deltas. Fitch rallied to bring the score to 9-7 within a few minutes of the half and the 200 people in the auditorium went wild, but Hayden and Holden scored to put the game out of reach. The score at the half was P. D. N. 13, Robert Fitch 7. Armstrong ran up 12 points, and completely sunk the high school in the third quarter, leaving the score 24 to 9. The defensive work of the guards proved the basis of Fitch's low score. This game made the second time that the Deltas have played a brilliant game that seems to be lacking in their home games, and won from the high school. The summary:

Reds Beat Arrows

PROVIDENCE, R. I., Jan. 5.—(AP)—The Rhode Island Reds continued their undefeated play here this afternoon at the expense of the Philadelphia Arrows, the score being 1 to 0. The Reds scored midway through the first period when Chapman passed to Gagnon on a face-off near the goal. Chagnon shot the puck past Roberts. During the last two periods the teams battled about even, each considerably tired from their games of last night.

MILLER FINISHES IN TIE FOR TENTH PLACE IN LONG BEACH TOURNEY

LONG BEACH, Cal., Jan. 5.—(AP)—Ploughing through 36 holes of almost impossible golf, of which the morning round was played in a downpour of rain, Olin Dutra of Santa Monica, Cal., and Joe Kirkwood, Philadelphia trick shot artist, today shared the winning of the fifth annual $3,500 Long Beach open golf tournament.

Kirkwood finished with a strong afternoon 18 holes, which saw him set the dazzling pace of 70, two under par, on the soggy, water-soaked course, after a disastrous 78 in the morning. He had qualified with a 68.

Dutra was one over perfect figures on his final round, after slipping to a 74 during the morning's rain. His remarkable 67 for the qualifying round had tied him for second place among the 88 qualifiers.

The torrent of rain not only blasted the hopes of several leaders of the field, but dampened the ardor of some of the chosen contenders. Wild Bill Mehlhorn, New York, and Craig Wood, Bloomfield, N. J., were among those who withdrew from play before they finished.

Charles Seaver, 17-year-old Los Angeles prep school star, who headed the qualifiers with a 66, one short of the course record, dropped to an 82 during the morning. He finished one over par to tie for fifth place with Johnny Farrell, former national open champion, Charles Guest of Los Angeles, and W. H. Cox of Brooklyn. Seaver won first amateur honors, beating out George Von Elm of Detroit by three strokes. Von Elm had rounds of 70-80-74, for a total of 224. Johnny Dawson, Chicago amateur, shot a 226, with rounds of 73-78-75.

Dutra and Kirkwood received $800 each for their share of the spoils, and Clark collected $400 for second place.

Horton Smith, young Joplin, Mo., pro, favorite for the tournament, was caught in the height of this morning's rain and turned in an 81 for the round. His total of 232 put him entirely out of the money.
